KUHN WINS OVER SECRET SIX

HOOVER MOVED BY BRITISH PLEA; CONGRESS ISN'T

French Note Cites "Promise."

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 2.—[Special.]—President Hoover will put up to congress the pleas of America's debtors for revision of the 11 billion dollar war debts and immediate suspension of payments thereon.

This was learned following the meeting today of the cabinet, which discussed the debt revision question, and the receipt of a second note from France. The French note in effect calls upon Mr. Hoover to make good promises to readjust the war debts commensurately with reduction of German reparations.

Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson and Secretary of the Treasury Ogden L. Mills discussed the matter with the President for two hours later in the day.

May Send Emissary to Congress.

When the cabinet members emerged from the White House Secretary Stimson said that the President might designate an official to submit the debt question to congress. Whether the President's delegate, who is likely to be Mr. Mills, will go before congress in joint session or submit his argument to the committees of each house has not been determined.

The President and a majority, if not all, members of the cabinet, it appears, have been profoundly interested by the British note, which argued that intergovernmental debts are standing in the way of world economic recovery. They are opposed to complete cancellation of the debts, but they believe that at least a temporary revision of the terms covering the period of the depression would be to the best interest of the United States as well as the debtors.

The Hoover administration, however, on top of being repudiated overwhelmingly in the recent election on general terms, now finds itself repudiated specifically on the debt issue by virtue of the overwhelming opposition in congress to any modification of the obligations.

Will Ask New Debt Board.

The President and his official advisers reached the conclusion that the executive can do no less than submit the debtors' pleas to congress, which has reserved to itself the exclusive right to deal with the borrowers. Mr Hoover therefore contemplates recommending, either through his emissary or in a special message, the reconstitution of the war debts funding commission to consider the debtors' representations and all other views bearing on the question of revision.

The present temper of congress is such as to indicate that it will hear the President's recommendation in stony silence and proceed to bury it in a convenient pigeonhole.

This will result not only because of opposition to revision of the terms but because of a disposition to pass the whole question over to the Roosevelt administration in order to allow the new President to deal with it in accord with views differing importantly from Mr. Hoover's. The lame duck executive and the lame duck state department are counting for no more in this situation than a lame duck congressman.

French Note Arrives.

While Capitol hill, having read the British note of yesterday, was fairly raining declarations against yielding to the entreaties of the debtors, the French note, delivered to Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson last night, was spread before the President and the cabinet and shortly afterward made public.

The French steered wide of the economic arguments for cancellation as presented in the British note and specialized on bringing Mr. Hoover's chickens home to roost. They recalled the statement issued by President Hoover and Premier Laval after their conversations in 1931 in which it was said:

"In so far as intergovernmental obligations are concerned we recognize that prior to the expiration of the Hoover year of postponement some agreement regarding them may be necessary covering the period of business depression as to the terms and conditions of which the two governments make all reservations. The initiative in this matter should be taken at an early date by the European powers principally concerned within the framework of the agreements existing prior to July 1, 1931."

Employing the legal term "novation," the French take the position

Boy Slayer Found "Explosive."

A several thousand word history was submitted to Chief Justice John Prystalski in Criminal court yesterday on the mental, emotional, and physical life of Bertrand Arnold, the 16 year old Riverside high school boy who beat to death his stepmother's mother, Mrs. Ellen Saxe, and tossed her body in a cistern.

The report, drawn up by Dr. Henry R. Hoffman, director of the Criminal court behavior clinic, a[illegible] assistant, Dr. Harry A. Paskind, w[illegible] the court's guide, Judge Prystalski [illegible]cated, in determining the proper punishment for the youth, who is due to be sentenced today. Bert has pleaded guilty to murder.

Boy Held Legally Sane.

Nowhere in the report do the alienists state any positive opinion on the boy's sanity or insanity. Commenting informally after the report had been made public, however, Dr. Hoffman said the conclusion to be drawn was that the boy knew the difference between right and wrong when he wielded a hammer on Mrs. Saxe's head on Nov. 18, and hence is legally sane.

In the concluding paragraphs the alienists liken the crime to an "emotional explosion," ignited when Mrs. Saxe refused Bert the use of her car for a church dance. They declare there was no premeditation.

"On Friday, Nov. 18," the report states, "the patient wanted his grandmother's car in order to take his friends to a dance in order to impress them. His grandmother refused him permission. This refusal may have seemed to her insignificant, but to the patient it was an unexpected frustration of important plans and desires. As a result he flew into uncontrollable rage and with no premeditation struck his grandmother on the head with a hammer, causing her death."

The "Explosive" Aspect.

The "explosive" aspect is treated as follows:

"The previous events in his life, day dreaming, a continuous desire for popularity, and his unstable emotional makeup, may be compared to gunpowder; the continued refusal of his parents and his grandmother for the use of the car could be compared to a fuse, and the slap, or tap, his grandmother gave him when she refused him the car was the match which caused this emotional explosion which culminated in the tragedy."

In connection with his career in Riverside High school, however, the alienists treat of erotic practices which the boy fell into, and which resulted in partially debauching him. Judge Prystalski ordered this phase of the report suppressed until the full history becomes part of the court record today, pointing out that it carries libelous implications regarding some of Bert's associates in school.

Found Typical Boy.

For the rest the alienists found Bert a typical American boy, somewhat frail but not unhealthy, sprung from apparently superior stock, living harmoniously with his father, stepmother, half brother, and half sister in the quiet suburb of Riverside.

Bert's mother, the alienists point out, died at the age of 24 years, three weeks after his birth. They found that she was sprung of an excellent family, attended a finishing school, and although rather frail, was in good health and was even tempered and well poised.

In infancy and up to the age of 5 years the motherless Bert was shifted from one relative to another, being first with the maternal grandmother and later with a maternal aunt, his father being at this time in the army.

The family moved to Riverside when Bert was 7 years old, the report states. In elementary school his department was fair, his grade in composition and arithmetic consistently poor, and his other grades average. His marks followed about the same trend in high school, the report says.

Bert was not a disciplinary problem. He got along well with his school mates, played in the school band, entered into debating and other activities sponsored by the dean of men, and was rather "spasmodic" in his studies. If prodded he accomplished his work in a satisfactory manner.

Miss Margaret Sadly Nurses Number Eight

When Margaret Mary Collins, who is now 28 years old and a platinum blonde [in the past she has been brunette or henna-haloed as the style might be] chooses to mourn there are seven graves for her to visit. In each lies a gangster whom she once called her man.

No. 1 was Jack Sheehy, who shot a waiter and a café manager about ten years ago because Margaret Mary's cracked ice wasn't served fast enough. About the time he made his meaning clear a policeman shot him through the heart, with the girl looking on.

Dion O'Banion Is Next.

The unofficial widow was quickly consoled. Dion O'Banion, the bootlegger florist, was her sweetie for a while. He was erased from life, and Irving [Sonny] Schlig, another bootlegger, basked in her smiles until he, too, was killed. Johnny Phillips, gangster, shot up a café on Broadway one night because his lady friend—it was Margaret Mary—was being slighted, and a detective killed him when he resisted arrest.

There grew up a tradition among the gangsters and gunmen that Margaret Mary was just naturally bad luck. They called her the Kiss of Death. If one got too friendly with her he died by bullets. It wasn't exactly her fault, but then only results matter and her mortality record was high.

But tough men like David Jerus [Jew Boy Bates] and Eugene [Red] McLaughlin laughed at superstition wooed the rather wistful looking Margaret Mary and, like the others, died. Just a few months ago, on June 16, Samuel Katz was shot down by policemen when he tried to resist arrest in a room at 208 North Wells street. He was No. 7 on Margaret Mary's list of love and death.

Police Find Margaret Again.

Yesterday Police Sergeants Thomas M. Ellis and Adolph Weber went to the Mother Cabrini hospital to visit Sol Feldman, 27 years old, 2125 Pierce avenue. Feldman was shot and seriously wounded on Wednesday by South Park Policeman Ted O'Barr after he had stolen a fur coat from a window at 318 South Michigan avenue.

Laving Feldman's brow with ice water and murmuring loving words to him was a woman. It was Margaret Mary Collins, who said she was a manicure girl and lived at 3516 South Cicero avenue.

At the hospital Feldman's condition was described as critical.

CLEANERS SLASH THEIR PRICE TO 49C A GARMENT

Beginning next Monday the price of cleaning any dress, suit, or overcoat will be 49 cents, and those 4 cents are missing in about duplicate with the Chicago Association of Cleaners and Dyers, Inc. This is a reduction of more than 50 per cent from the previous net price of $1.

Announcement of the reduction was made last night at a meeting of officers of the organization at the Hotel Knickerbocker. The reduction is spread over Chicago and suburbs, and will take in most of the cleaning establishments, the association membership comprising 90 per cent of the owners here. The new rate of 49 cents includes collection and delivery.

The reduction is made, Secretary Walter Crowley explained, in order to keep as many workers employed as possible, to compete with out of town and local chain shop cleaners, and to encourage a larger patronage. According to Smitty Abrams, a director, the out of town competition has been especially effective, between 10,000 and 15,000 garments being sent to outside concerns every day because of lower prices.

CIVIL WAR VET SAD; PINOCHLE PLAYERS SCARCE

Minneapolis, Minn., Dec. 2.—(AP)—The younger generation faced another accusation today. They have failed, alas, to provide the world with enough "good, rough, touch" pinochle players.

Capt. Charles Lockwood, 90, "last man" of the Last Man's club of civil war veterans, offered the criticism. Lack of competition and skillful partners contributed to his decision to leave his home at Chamberlain, S. D., and enter the soldiers' home here.

CONVICT 5 OF GRAFT IN CITY LIGHT CONTRACT

Harry A. Johnson, president of the Electrical Contracting company, and four suspended city employes were found guilty by a jury before Judge Thomas J. Lynch in the Criminal court this morning of conspiracy to defraud the city on a lighting contract under the last previous administration.

The jury fixed Johnson's sentence and that of John Muerling, former chief electrical engineer, at two years in the penitentiary and fined them $5,000 each. Eugene A. Quinn, former chief contract inspector; Frank Wargoske, former custodian of the south side yards, and Joseph Duffy, former record custodian, were merely found guilty and fined $100, but with the recommendation that they serve one year in the county jail.

Jurors Out 10 Hours.

The verdict was read about 1:30 o'clock, ten hours after the jurors went out to deliberate. Some confusion existed at first because of their written recommendations on the verdict forms. In the cases of Johnson and Muerling it was recommended on the bottom of the pages that the two year penalties be served in the jail rather than the penitentiary.

Should Judge Lynch uphold the verdicts on Dec. 17, the date for a motion for a new trial, he would have to send Johnson and Muerling to prison despite the county jail suggestion. In the cases of the other three, however, he need not follow the recommendation for a year's sentence in the jail.

The case was prosecuted by Assistant State's Attorneys Charles Mueller and Charles Lounsbury and was the second trial of the five men. The first ended in a disagreement last June. Briefly the state showed that Johnson's electrical company had been awarded a contract for $1,053,000 to install 6,995 light posts.

Paid to Overlook Flaws.

It was alleged that the complete specifications of the contract had not been fulfilled and that the ex-city employés were on the company's pay roll for five months. Each man, it was charged, received $300 a month for four months and $250 for the fifth month for a total of $1,450 each.

In return, it was charged, they overlooked many flaws in the fulfillment of the specifications. The checks were made out to the men under fictitious names, but their indorsements were proved by handwriting experts. The four former city workers admitted the indorsements and offered no defense. It was charged that the alleged graft in the contract cost the city about $250,000.

Repeal Vote Due Monday; Suspend Rule

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 2.—[Special.]—There will be a vote on a repeal resolution in the house of representatives next Monday, Speaker John N. Garner promised tonight, despite the fact that earlier in the day the house judiciary committee refused to countenance the presentation of the Garner resolution.

In view of the committee's action the speaker will recognize Representative Henry T. Rainey of Illinois, Democratic floor leader, to offer the resolution and move that the rules be suspended for its passage.

"No man can say that I have ever failed to keep faith with my constituency," said Mr. Garner, the Vice President elect. "In this case my constituency is the entire American people and I intend to keep faith with them."

The speaker was more optimistic than ever concerning the prospects of victory for the resolution, with its mandate of outright repeal and ratification by state conventions within seven years.

Depends on Republicans.

He predicted that the Texas, Georgia, Missouri, and Maryland delegations among others would vote almost solidly in favor of adoption.

"The number of Democratic members who will vote for the resolution is marvelous," Mr. Garner said. "It depends largely now on the Republican action."

Republican wet leaders like Representative Fred A. Britten of Illinois have promised the Democrats the help of at least 120 Republican votes. If that many are forthcoming those who have made a check of the house membership believe the passage of the resolution is assured.

The 13 to 6 vote by which the judiciary committee—sitting in unofficial session—defeated a motion to authorize its chairman, Representative Hatton W. Sumners [Dem., Tex.], to offer the resolution, was built of several factors.

For years the judiciary committee has been packed with drys, thanks to the watchful heed of the Anti-Saloon league and other dry organizations.

Some to Change Vote.

The vote today was expressive of that conflict. Chairman Sumners admitted it; Representative Leonidas Dyer [Rep., Mo.] emphasized it.

In addition it was reported that five or six members who voted "No" today would vote for the resolution next Monday.

Representative Earl C. Michener [Rep., Mich.], once an extreme dry, said he was one of these.

"I shall vote for the resolution on the floor since the vote of my state was a mandate to its representatives to support resubmission," he said. "But I could not be a party to the procedure by which the Garner resolution is to be brought out with no chance to debate and settle such controversial and partially understood questions as the method of ratification, whether or not by convention, and if by convention whether by conventions called by the states or under federal control."

Method of Change Bothers.

The question of how the conventions should be created and regulated was one which bothered the committee. The brief of former Attorney General A. Mitchell Palmer, sent to house members last night, in which he advocated federal regulation of the conventions, was reported to have alienated many southern members who protested such as intrusion of state rights.

The vote in the judiciary committee was as follows:

To authorize Chairman Sumners to offer the resolution and move to suspend the rules—Representatives Leonidas C. Dyer [Mo.], and F. H. La Guardia [N. Y.], Republicans; Frank Oliver [N. Y.], Francis B. Condon [R. I.], and William H. Dieterich [Ill.], Democrats.

Against the authorization—Charles A. Christopherson [S. D.], Richard Yates [Ill.], Earl C. Michener [Mich.], J. Banks Kurtz [Pa.], C. Ellis Moore [O.], and Charles I. Sparks [Kas.], Republicans; Andrew J. Montague [Va.], Tom D. McKeown [Okla.], Gordon Browning [Tenn.], William V. Gregory [Ky.], Malcolm C. Tarver [Ga.], and Zebulon Weaver [N. C.], Democrats.

In addition, Representatives Emanuel Celler [Dem., N. Y.] voted for and Fred H. Dominick [Dem., S. C.] voted against by proxy.

Chairman Sumners refrained from voting, but said that if the result had been a tie he would have voted "aye."

YOUTH IS GIVEN $30,000 BY JURY IN ARREST SUIT

Debutante Cleared; 4 Ordered to Pay.

BY KATHLEEN M'LAUGHLIN.

A jury in Judge Peter H. Schwaba's court last night returned a verdict assessing $30,000 damages against four defendants, William Van Doren Wright, steel company executive; Alexander Jamie, chief investigator of the Secret Six; Edgar Dudley, a former operative for the Secret Six, and Dr. Ferdinand Watzek of Vienna, criminologist, in the suit of William S. Kuhn Jr. for false arrest and malicious prosecution. Miss Marion Wright, recipient of extortion letters Kuhn was charged with having written, was cleared by the verdict.

Kuhn entered suit two years ago after charges against him of having been the author of the letters which demanded $25,000 from Miss Wright just previous to her debut were pressed by Assistant State's Attorney C. Wayland Brooks. Kuhn asked compensation for damage to his reputation, due to the fact that prosecution was started against him under Secret Six auspices, in spite of the fact that the defendants had been warned not to proceed on the evidence they held.

Principals Absent.

Attorney John J. O'Connor, lawyer for Miss Wright, was the only representative of any of the principals in court when the verdict was read. He immediately made a motion for a new trial. Judge Schwaba set the date for a hearing on the motion for Dec. 17.

O'Connor stated to reporters that if the motion for a new trial is denied the defendants will appeal the case. He is confident, he said, that the verdict will not hold in a higher court, and that "no money will ever be paid."

Evidence in the damage suit dragged through nearly three weeks of court sessions. Final arguments of attorneys were completed yesterday morning, the court issued lengthy instructions, and the case was given to the jury at 11:15 a. m.

Agree Early on Secret 6.

From the time the jury first left the courtroom to discuss the verdict, Foreman Alfred A. Mertsky of Western Springs revealed afterward, the twelve were unanimous in voting to find the Secret Six men and Dr. Watzek guilty. Miss Wright was almost as unanimously excluded from responsibility in the case. One juror championed the cause of Mr. Wright until five minutes before the last ballot, on which he was swung over to the majority opinion.

"We took six or seven ballots," Mertsky said. "Only two or three were in favor of finding Miss Wright guilty, and we quickly eliminated her. From a preponderance of the evidence, however, there was a unanimous verdict of guilt against Jamie, Dudley and Watzek. One man held out to exclude Wright from the guilty verdict, and came over on the last ballot.

"The highest award we considered was $50,000, based on the expense young Kuhn was put to due to his arrest, the defamation of his character and subsequent humiliation.

Doubt Defense Evidence.

"As for the lie detector, in which he was tested, that is a mechanical device that cannot be trusted to read a man's mind."

Turning to Attorney O'Connor, he added:

"Brother, I'd certainly have liked to use that lie detector on about fifteen of your witnesses."

The court in its instructions admonished the jurors it was not necessary for them to decide whether any guilt attached to William Kuhn in the extortion case; that the issue was whether malice had been shown by the defendants in arresting the youth, whom Miss Wright, recipient of the extortion missives, had met at a dance at the Casino club.

Explains Police Authority.

"You are instructed that before the plaintiff can recover damages in this case," he reiterated, "you must decide that the person or persons who caused his arrest did not have a preponderance of evidence against him on which to base such an arrest. You are also instructed that if a police officer has evidence tending to show a person guilty of a felony, he does not need a warrant to arrest that person. That is the law in Illinois."

Judge Schwaba's reference was to the action of Lieut. Leo Carr of the Chicago police, who testified that he actually took Kuhn into custody, without a warrant, over the objections of his attorney, because he believed he had sufficient evidence. Carr not being a defendant, the plaintiff was then required to show that the officer acted at the direction of the defendants—which Carr denied.

Legal Advice Is Defense.

The jurors were cautioned further that if a complaint is signed against any person, as in the suit on trial, on the advice of any attorney who is in full possession of the facts, that that advice constitutes a complete defense against damages. It was the contention of Attorney Frederic Burnham, representing Kuhn, that Assistant State's Attorney C. Wayland Brooks, who directed Miss Wright to sign such a complaint, had not been informed of the extenuating circumstances, but only of the indications that Kuhn might have typed the missives.

Wrights May Live Abroad.

Miss Wright and her father were believed last night to be on their way to New York, preparatory to sailing again for France, where they may remain permanently. They left the courtroom as soon as the case went to the jury yesterday morning, with their chief counsel, Edward Everett.

The plaintiff, Kuhn, with his older brother, Wendell Kuhn, a broker, and their sister, also departed when the jury retired and did not return to the courtroom to hear the verdict announced.

"I know my brother will be delighted to hear this," Wendell Kuhn said last night. "The important part of the verdict is that it vindicates him completely."

He added that the youth plans to leave today for a ranch at Pitchfork, Wyo., near Cody, where he now resides.

SEIZE MANAGER IN HOME; STEAL $25,000 IN JEWELRY

Gems valued at $25,000 were stolen by three young men in a daring robbery last night of the jewelry store of Sam Friedman & Co., at 847 West Roosevelt road.

The store had been closed for the night and the gunmen went to the rear of the second floor where Morris Bloom, 65 years old, manager of the shop, lives, and rushed in when he opened the door.

In the house were Bloom's daughter, Mrs. Helen Swimmer, her husband, Dave, their daughter, Lillian, 3 years old, and Miss Leah Swimmer, a sister of Dave Swimmer. Announcing that they wanted the contents of the large safe in the store below, two of the robbers forced Bloom downstairs. The third man guarded the others.

In the store Bloom protested he could not open the safe and one of the gunmen struck him over the head. Meanwhile, Mrs. Swimmer pleaded with the bandit guard to be permitted downstairs and he took her, her husband and child and Miss Swimmer to the store.

Bloom still denied knowing the combination of the safe, but on the plea of his daughter finally revealed the combination, and one of the gunmen opened the steel door. He emptied sixteen trays of rings, each containing 100 bands, into a bag, and also took watch, unset diamonds, and other jewelry. Bloom and Sam Friedman, the owner, said the loot was not insured. They valued it at $50,000 at first, then reduced the estimate one-half.

SEEK TO REDUCE SCHOOL BUDGET WITHOUT PAY CUT

Trustees to Attack Task Next Week.

School trustees will start meetings next week to trim the 1933 budget set tentatively at $30,874,377 on Thursday night. Lewis E. Myers, president of the board, asserted yesterday that the tentative appropriations arrived at by Howard P. Savage, business manager, must be "reduced to the bone," and indicated that he would call the trustees together to pitch into the task next Thursday.

In addition to President Myers, four board members declared that the tentative budget was too high and must be cut to stay within the anticipated revenue for next year. The trustees who agreed on the economy program were Robert F. Carr, William D. McJunkin, Ernst Buehler, and Mrs. W. S. Hefferan.

Salary cuts would come only "as a last resort" if the budget were still too high after lopping off needless expenditures, President Myers and his associates said.

Increase Exceeds 5 Million.

The tentative budget represents an increase of $5,494,613.55 over the 1932 budget, which on July 27 of this year was slashed $15,000,000, from $90,130,263.45 to $75,130,263.45.

The combined pay rolls proposed for 1933 amount to $44,148,876, of which $36,732,416 is for teachers. The tentative item for teachers' salaries shows an increase of $1,804,488 over the amount set up in the 1932 budget. With a tentative pay roll of $7,380,960 the proposed salaries for civil service employés will show a decrease of $2,400 from the 1932 budget.

A part of the rise in the teachers' pay roll is accounted for by automatic increases in salary and the rest for the services of teachers in summer elementary and high schools. These schools were cut out of the 1932 budget.

Sees Deficit if Salaries Stand.

In filing his estimates with the school board Savage stated: "If the basic or regular salary rates are maintained appropriations will exceed the estimated revenues."

Several trustees, upon scanning Savage's report, hinted that the budget would have to be reduced by cutting salaries of teachers, engineers, janitors, firemen, clerks, and other school employés.

"It would be the last thing I'd want to do," said President Myers, "but if it is necessary to cut salaries we'll have to do it after we have exhausted all other remedies."

"I will never agree to cut teachers' salaries," asserted Mrs. Hefferan. "Where the cut should come is in the salaries paid in the business department. There are engineer-custodians in twenty of our schools who have higher salaries than the principals."

McJunkin to Hunt "Soft Spots."

"This budget should be scaled down by cutting where it will do the least harm to the system," declared Mr. McJunkin. "I am opposed to closing the schools and depriving children of education as an economy measure. Cuts in salaries should be the last resort, however."

"If necessary, I should certainly be in favor of salary cuts," said Mr. Buehler. "We must get to rock bottom. Many teachers have told me that they would take downward readjustments in salaries if there was some chance of getting cash."

More than $20,000,000 is owed to teachers and other school employés on their 1932 salaries. They have been paid in cash through April.

"Everything possible should be done to reduce the budget," Mr. Carr said. "Only as a final step should salary and wage adjustments be made in all departments of the school system to stay within our revenue."

"You should pay the teachers before talking about cutting them," said Trustee Carter Blatchford.

Trustees James Hemingway and H. Wallace Caldwell asked for more time to study the tentative figures before commenting on the reductions to be made. Trustees Orville J. Taylor and John A. English were out of town.

Visting Official Sees Pay Cuts.

A prediction that a reduction in teachers' salaries will be reflected in school budgets for 1933 was made yesterday by W. E. Record, business manager of the Los Angeles board of education. Mr. Record is president of the National Association of Public School Business Officers. The executive committee of the organization held a meeting at the Stevens hotel.

"Since approximately 75 per cent of the expenditures in an average school budget are for teachers' salaries," said Mr. Record, "it is obvious that they must be substantially reduced."

Mr. Record asserted that salaries of teachers have remained the same while the cost of living has gone down.

VETS TO CHEER AS COMRADES ASSUME OFFICE

Several war veterans' organizations will participate in special inaugural ceremonies to be held in the council chambers at 9 o'clock Monday for several Democratic candidates, elected Nov. 8, who served in the world war.

Participating will be representatives of the Forty and Eight society, the Veterans of Foreign Wars, the Combat Medal Men's association, the Disabled American War Veterans, the 33d Division association, the Rainbow Division association, and the bugle and drum corps of Roseland, Douglas Park and Chicago police posts, American Legion.

The successful candidates to be honored are Judges Michael G. Kasper, Cecil Corbett Smith, Eugene Holland, Joseph H. McGarry, Lambert K. Hayes, and John Gutknecht; State Auditor Elect Edward J. Barrett; State's Attorney Elect Thomas J. Courtney, and County Commissioner Elect John E. Traeger.

WEDS SHOUSE

JOUETT SHOUSE WEDS DAUGHTER OF MILLIONAIRE

Recently Divorced by His First Wife.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 2.—[Special.]—Jouett Shouse, former executive chairman of the Democratic national committee and now head of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, today married Mrs. Catherine Filene Dodd, daughter of A. Lincoln Filene, the Boston millionaire merchant.

The wedding ceremony was performed in the bride's Georgetown home and attended by a few relatives and friends. It came a few weeks after Mrs. Marion Edwards Shouse had obtained a divorce from Mr. Shouse Oct. 29 in Hutchinson, Kas.

Mrs. Shouse charged abandonment. Mr. Shouse did not contest the suit and paid her $88,000 in cash, with an additional settlement of $100,000.

Anti-Prohibition Leader.

Mr. Shouse entered the anti-dry fight last summer when he accepted the leadership of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment. Before that, since 1929, he had been the executive chairman of the Democratic party and had been tentatively scheduled for chairman of the national convention at Chicago last June.

Defeated for that position by Senator Thomas Walsh, the choice of Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt, he abandoned politics for anti-prohibition.

At the Chicago convention Mrs. Marion Shouse and Mrs. Dodd, who was there reporting for the Democratic Women's Bulletin, were both booked for the Blackstone hotel. Mrs. Dodd, however, did not take up her reservation but went to stay with friends on the north shore.

In Treasury Under Wilson.

Mr. Shouse, who was assistant secretary of the treasury under President Wilson from March 5, 1919, to Nov. 15, 1920, was born in Woodford, Ky., in 1879. Following ten years' experience on the Lexington Herald and the Kentucky Farmer and Breeder, he moved to Kinsley, Kas., and went into the business of stock raising. In 1911 he was married to Marion Edwards of Kinsley. They have two daughters, Elizabeth, who made her Washington debut last year, and Marion, who is one of the season's debutantes.

Race horses and politics were Mr. Shouse's major interests until his recent dumping by the Democratic high command sent him to champion a new cause: the repeal of the 18th amendment.

FIGHT FOR TRACK REMOVAL TO BE TAKEN TO COURT

Park's Plea Denied by Commerce Board.

The Lincoln Park commissioners prepared yesterday to appeal to the Circuit court in their fight to remove the street car tracks from Lake Shore drive between Ohio street and Chicago avenue. The appeal was made necessary by the ruling yesterday morning of the Illinois Commerce commission that the tracks are necessary in the interest of public convenience. The commission ruled against the park board and held with the city, the West Town Chamber of Commerce, and other organizations which favored retention of the tracks.

"We will file an immediate appeal in the Circuit court," said Attorney William H. Beckman, representing the park board. "We have made a record in the proceedings before the commission on which I will be proud to go to the Circuit court. I expect victory either in the Circuit or the Supreme court."

Court to Get Record.

Attorney Beckman explained that the ruling of the commerce commission had much the same standing in a court of law as the report of a master in chancery. The record of the commission hearing will be laid before a Circuit judge for decision. The attorney pointed out that even though the appeal were filed immediately the crowded condition of the Circuit court might make it impossible to obtain a hearing during this court year.

The decision of the commission yesterday was made on a petition for a rehearing filed by the park board in December, 1926. The request for removal of the tracks was based on the contention that the opening of the outer drive link bridges would send such a flow of traffic along the drive as to require the space occupied by the tracks.

The ruling of the commerce commission, covering 43 pages, held that the removal of the tracks would be inimical to the welfare and interests of the public. The decision ordered the Chicago Railways company and its receiver, Frederick H. Rawson, to relocate the tracks within six months along the east line of the outer drive contiguous to the sea wall of the lake. When this is done, the commission held, there will be no appreciable interference with the drive traffic. It was said that this action is not satisfactory to those advocating removal of the tracks.

Traffic Expert's Testimony.

The record of the case comprises 5,800 pages of transcript and 197 exhibits. Included in the testimony is that of J. Rowland Bibbins, a traffic and transportation specialist from Washington, D. C., who was called as a witness by the park commissioners. His testimony supported the contention that the traffic would be retarded if the tracks were allowed to remain.

The commission decision reviewed the history of the construction of the tracks on an order by the Illinois Public Utilities commission in 1921, and pointed out that the Lincoln Park board made no objection at that time. It also recalled that the Illinois Commerce commission in 1926 denied a petition of the Lincoln Park commissioners for the removal of the tracks, holding that the service was in the interest of public necessity.

COURT DECIDES LAKE ZURICH IS PUBLIC PROPERTY

Judge Shurtleff Reverses Earlier Ruling.

Circuit Judge Edward D. Shurtleff of Marengo yesterday transmitted to State's Attorney A. V. Smith of Lake county, at Waukegan, a new decision in the four year old fight over the ownership of the 200 acre lake bottom of Lake Zurich, in Lake county. In his new decision, Judge Shurtleff holds that the lake is a public body of water, and that the persons claiming private title to its bed have no right to bar the public from it.

The legal controversy over the lakebed started when August Froelich, former mayor of Lake Zurich, George Pearce, a real estate man, and the latter's wife, Marguerite, had two young Chicago women arrested for sailing on the lake, charging them with trespassing. There followed a series of injunctions, some obtained by Froelich and the Pearces to restrain residents of the lake from using its waters, and some by a group of more than 100 cottagers, headed by Albert J. Leonard, restraining the claimants to the lake bed from interfering with their use of it.

Claims Previously Upheld.

Froelich and the Pearces asserted that they had acquired title to the lakebed under the swamp lands act, and had paid taxes on the watered area for years. They also contended that the lake was never included in the federal survey of lands in that vicinity as a navigable body of water. In May, 1931, Judge Shurtleff upheld their claims, dismissing a suit by the cottage owners, but pointed out that action to have the lake declared navigable should be carried out by the state's attorney.

State's Attorney Smith then took up the fight, asserting that the lake, as a navigable body of water, was held in trust by the state for the use of the public. The case was considered important because it was feared that the public might be barred from some 50 other small lakes in the Lake county summer resort region. Judge Shurtleff's previous ruling was sustained by the Supreme court.

"I am impressed by the claims that Lake Zurich is a public body of water, and am placing the burden upon the defendants [Froelich et al.] of establishing their title of private ownership before the Supreme court," Judge Shurtleff ruled yesterday.

Believes Patents Invalid.

"From all of the evidence submitted, it appears certain that Lake Zurich is a navigable body of water, and title to the bed of the lake passed to the state of Illinois by the act of congress admitting Illinois to the Union. If it was and is a navigable body of water, then all patents issued for the bed of the lake were issued by mistake and are void. Likewise deeds issued for conveyance of the land under water as swamp lands are valid."

Froelich, who has contended that he and the Pearces have no intention of barring residents of the lake from using it, but merely want to protect the community against "outside hoodlums," said that they will appeal from Judge Shurtleff's ruling.

GOV. ROOSEVELT WILL RETURN TO JOB THURSDAY

To Aid Assembly to Let N. Y. Cut Pay.

BY JOHN BOETTIGER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Warm Springs, Ga., Dec. 2.—[Special.]—Franklin D. Roosevelt today reluctantly decided he must leave this restful spot next Tuesday so he might give his aid to a movement for drastic economies in the New York City government.

The President elect, who had planned to spend the whole of next week in Warm Springs, decided that he must resume the reins of the state government of New York in preparation for a special session of the legislature which will convene next Friday.

City in Desperate State.

The session was called by Lieut. Gov. Herbert H. Lehman, who also is the governor elect, with the acquiescence of Gov. Roosevelt, the purpose behind the special call being the passage of legislation to reduce mandatory salaries on the New York City budget by some 20 to 25 million dollars a year.

New York City, it was explained, has gotten into such a desperate state financially that the bankers have refused to grant further credit unless drastic reductions are made in the city's budget.

A short time after the November election theb ankers advanced 21 million dollars on a bond issue of New York City, and then were unable to dispose of more than one-half of the issue to the public. As a result, when the New York City administration sought further credit with which to meet $140,000,000 of bonds and other obligations coming due this month, the bankers insisted that before they would lay out any more cash, substantial reductions in the city budget must be shown. New York City officials protested most items in the budget could not be changed without amending the law.

Limits Field of Legislation.

Gov. Roosevelt acquiesced to the recommendation of Lieut. Gov. Lehman for a special session, but he decided that he would prepare the message to the legislature, which limits the field of legislation that may be considered.

The governor will arrive in New York City Wednesday evening and will spend the night there, going up to Albany Thursday morning to work on his message. It was known that Gov. Roosevelt objected to the expense of a special session because the regular session of the legislature opens in January, but that when the bankers insisted they would grant no further credit this month without the reductions in expenses being voted, the governor was induced to coincide with Mr. Lehman's recommendation.

Publisher Calls on Roosevelt.

Among the visitors to the Little White House today were Robert W. Bingham, publisher of the Courier Journal of Louisville, who is rated a likely possibility for some important diplomatic post under the Roosevelt régime.

Former Gov. Carey Hardee of Florida conferred with the President elect on the filling of vacancies to the executive committee of the governors' conference, of which Mr. Roosevelt was a leading member. Five cotton merchants of the south, headed by J. W. Garrow of Houston, Tex., conferred with Mr. Roosevelt on agricultural problems.

The governor was pleased today to receive a huge scrap book, put together by Mrs. Cynthia Ellis Jones of Griffin, Ga., containing newspaper accounts of the Roosevelt campaign.

Hopes to Avoid Extra Session.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 2.—(AP)—Representative Johnson [Dem., Okla.] today quoted President Elect Roosevelt as having said he could not now "conceive circumstances under which it would be necessary" to call a special session of congress.

"The governor," Johnson said to newspaper men, "did not say that nothing could happen that would force a special session. His idea was that from the present outlook nothing would happen to make necessary an extra meeting.

"He said he did not want congress to meet before next winter and hoped a special session could be avoided."

Johnson, who has just returned from Oklahoma, said he talked with Gov. Roosevelt at Warm Springs, Ga. last Saturday.

MRS. ROOSEVELT WILL BROADCAST, GIVE HER EARNINGS TO CHARITY

New York, Dec. 2.—[Special.]—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, wife of the President elect, has accepted a commercial broadcasting contract, it was announced by the National Broadcasting company.

She is to begin her work, talking on some general topic once each week, next Friday evening. The money she receives, it was announced, will be divided between the state fund for relief and destitution cases which Mrs. Roosevelt believes are not provided for in the general relief work now in progress.

The amount of her compensation was not announced. The backers of the program manufacture toilet preparations.

JUDGE ASSAILS WIRE TAPPING AS "CONTEMPTIBLE"

'Shame' for Uncle Sam to Engage in It.

Boston, Mass., Dec. 2.—(AP)—Federal Judge James A. Lowell tonight from the bench denounced wire tapping as "a contemptibly vile practice" and said that under its usage Uncle Sam became a "sneaking cur" instead of "an honorable, upright gentleman."

His statement came in his charge to the jury in the trial of ten members of an alleged greater Boston liquor combine. Evidence against some of the defendants had been obtained by the wire tapping method.

"Just think of the shame of this thing; the shame of it and worse, the pity of it," Judge Lowell said.

The jury was tensely silent as the statement was made. Judge Lowell had excluded wire tapping evidence early in the trial, but finally admitted it because defense counsel insisted in referring to it.

Speaking of federal agents who gave testimony based or wire tapping activities, the court said: "They are not smirched in any way with the contemptible character of wire tapping. They all did it because they were instructed to. They did it because higher-ups thought it necessary in order to stop the practice which they are engaged in stopping."

Uncle Sam, he said, was the visual embodiment of the United States government. "We love," he added, "to think of Uncle Sam as a thoroughly upright man, somewhat whimsical, as is our national character, possibly chewing tobacco, although that is not so much in vogue today.

The defendants were released on bail and the jury discharged.

PREDICT BATTLE BY AL SMITH TO END CURRY RULE

New York, Dec. 2.—[Special.]—Alfred E. Smith, in the opinion of many observers, has launched an open fight to remove John F. Curry from the leadership of Tammany Hall.

Sources close to him are convinced that the sweeping recommendations for reform in city and county government which he laid before the Hofstadter legislative committee yesterday were but the opening guns in a campaign to purge the local Democratic organization.

The "Happy Warrior" believes, it is said, the forces that at present dominate Tammany are driving it to disaster. Those nearest Mr. Smith say he neither wants to be mayor nor Tammany leader, but he is convinced, they say, that Tammany's only salvation lies in cleaning house and offering the electorate a "new Tammany."

Smith's fight with Curry is not a new one, but heretofore it has been more or less under cover. It originated when Curry, backed by James J. Walker, was named leader of Tammany by a narrow margin.

The breach has widened ever since. It came to a showdown at Albany this year when Mr. Smith, joining forces with Gov. Roosevelt, dictated the nomination of Herbert H. Lehman for governor.

NEW YORK CITY, IN RED, MAY NOT MEET PAY ROLL

Slashes in Salaries May Relieve Situation.

New York, Dec. 2.—[Special.]—New York City's liabilities for December exceed its estimated cash receipts by 144 million 600 thousand dollars, and unless 151 million dollars of revenue bills due this month can be renewed, the city cannot meet its obligations, Controller Charles W. Berry said today in a statement setting forth the city's financial condition.

Unless the special session of the legislature, called Dec. 9, repeals the mandatory salary legislation and permits a general salary reduction, "a default is indicated for the pay roll of Dec. 15, and on the remainder of the notes held by the investing public," the controller's statement continued.

Mayor Joseph V. McKee revealed at city hall today that the confidence of the investing public in New York City securities is so shaken that of a recent 5¼ per cent bond issue of $21,000,000, some $17,500,000 still remains upon the shelves of the bankers who underwrote the issue.

Demand Drastic Cuts.

Mr. Berry's statement, the first he has made showing both the cash balance and the obligations of the city, made it plain that the revenue bills due this month will not be extended by the city's bankers unless there is a more drastic reduction of the 1933 budget, which now totals $557,141,022, and that salary cuts are therefore essential to save the city.

In this statement Mr. Berry completely reversed the position he has maintained up to this week. Only last week he said: "It is ridiculous to say the December pay rolls will not be met or to intimate that New York faces a financial crisis."

Last week, also, he was insisting that today the city would have a cash surplus of $90,000,000. But according to his statement today, $52,000,000 of this cash surplus is in the sinking fund and has already been set aside for redemption of a subway bond issue on Dec. 15, and the remainder is insufficient to carry the municipal government through the middle of the month.

Special Session Called.

The special session of the legislature was formally called by Acting Governor Herbert H. Lehman in Albany today at the urgent request of the city board of estimate. It's immediate objective will be the repeal of mandatory salary legislation as a means to aid the city in its efforts to stave off threatening bankruptcy.

Meanwhile, revelations that the city has been borrowing from its three sinking funds and replacing the cash with various bonds that, in effect, are only "I O U's" of the city, were made before the Hofstadter legislative committee today by Duncan MacInnes, accountant of the finance department.

Counsel Samuel Seabury showed that in the sinking fund of the city of New York, the largest of the three sinking funds, there was only $133,109,385 in cash and corporate stock, and that the balance, $120,876,938 was in other paper that Mr. MacInnes admitted was not a lien upon any property but merely upon the general credit of the city.

Federal Jury to Be Given Case of 9 H. O. Stone Officials Today

A jury in the Federal court of Judge Charles E. Woodward today will decide that case of Henry F. Norcott, president of H. O. Stone & Co., a defunct real estate investment house, and eight of his associates, on trial on charges of using the mails in a scheme to defraud.

Closing arguments for the government and prosecution were completed yesterday. Attorney Charles F. Rathbun, representing Norcott, summed up for the defense in the afternoon and in a special night session Assistant United States District Attorney Joseph A. Struett answered for the government.

Called Depression Victims.

Attorney Rathbun told the jury that the defendants, who were indicted as an outgrowth of the 14 million dollar failure of the company two years ago, were the innocent victims of the depression. They had no criminal intent, he said, but were confident, as most economists and other leaders, including President Hoover, that the depression would soon be over.

Prosecutor Struett termed the defense arguments "tantamount to pleas of guilty in which not a single prosecution charge has been denied."

He accused the defense of resorting to defamation and ridiculing of the prosecution attorneys in an attempt to inflame the jury instead of answering government evidence.

"The defense has attempted to place Dodd Healey, the co-prosecutor, and myself on trial," he said, "but have not presented a single item of evidence to conteract the evidence of a hundred government witnesses, men and women who lost their life savings in Stone securities."

Calls Defendants "Only Fools."

Attorney Rathbun claimed that at the most, Norcott and his associates could be only classified as fools.

"But you can't indict a man for being a damned fool," he said. "The government claimed that Norcott knew the Stone stock was worthless. He had 50,000 shares which sold at one time for $38 a share. If he knew it was worthless doesn't it stand to reason that he would have sold it?"

Government evidence showed, according to Struett, that the stock could not have been sold, because the only bid on the market was maintained by H. O. Stone & Co.

Besides Norcott, those on trial include Claude Niles, Marshall W. George, W. Scott Carroll, Harold D. Bennett, Leslie A. Needham, Charles P. Packer Jr., and David A. Coleman and Francis E. Richardson, officials of a subsidiary company.

"Mother" Jones' Heirs to Build Monument to Her

The will of Mary [Mother] Jones, noted labor leader, who died Dec. 1, 1931, at Hyattsville, Md., at the age of 106, was admitted to probate yesterday by Oscar S. Caplan, assistant to Probate Judge Horner. The estate, originally valued at $10,000, has shrunk to $2,000, it was stated. The heirs are John Fitzpatrick, president, and Edward N. Nockels, secretary of the Chicago Federation of Labor, who have announced they will use their legacies to build a monument to "Mother" Jones over her grave at Springfield.

WELFARE FUND'S CAMPAIGN PASSES $3,000,000 MARK

The Emergency Welfare Fund's drive for $7,500,000 to support the relief work of the established charities other than relief of the idle, yesterday amounted to a new total of $3,001,042, after new subscriptions of $400,000 had been reported by workers at a luncheon at the La Salle hotel.

Joseph T. Ryerson, chairman of the trades and industries division of the public campaign, announced that the public utilities group has been particularly liberal in its subscriptions. "This group reported additional subscriptions of more than $36,000 today," he said, "bringing their total to about $600,000, or two-thirds of their quota."

W. Rufus Abbott, chairman of the board of the Illinois Bell Telephone company, declared the health and welfare of the city's helpless will be safeguarded this winter only if all employers give their employés a chance to subscribe to the fund.

VON HINDENBURG PICKS WAR CHIEF FOR CHANCELLOR

Arms Von Schleicher with Powers of Dictator.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Dec. 2.—President Paul von Hindenburg today appointed Gen. Kurt von Schleicher, 50 year old minister of defense, as chancellor of Germany. The "mystery man" of German politics was commissioned to form a presidial cabinet—in other words a cabinet responsible to the president himself. He will be armed with the powers of a dictator.

Millions tonight gave a sigh of relief after weeks of political unrest. War veterans and members of semi-military political organizations were particularly pleased by the appointment.

"We have secured a leader who will struggle to revive comradeship, such as men learned in war—discipline, military spirit, and honest coöperation," they said.

Von Schleicher Reveals Aims.

"Germany's foreign policy, her attitude on the question of disarmament and reparations agreement will remain unchanged. We want to work peacefully with other nations, but we insist that our vital rights be respected in the same way we respect those of other nations. The chief object of my government will be to relieve unemployment.

"I shall strive to stabilize political conditions to make it possible to do constructive work. In preparing my program I shall seek the advice and coöperation of all regardless of their political creed."

Von Schleicher began his task of guiding a disunited nation into a quiet period of economic advance and social appeasement by inviting Foreign Minister Baron Konstantin von Neurath and Finance Minister Ludwig Count Schwerin von Krosigk to retain their posts. Von Schleicher will remain as minister of defense and will succeed automatically to the federal commissionership for Prussia. Thus, he will head the powerful Prussian police.

Ministry About the Same.

Von Schleicher's ministry is expected to be much the same as former Chancellor Franz von Papen's, with few exceptions. Minister of Agriculture Baron Friedrich Edler von Braun and Minister of Economics Hermann Warmbold are almost certain to be reappointed.

The chancellor expects to hold a conference with the new cabinet by tomorrow afternoon in order that Foreign Minister von Neurath might return to the disarmament conference at Geneva Sunday evening. Dr. Hans Luther, president of the Reichsbank, is returning to Berlin tomorrow to take part in the cabinet meeting.

The race for the chancellorship came to a dramatic close today only an hour before Von Hindenburg summoned Von Schleicher and informed him he had been selected.

Von Papen Surrenders.

The president fought to reinstate Von Papen. The latter had spent the night attempting to form a new cabinet, but none was willing to coöperate with him. His associates realized that Von Papen's reinstatement would be the same to the reichstag as a red flag to a bull in the ring.

Von Papen thereupon asked Von Hindenburg to appoint Gen. von Schleicher to the chancellorship.

"I hope that my withdrawal will ease the situation and that the new chancellor will be able to reach an agreement with the reichstag," he said.

Von Hindenburg tried to avoid appointing Von Schleicher because he was anxious to keep him at the head of the army in a neutral position. The refusal of business and financial circles to coöperate with any of his other candidates forced the president to select the general.

Von Schleicher will face his greatest problem next Tuesday when the new reichstag convenes. He has emphasized that the next cabinet must try in every way to avoid conflict with the reichstag.

But Adolf Hitler, who made a fight for the chancellorship and lost, tonight announced that his National Socialists will not tolerate a Von Schleicher cabinet.

The Nazis and the communists together can overthrow the cabinet. They still have a majority. Von Schleicher hopes to bridge the gap by inducing the Nazis not to join forces with the communists, which would give his government a chance to live and show what it can do.

If the Hitlerites prove recalcitrant Von Schleicher has constitutional power to dissolve the reichstag. He already has indicated that he favors an adjournment over Christmas.

POWDER BLAST INJURES FOUR.

Crawfordsville, Ind., Dec. 2.—[Special.]—A can of blasting powder exploded in the powder house at the Mill Creek pressure mine today, seriously injuring George Burlan, James Drake, Frank Skaggs, and Paul Mitchell. The powder house was destroyed.

Policeman with Girl Kills Bandit

Traffic Officer George E. Peterson and his fiancee, Miss Irene Holtz. They were seated in his parked automobile at 85th street and Damen avenue when two robbers undertook to hold them up. One of the gunmen, Harry Mahl, 9107 Lowe avenue, was slain by Peterson.

Escapes Death

Harry Mahl, a bandit, who apologized to his victims before robbing them, was shot five times and killed last night by George E. Peterson, a mounted traffic policeman, when he tried to hold up Peterson and the latter's fiancée, Miss Irene Holtz, 22 years old, of 7154 South Marshfield avenue. Peterson, who is 36 years old, and lives at 1508 West 72d street, was almost killed by the gunman. Mahl, 24 years old, was the father of three children and lived at 9107 Lowe avenue.

The policeman, off duty, and Miss Holtz were sitting in his parked car at 85th street and Damen avenue when another car drew up alongside. Two men stepped out. Suspecting their purpose, Peterson grabbed his revolver.

"I'm sorry we have to do this," spoke up one of the men. "We're robbers."

With that Peterson leveled his revolver. The bandit fired first, however. His bullet tore through the car door, and ripped the policeman's coat. Peterson fired six shots, missing only once. The second robber fled. The slain robber was taken to the Little Company of Mary hospital, where he was identified as the man who earlier had held up James Healy, 19 years old, 8145 Wood street, a student, and Miss Virginia Knight, also 19.

LURES GIRL JOB SEEKER TO HOME; IS SENT TO JAIL

Mechanic Posing as Doctor Answers Her Ad.

CRIMINAL COURT.
Harold O'Brien and Edward Groskopf, larceny, sentenced to 1 to 10 years each in the penitentiary; Louis Serricile, rape, sentenced to 25 years in the penitentiary by Judge Phillip L. Sullivan.

Earl Taylor, 53 years old, 2820 Logan boulevard, was sent to the Bridewell yesterday by Municipal Judge Matthew D. Hartigan to serve out fines totaling $300 for having taken indecent liberties with a 17 year old girl whom he enticed to his home with an offer of work.

The complainant was Miss Anna Sova, 3351 West 26th street. She inserted a classified advertisement in the situations wanted column of THE TRIBUNE on Nov. 21, seeking work as a housekeeper. Taylor called her telephone number, which was given in the advertisement, and asked her to come to his home, saying that he was a physician and needed several young women to work in a clinic which he intended to open.

Poses as a Doctor.

"I went to his home," Miss Sova told Judge Hartigan yesterday. "He had on an apron and I thought he was a doctor. He said that he would have to give me an examination."

After she had removed her clothes, Miss Sova testified, Taylor made advances to her which frightened her. When Taylor's 9 year old daughter, Virginia, entered the room she dressed and hurried out of the house, Miss Sova said.

Police Arrest Mechanic.

She told her uncle of Taylor's action and he took her to the Lawndale police station, where she made a complaint. Policemen Fred Mundt and Arthur Boisen, who arrested Taylor, found that he was a mechanic and not a physician. They also found, they reported, that his young daughter was intoxicated when they entered the house.

"I'm sorry I can't give you stiffer punishment," Judge Hartigan told Taylor after the evidence had been submitted. "You deserve a far greater one."

He fined Taylor $100 for disorderly conduct and $200 for taking indecent liberties. Taylor was committed to the Bridewell because he was unable to pay the fines.

RAPIST GETS 25 YEARS

Louis Serrielle, 38 years old, was found guilty of rape yesterday in the court of Judge Philip Sullivan and was sentenced to 25 years in the penitentiary.

In passing sentence Judge Sullivan said that if he had the power to order sterilization he would impose that penalty on Serrielle.

The complainant in the case was Mrs. Inez Earle, 58 years old, a nurse who served in the world war. She said that Serrielle entered her apartment at 5519 Kenwood avenue on Oct. 19, carrying a bottle of gin in one hand and a stiletto in the other, and ordered her to submit to him. When she resisted, she testified, he beat her and threatened to kill her with the dagger.

It was the second time Serrielle, a chauffeur, who lives in the same building as Mrs. Earle, had been convicted on similar charges. He was in the Joliet penitentiary from 1928 to 1930, after conviction on a charge of attempted rape.

CONFESSES ROBBING MAIL BOXES.

Gilbert Nelson, 40 years old, 3722 Sheffield avenue, was arrested by the Evanston police yesterday and confessed that he had stolen a number of letters containing checks from apartment house mail boxes.

ILLINI PROM QUEEN

Urbana, Ill., Dec. 3.—[Special.]—More than 500 couples participated in the annual junior prom at the University of Illinois tonight. The grand march was led by J. W. Hope, Danville, junior class president, and his guest, Miss Julia McPherson, Springfield, and M. S. McGuffin, Ridott, chairman of the dance committee, and his guest, Miss Mary M. Hill, Dundee. The prom, a formal affair, was held in the men's gymnasium, which was decorated to give a marine undersea effect.

Miss Isabel M. Donahue, 934 Lafayette parkway, Chicago, a member of Alpha Delta Pi sorority, was elected queen of the prom and her identity made known at 11 o'clock. Voting for the queen has been in progress for the last three days. Miss Helen Bennett, 1164 South Ridgeland avenue, Oak Park, a member of Kappa Delta, was second in the voting, and Miss Elsie Minier, Sheldon, Ill., Phi Omega Pi, was third.

GRAND JURY ASKS DRIVE TO REDUCE THEFTS OF AUTOS

Protests Easy Escapes of Mental Patients.

AUTO THEFTS.
Automobiles stolen, 98; recovered, 77; stripped, 19 [from police records for twenty-four hours ending at midnight Thursday].

Defendant held to the grand jury for automobile larceny: Walter McGrath, by Judge Harold P. O'Connell.

The November grand jury yesterday recommended the adoption of a plan, which it outlined in its final report, to reduce the number of automobile thefts in Cook county.

The final report, made to Chief Justice Prystalski of the Criminal court, also urged that steps be taken to prevent the escape of prisoners from state institutions for mental incompetents. The jurors pointed out that James [Iggy] Varecha, 17 year old confessed killer and rapist, made his escape from the state home at Dixon before his double crime of rape and murder.

Thefts Precede Other Crimes.

"A very large percentage of the cases heard by this jury have been automobile theft cases," the report said. "The grand jury believes that every effort must be exerted to reduce these thefts, not only because of the great direct loss suffered in the value of cars stolen and stripped, but because automobile thefts are the preliminary of robberies, burglaries, and other crimes of violence; fast transportation being a prime need of these law breakers. To the accomplishment of this end the grand jury recommends:

"1. That more men and funds be supplied to the stolen automobile section of the police, which is doing excellent work.

"2. That the state legislature enact the Certificate Title law covering automobiles.

"3. That the legislature pass an automobile drivers' license law.

"4. That prosecution of automobile thieves, including receivers of stolen cars, be pressed for the full penalty."

Charge Institutional Laxity.

Of Varecha, the jurors had the following to say: "It is the sense of the grand jury that the state authorities should take steps to prevent escape of inmates from such institutions as those at Dixon. Testimony given before the grand jury shows that it is comparatively easy to make such escapes. The man Varecha whose shocking crimes this month startled the community, had so escaped and had been at large for some time with apparently no efforts made to apprehend him. Safety of the community demands that this laxity be corrected."

Big Cab Companies Attacked and Defended at Hearing

The city council subcommittee on taxicabs, holding public hearings for the purpose of revamping the taxicab ordinance, spent most of its time yesterday listening to charges made against the Yellow and Checker Cab companies by representatives of independent and cut rate taxicab companies, and to replies to those charges.

In the course of the hearing Lieut. James Killackey told the committee that the Checker Taxi company, while it was operating only 1,100 cabs, held licenses to operate 1,500. Lieut. Killackey is secretary of the motor vehicle license commission, which during the last year has refused to issue permits to operate to a number of independent and cut rate cabs.

Lieut. Killackey made the statement in reply to the assertion by Harry Gordon, a former official of the Checker company who was one of the incorporators recently, with Robert McLaughlin of the Century Cab company, that when the Chicago Cab company suspended business, 225 licenses which it held were transferred illegally to the Checker company.

Believes Low Fare Profitable.

Al Levine, who described himself as the driver of the first Yellow cab in Chicago, told the committee that he is seeking to operate 300 cabs under the name of the United Cab company at rates of 15 cents for the first third mile and 5 cents per third mile thereafter, a schedule now in effect with several cut rate cab companies. He asserted that the large taxicab companies, because of "fat salaries to executives, high rental charges and dividends," cannot operate at a profit at the lower rates, but that he expects to be able to do so.

Levine charged that the Yellow Cab company gives drivers short measure on gasoline and that its taximeters do not register according to advertised rates. The meters, he asserted, register a 10 cent charge for 1⅓ minutes, instead of 3 minutes, waiting time. His charges were denied by City Sealer Joe Grein.

Meters O. K., Grein Asserts.

"I found when I took office that the gasoline pumps in some of the taxicab garages were not registering properly," Mr. Grein told the committee. "The violations were corrected and everybody is cooperating now. As to the taximeters, they turn over after the first 1¼ minutes waiting time and thereafter every three minutes. The corporation counsel's office held in an opinion that that was within the provisions of the city ordinances."

Ben Samuels, attorney for the Yellow company, brought out that Levine was formerly a garage manager for that company and asked him if he ever got instruction to give drivers short measure of gasoline, and if he did so.

"About twice a year we would find that there had been a shrinkage in the gasoline supply, and the pumps would be jimmied to make it up," Levine asserted.

CERMAK PUSHES MILLION SAVING IN BALLOT COSTS

Proposes More Reforms in City Elections.

An estimated saving of $1,000,000 in election expense during 1933 was sponsored yesterday by Mayor Cermak in conjunction with County Judge Jareckl.

Following a conference in the chambers of the county judge, the mayor announced that a definite program of legislation to be sought as soon as the general assembly meets in January had been agreed on. A special committee was named to draft the necessary bills immediately.

The economy would be accomplished by doing away with the registration before the aldermanic election and the consolidation of the aldermanic election with the judicial election in June. As the law now stands the first aldermanic election would be held in February and the run-off elections in April.

Cermak Extends Plan.

Judge Jareckl and his staff, including representatives of the election board, began work on these proposals last week, but Mayor Cermak went them several steps better in urging the reduction of election costs.

"There is no reason," he said, "why the same principle followed now in aldermanic elections should not be adopted in the election of the mayor. If the law is modified to provide for the same type of nonpartisan election for the mayoralty frequently half of the cost of electing that official would be saved.

"We now have party primaries for the mayoralty. Then the winners face each other in an election. If the law were amended to provide that any candidate who receives a majority the first time up is elected there frequently would be no run-off required."

Would Appoint Clerk, Treasurer.

In this connection he also proposed that the office of city clerk be filled by appointment instead of by election and that the office of city treasurer be consolidated with the office of the city controller, the "controller-treasurer" then being appointed, like the clerk, by the mayor with the concurrence of the city council.

The mayor also urged that the law be amended so that, beginning with 1935, the aldermanic term shall be four years. He said this would mean a saving of public funds and would attract strong candidates into the aldermanic races. He also favors a change permitting the mayor to fill a vacancy in the city council by appointment where the remainder of the term is less than one year.

Favors Cutting Poll Staffs.

Judge Jareckl has advocated a saving by a reduction in the number of precinct polling officials employed for registration from five to two, five being the full number required for an election. He has held that the work could be done by two "registrars" instead of by three clerks and two judges.

Here, too, the mayor went a step further, and contended that one judge and two clerks are all that are needed to man a polling place on election day. Election authorities in general oppose this change as dangerous.

3 DETAINED BY U. S. ON 'MATTER OF BUSINESS'

A business matter was disposed of yesterday by United States Commissioner Walker, three bootleggers and a squad of federal prohibition agents. The matter was just whose business is what and why.

Agents arrested Peter J. Marx, 3443 Sheffield avenue, when one of his business cards fell into their hands. It read:

"If an old man loved a young girl that's his business,

"If they both get married, that's their business,

"If they are dry, that's my business."

The agents arrested Marx and his partners, William Maravelias and Steve King. "Well, that's our business," said the agents.

"Held to the grand jury in bonds of $2,500," Commissioner Walker said —"and that is my business."

SIKORSKY, PLANE BUILDER, IS HERE; PLANS SEA LINES

Igor Sikorsky, designer and builder of a 40 passenger amphibian airplane, arrived in Chicago yesterday by plane from Brownsville, Tex., where he went to plan the establishment of ocean air travel over the Pan-American Airways. He is also working on a plan for trans-Atlantic travel on the huge four motored amphibians. One of the suggested lines would have Chicago as the American base and would proceed to Europe by way of Newfoundland, Greenland, Iceland, and the Shetland and Faroe islands.

Three Bandit Carloads Rob Messenger of $1,200

Seven robbers, riding in three cars, held up Arthur Kemnetz, messenger for R. S. Roth & Associates, manufacturers of advertising specialties, as Kemnetz was delivering a $1,200 pay roll from a loop bank to his employer's office at 1823 Prairie avenue. Forcing Kemnetz's machine to the curb at 18th street and Michigan avenue, the seven alighted from their cars. Kemnetz and a companion, Harold Prell, 2216 Belmont avenue, handed over the money as the robbers held their hands menacingly in their pockets.

Inspect Illinois Building at Fair

REDUCE UTILITY RATES, DEMANDS COUNTY BOARD

The county commissioners yesterday moved formally to begin a campaign for the reduction of gas, electric, telephone, street car, and rapid transit rates. The board directed that a copy of a resolution to this effect be sent to Governor Elect Horner, State's Attorney Elect Courtney, and the incoming governor's Illinois commerce commission which yet is to be appointed. The action follows the board's approval of the resolution which was presented by Commissioner Homer J. Byrd at a recent meeting.

The resolution makes the claim that the Chicago public utility rates are among the highest in the United States. It asserts that the price of food, clothing, shelter and other necessities of life had greatly declined in recent years while the utility rates "have remained constant." The resolution urges that the campaign be carried on to reduce those rates to a level commensurate with the general price decline.

To this end the board appointed a subcommittee of Commissioners Byrd, George A. Miller, to press action on the part of the state's attorney and the state commerce commission.

WIDE SHAKEUP FOR DETECTIVE BUREAU SEEN

A shakeup involving at least half of the personnel of the detective bureau is expected within a week, according to reports in the city hall yesterday.

There are 330 men at the bureau at present, and between 150 and 200 of them will be transferred, the rumors indicate. No confirmation was forthcoming from official quarters last night, however.

Data concerning every man at the bureau is now in the hands of Commissioner James P. Allman, showing the date of appointment to the bureau, and the name of the sponsor. This information, it is said, is to be examined by Mayor Cermak before any transfers are ordered. Many of the men at the bureau are holdovers from the previous administration, and it is believed that if there is any shakeup they, among others, will be affected.

Taylorville, Ill., Dec. 2.—(Special.)—Mrs. Frank Rever is in a critical condition from burns received this morning when she attempted to start a fire in the heating stove at her home with coal oil. Her husband was burned on both hands and arms and George Adams, a grandson, suffered burns on his left hand.

DETERMINE HOW STATE WILL USE WORLD FAIR FUND

Governor and Commission Tour Grounds.

How Illinois' $350,000 appropriation for the Century of Progress exposition shall be spent was decided yesterday by the World's Fair commission, under the chairmanship of Gov. Emmerson. The group of legislators and citizens met most of the day at the Administration building and toured the grounds.

The business sessions were marked by a spirit of economy in allocating the fund, and when the commission had appropriated for all but one of the items before it, it had accounted for $331,500 and was still debating how much should be spent for landscaping the grounds of the Illinois Host building—the state's contribution to the exposition. It is not believed that this cost will eat up the $18,500 remaining of the sum set aside by the 57th general assembly.

Appropriations for Exhibits.

The budget passed by the commission appropriated the following sums for exhibits:

Host building	$ 80,000
University of Illinois	55,000
Entertainment	50,000
Department of Buildings	45,000
Maintenance of buildings	24,000
Department of Public Welfare	30,000
Department of Mines	20,000
Lincolniana exhibit	10,000
Department of Public Works	10,000
Publicity	5,000
Military exhibit	2,500
Total	$331,500

The appropriation for the department of buildings is for space rental in the States' building for the Illinois exhibit and the exhibit of the department of agriculture.

Slash Publicity Allowance.

Many of the estimates were pared down at the meeting under Gov. Emmerson's gavel. The commission, for example, showed some spirit when asked to set aside $10,000 for publicity and the governor cut it in half with the enthusiastic support of the others around the table.

Members of the commission attending the meeting included Governor Elect Henry Horner, Speaker David E. Shanahan of the house of representatives, Lieut. Gov. Fred Sterling, Senators Richard J. Barr, Roy C. Woods, Richey V. Graham, and Charles H. Thompson and Representatives Richard J. Lyons, Elmer J. Schnackenberg and Homer J. Tice.

Principal Streets Assured of New Signs Before Fair

Chicago's principal thoroughfares will have new street signs at every corner before the opening of the World's Fair next June. This was the definite promise yesterday of A. A. Sprague, commissioner of public works, as he, with a committee of city officials and representatives of civic organizations, began the work of choosing the type of street sign to be used.

From forty signs submitted and assembled for inspection on Navy pier, the committee eliminated all but nine. From these the final selection will be made next week.

Members of Committee.

Included in the committee were Beverly Vedder, chairman of the streets and traffic committee of the Association of Commerce; Charles M. Hayes, president of the Chicago Motor club; Si Mayer, president of the Automobile club of Illinois; Eugene Taylor, manager of the Chicago Plan commission; Lester H. Forbes, chairman of the streets and public safety committee of the City club; and Mrs. Charles R. Simmons, representing the Woman's City club.

Acting with Commissioner Sprague as co-chairman of the committee was Leslie J. Sorenson, city traffic engineer. Members of the committee representing the city also were Ald. John Toman (33d) and John D. Riley, superintendent of the city map department.

$50,000 Already Appropriated.

The work of choosing street signs to be erected in the principal streets before next June was the first definite action taken towards completion of the comprehensive program for replacing every street sign in the city and for revising the street nomenclature system to eliminate confusion.

The promise of completing the work of putting new signs on the principal streets is based on the fact that the city council has already appropriated $50,000 for this purpose. It is estimated that more than $2,000,000 would be needed to complete the entire program.

Argues for City-Wide Replacement.

Agitation for immediate attention to the program in its entirety by the city council was brought before the aldermen two day ago in a resolution sponsored by the City club and introduced by Ald. Toman. In discussing the resolution yesterday Mr. Forbes, head of the City club committee interested in the matter, pointed out many reasons for consideration of the club's program.

COUNTY TO ISSUE FOOD AND FUEL TO NEEDY EMPLOYES

The county commissioners yesterday instructed Joseph L. Moss, superintendent of the public welfare bureau, to issue food, coal and shoes to any county employés who apply for aid. The action, taken at a committee meeting of the board, will provide for 3,800 men and women who have received no pay for five and one-half months. Later all unpaid employés of Cook county taxing bodies may be given similar relief.

Under the plan employés will pay for all food rations or other supplies in checks which will be cashed by the county treasurer against their salaries when these are ultimately paid. Each employé may draw relief supplies to the value of half his pay check in any given month. To receive the relief he need only produce a statement from the treasurer that his salary has not been incumbered by salary advances.

The plan will be formally approved by the board at a meeting next Monday, although Supt. Moss has been instructed to start giving aid to employés today.

Bolivia Accepts Proposal for Intervention in Chaco

LA PAZ, Bolivia, Dec. 2.—(AP)—The foreign office today cabled the Bolivian legation in Washington an acceptance of the proposal by the Washington neutrals' commission to send a military mission to the Gran Chaco territory to aid in the settlement of the dispute over its ownership with Paraguay. The note also accepted terms for creation of a neutral zone and for arbitration.

BRITAIN FEARS DEBT NOTE MAY CAUSE FRICTION

Sees Possible Trouble Over Two Clauses.

BY JOHN STEELE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Dec. 2.—Great Britain is going to pay the $95,550,000 interest and principal installment on the war debt to the United States due Dec. 15. The payment will be made in gold.

These two decisions, which were made when the second British note pleading for an extension of the moratorium was sent, are dependent on rejection by America of Britain's new appeal. News from Washington today indicated that no extension of the moratorium will be granted. Thus the provisional clause in the decisions disappears.

Britain to Keep Trying.

At the same time Great Britain, in common with other European debtors, will not cease efforts to secure a future reduction or revision of the war debts. Pressure will be kept up, and it is hoped the Roosevelt administration will consent to discuss the situation in the light of world economics rather than in the "narrow" American view.

While comment on the form and content of the British note was toned down in all English papers, informed opinion was appalled at two clauses in the note, which, it is feared, are likely to cause acute friction between the United States and Britain.

The first clause is the assertion that the initiative in devising the settlement of reparations at Lausanne was taken "with the cognizance and approval of the United States government." If this is true, it is pointed out, it is an accusation that President Hoover or some one acting on his behalf violated the express direction of congress when the moratorium was granted last year and exposes him to impeachment.

Linked to Hoover Appeal.

In some quarters an effort is made to relate this statement to Hoover's appeal about a year ago to the European governments to set their own houses in order before appealing for relief to the United States. No one in authority today, however, would say that there was something more concrete behind the note's reference than this. Many here who are familiar with American conditions are looking for trouble with congress over this statement next week.

The other clause to which exception is taken is the implied threat of a discriminatory tariff against America if the Dec. 15 payment must be made. Those who justify the wording of this clause say it is not meant as a threat, but simply a statement of plain fact that if Britain must send its sparse hoard of gold to the United States to pay debts, it cannot use it to buy goods and therefore imports from America must decline.

Baldwin Hurries Back to London.

Abruptly concluding his speaking tour of the country, Stanley Baldwin, president of the council, hurried back to London tonight. He said he returned to be here over the week-end "because there are matters of great importance that must be dealt with."

Britons were shocked today by the assertion of Stanley Bruce, former Australian prime minister and now Australian resident minister in London, that the war debt payment is only a drop in the bucket and in no way responsible alone for the world depression.

"There is a much greater question that that," he said. "It is the whole general position of the world and the necessity that something be done if we are to save world civilization today."

The pound sterling today lost part of the gains which it had made earlier in the week. The pound opened at $3.24¼, more than eight cents above the low of the week, but skidded to $3.20⅝ at the close.

Text of French Note Renewing Plea for Debt Postponement

Washington, D. C., Dec. 2.—[Special.]—This is the text of the French note repealing a request for revision of international debts and postponement of payments due Dec. 15.

"The attentive and reasoned study of the letter which your excellency addressed to me on Nov. 23 on the subject of the problem created by intergovernmental debts and payment of the installment due Dec. 15 has inspired on the part of the French government considerations and thoughts which it has instructed me to submit without delay to the most serious consideration of the federal government.

"My government notes first of all with satisfaction that the President finds himself disposed to recommend to the congress a new study of the question as a whole, which implies that in his opinion such study would seem necessary.

Cites Changed Conditions.

"The French government does not fail to realize that reduction of debts contracted by European powers towards the United States may react upon the American economic situation.

"It does not forget that an arrangement concerning its debts was consented to by the American government.

"On the other hand, one cannot contest that since this period the gravity of the financial and economic crisis which has raged throughout the world has forced all interested governments to modify their positions with respect to settlement of intergovernmental debts, and has led them to adopt a series of concerted measures which affect simultaneously reparations and debts and which are destined to meet the necessities exacted by existing circumstances.

"Without prejudicing the character and form which a new study of the problems growing out of settlement of intergovernmental debts might make, my government is happy to register the accord of the federal government concerning the motives which justify it—namely: the reductions of payments agreed to by the creditor nations at Lausanne, the increasing weight of debts resulting from the world economic depression, and the parallel fall of prices, the difficulty of obtaining foreign exchanges, and finally the influence which a solution of the debt question may exercise on the world situation.

Admits Rights of United States.

"The well founded nature of these motives is, moreover, so evident and the necessity of a new arrangement so pressing that it would be difficult to understand, the principle of revision being admitted, that there should be a fulfillment of an accord which is considered as no longer corresponding to the present situation.

"The French government desires to emphasize that it never has been in its mind to contest the juridical validity of the various engagements which are bound up with the origin of the war debts.

"My government desires to emphasize that the request for postponement as it has been presented implies a simple carrying over, leaving intact the rights of the parties concerned.

"It does not seem to it, consequently, to go beyond the proposal which President Hoover himself made in May, 1931. On the contrary, it appears to it to be a normal, equitable, necessary sequel.

"It was at the request of the president of Germany that President Hoover put forth on May 20, 1931, his proposal for postponement for one year of all intergovernmental debt payments, including reparations.

"On that occasion the federal government explained that it envisaged a moratorium on debts due it 'only on condition that there would be a similar adjournment for one year of payments on intergovernmental debts due the principal creditor powers.'

"The American memorandum made it clear that the burden of intergovernmental debts which could be supported in normal times weighed heavily in these times of crises.

"This initiative, as the French government has pointed out, caused direct prejudice to all existing agreements and notably suspended the working of the mechanism set up by the Young plan for settlement of reparations.

Situation Prolonged.

"The development of events has shown that this suspension, once consented to, was destined to be prolonged beyond the delay originally fixed.

"Furthermore, on the occasion of his trip to Washington the French premier reached an agreement with the President of the United States on the phraseology of a communique stating that with respect to intergovernmental debts a new arrangement covering the period of the depression might be necessary on condition that the initiative came from the European powers principally interested.

"In conformity with this text, which appeared to constitute something morally new with respect to the intergovernmental debt régime, this initiative was undertaken and, in so far as the European powers themselves were concerned, the arrangement suggested was brought about.

Germany Granted Big Reduction.

"Germany, the principal debtor, obtained in addition to diminution of her debt to a lump sum of three billion marks—tantamount to a reduction of about 90 per cent—a moratorium for three years.

"Believing that this settlement should become part of a general arrangement, the creditor European powers unanimously agreed that in any event the payments due them in the form of intergovernmental debts would be postponed until negotiation of a settlement of the problem as a whole.

"It would indeed be grave if the régime obtained with so much difficulty at Lausanne should have to be reconsidered.

"Would it not be equitable if, in the same spirit of international solidarity, with a view to consolidating the results already attained and to permitting completion of the work already undertaken, the federal government would accept in its turn the postponement of the payment due Dec. 15?

Quotes Hoover Statement.

"The imperious necessity which this work answers certainly has not escaped the attention of the federal government.

"In making his moratorium proposal in 1931 the President of the United States affirmed that the attitude of the federal authorities indicated their disposition to contribute to reëstablishment in the near future of world prosperity in which the American nation is so profoundly interested.

"'The duty of statesmen,' the Washington communique of Oct. 19 indicated, 'is not to overlook any means of practical coöperation for the common good. This principle is particularly important at a time when the world looks for leadership for relief from a depression which reaches countless homes.'

"The economic depression which inspired the proposal by the President of the United States and his appeal for collaboration among the peoples has grown worse since the spring of 1931. Everywhere misery and unemployment are increasing.

"This depression can only grow worse if payment of intergovernmental debts must be resumed before the coming of a general arrangement is provided for.

Admits Congress' Reservations.

"The French government is acquainted with the formal reservations made at the time of ratification of the Hoover moratorium by the American congress, whose prerogatives it has no intention of bringing into this discussion.

"But it should be recalled that the French parliament, on its part, has conditioned its approval on its own interpretation of the moratorium proposed by President Hover.

"It must also be recalled that the committee of experts which met at Basel in December, 1931, as a result of the Washington interview and on which sat an eminent American personality did not limit its work to reorganizing the momentary impossibility of Germany's meeting her reparations obligations.

"It unanimously condemned in formal manner as being especially pernicious to restoration of world economy the transfers of funds without a counterpart which the payment of war debts makes necessary.

Quotes Basel Report.

"That report concluded as follows:

"'In the first place, all transfers from one country to another on a scale so large as to upset the balance of payment can only accentuate the present chaos. It also should be borne in mind that the release of a debtor country from the burden of payment which it is unable to bear may merely have the effect of transferring that burden to a creditor country which in its character as a debtor it may be unable to bear.

"'Again, an adjustment of all intergovernmental debts to the existing troubled situation of the world—an adjustment which should take place without delay if new disasters are to be avoided—is the only lasting step capable of reëstablishing a confidence which is the very condition of economic stability and real peace."

"Guided by these general considerations, the French government accepted the Lausanne accord on condition that they would receive the approval of the French parliament.

Cuts French Revenue.

"Despite a budget deficit of nearly five hundred million dollars, the balancing of which already has necessitated and will necessitate in the future very stringent measures, France will thus have voluntarily abandoned an annual revenue, while paying her war debt, in the neighborhood of eighty-five million dollars, this in the interest of world economic restoration.

"She accepted this heavy sacrifice under the conviction that the payments provided for under the existing agreements could not be made without causing profound economic and financial perturbations.

"Her situation with respect to this has often been misunderstood and justifies detailed explanation.

"The flow of gold toward France in the last few years has been caused or made inevitable essentially because of conditions existing in the world. This gold does not belong to the French treasury. It is not for France a source of richness; it is a guarantee of all deposits French or foreign made in France. Its normal and desirable redistribution can only come after there is a general return of confidence and from needs which spring from this return of confidence.

"The slight improvement manifested after the Lausanne accords came from the hope of the peoples that a world settlement would come. The improvement which showed itself cannot continue if the next payment of intergovernmental payments is insisted upon.

"It should be noted that unless there is a radical shift in the American commercial balance with Europe, a balance which is today largely favorable to the United States, these payments would necessitate, because of progressive reduction of foreign revenues of debtor countries, an increasing number of operations—soon to be ruinous for the entire world—on the credit and exchange markets.

Doubts U. S. Would Gain.

"The French government is unable to believe that the American people would find in the end that it is in their interest to have fulfilled an agreement the strict application of which would have as its effect the creation of more chaos and misery in the world. The transfers of sums which do not correspond to the exchanges are liable profoundly to throw out of balance international relations.

"It is under the sway of these grave preoccupations, cognizant of responsibilities which weigh upon the great powers with respect to the safeguarding of the social and economic order that the French government asked of the federal government the 11th of November last the postponement of the payment of Dec. 15.

"In asking it to reëxamine its request in the light of the foregoing considerations, it deems that it is fulfilling a duty not only national but international.

Counts on U. S. Coöperation.

"It is fully conscious of the rôle which France is called up by circumstances to play in Europe. It has no intention of priding itself upon efforts it already has made for restoration of economic stability and resumption of business, nor upon the conditions in which it finds itself permitting cooperation toward these ends in the future, but it asks apprehensively how it can continue its efforts if the cooperation of the United States, upon which it thought it could count, fails to materialize.

"Such are the considerations which lead the French government today to renew through me to your excellency its earnest and considered request to examine again the application for supension of the payment due Dec. 15.

"The reception which will be given this request is awaited with confidence by my government, which realizes all the consequences which the decision of the President of the United States may have for improving or making worse the tragic situation resulting from the war."

HOOVER MOVED BY BRITISH PLEA; CONGRESS ISN'T

French Cite "Promise" by President.

that this commitment constituted an obligation superseding the war debts settlements. Says the French note:

"In conformity with this text which seems to constitute a novation in equity in the régime of international debts this initiative was taken. Within the sphere where only the European powers were involved the arrangeme. provided for has been brought about."

The creditors of Germany having reduced reparations to 10 cents on the dollar at Lausanne, France now calls on the President to come through with a commensurate reduction of war debts. It is to be noted, of course, that what is suggested in the Hoover-Laval communique is only a temporary ensing of the terms over the depression while the debtors are aiming at a permanent revision of debts.

The suspicion that Mr. Hoover went farther than this orally is founded on the statement of the administration spokesman following the conference that the President, asked by Laval what America would do if reparations were reduced, replied that America would do her part.

Smoot Sees Britain Hurt.

Senator Reed Smoot [Rep., Utah] said that if Great Britain carries out its threat to raise its tariff against American products the victim will be Britain, not the United States.

Senator William E. Borah [radical Rep., Ida.] agreed with the British presentation of world economic conditions, but asserted that debt revision alone would not ameliorate them.

"It is unfair," he said, "to ask the American taxpayers to contribute their part for the removal of these causes and leave behind causes which will make their contribution wholly ineffective. What the American taxpayer is entitled to have presented to him for his consideration is a program which will remove the causes, open up the markets of the world, and restore trade and commerce. The mere reduction or cancellation of the debts will not accomplish this."

IRELAND ASSAILS BRITISH ATTEMPT TO EVADE DEBT

DUBLIN, Irish Free State, Dec. 2.—(AP)—Great Britain's note to the United States again urging suspension of the next installment of war debts was the subject of a bitter editorial in today's Irish Press, a government organ.

"Britain acknowledges the debt and agrees, if driven to it, to pay in gold, which is the commodity it will most hurt the United States to receive," the newspaper said, "but she holds half a dozen pistols to America's head while calling on her to 'collect if you dare.' After which Britain condescendingly agrees to discuss with the American government how best the payments may be postponed."

The principles underlying the British note are diametrically opposite to those Britain is applying to the Free State, the newspaper continues.

"She is moved by no suggestion that the installments claimed from us are too great a burden for any people to bear," it says. "Not a day's quarter was given when the first disputed quarterly land annuities fell due. Britain at once leaped into war and began a blockade which she has ruthlessly maintained since.

"Again she threatens the United States with tariffs on American goods if America dares to collect from her a just debt. But because we refuse to allow her to collect a debt never due she claps a whole galaxy of tariffs upon us."

Three Army Men Killed in Honolulu Auto Crash

HONOLULU, Dec. 2.—(AP)—Three enlisted men of the army died today of injuries received in an automobile accident last night in which three other enlisted men were severely injured. The dead are Sam B. Nelson, 34; Harold J. Miller, 32, and Sergt. Paul D. Halley, 33. Nelson's father, H. H. Nelson, lives at Carthage, Ind. All the dead and injured were in one automobile. Police said the car was struck head-on by a machine driven at 65 miles an hour by James M. Munro, sailor, riding alone.

SOCIETY WOMEN FAIL IN CAPITAL 'HUNGER' MARCH

Can't See President; Meet Curtis Rebuff.

BY GENEVIEVE FORBES HERRICK.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 2.—[Special.]—Several lovely ladies from New York's social circles, several learned ladies with specs went today to the White House to present to President Hoover a petition on behalf of the hunger marchers now on their way to the capital.

They didn't get to see the President. Instead, Presidential Secretary Theodore Joslin said he'd accept the petition, "pass on its merits," and if he thought it the proper thing to do would send it on to his chief.

"You mean," queried Mrs. William B. Osgood Field Jr. [she lives in a pleasant pent house in New York], "that you'll use your own discretion?" There was ice in her chilly Newport accent.

"Precisely," replied Mr. Joslin, and there was firmness in his correct Boston accent.

Told to See Commissioners.

Then he added: "As a matter of fact, you ladies oughtn't to come here; you ought to go to the district commissioners. This whole proposition is a purely local matter; it is not a matter which should involve the federal government."

"It seems to me," murmured one of the women who does not live in a pent house, whose name is not in the social register, "that it was very much the concern of the federal government last summer when federal troops routed the bonus marchers with bombs and tear gas."

Mr. Joslin bowed out the delegation.

On the White House lawn the women paused while the cameramen snapped a closeup of the diamond brooches and the low-heeled brogues of the intellectuals. In the group were Mrs. Field, the spokesman; Mrs. Corliss Lamont, daughter-in-law of Banker Thomas W. Lamont; Mrs. Polly Chase Boyden, doughter of Chicago's Mr. and Mrs. Samuel T. Chase; Mrs. Belle Taub, Attorney Carol Weiss King, Miss Margaret Hatfield, Miss Sylvia Pennington, Miss Winifred Chappell, and Miss Helen Murray, all of New York.

"Taxpayers" Rebuffed.

Mrs. Field summed up the collective reaction to the incident when she remarked, "If we, who are taxpayers [she had three large diamonds in the pin at her throat] can't get in to see the President of the United States on a decent, dignified mission, what chance has the poor idle person?"

Then they went to call on Vice President Curtis.

"He stood up to receive us," Mrs. Taub said later, "but when we left, he slammed the door. That tells the story."

At this conference Mrs. Field again was spokesman. She read the three point petition; demanded a vice presidential answer to each point.

First: "Do the legislative and executive authorities realize that the right to petition is a fundamental right of the people of this country, guaranteed in Article 1 of the amendments of the constitution?"

"Yes," said Mr. Curtis.

"Stop, Think It Over."

Second: "Do they realize that this basic right of petition has particular significance in view of the fact that during the present crisis the federal government is the logical court of last resort for relief because of the unscientific and inadequate nature of private relief measures?"

"Absolutely, no." Mr. Curtis was emphatic. "And if you'll stop to think it over, you'll realize that I'm right."

Third: "Will the representatives of the idle of this country who are now on their way to Washington be able to exercise in safety their constitutional right to present their grievance to congress?"

To this Mr. Curtis replied: "Two delegates appearing before a congressional committee can accomplish more than a big demonstration."

Then he spoke about the evils of denouncing government; and the ingratitude of the bonus marchers last year who, "just after I had signed a permit for them to assemble, rushed away and denounced me."

But what most riled the women was the vice presidential remark that "if people ask for things nicely they get them."

"Isn't he naive?" commented one of the ladies, giving the word its most Frenchy pronunciation.

POLICE BATTLE "HUNGER MARCH" CROWD IN HALL

Wilmington, Del., Dec. 2.—(AP)—Four policemen were injured and more than a score of persons were arrested in a fight tonight between police and demonstrators at a hall in which more than a hundred women who termed themselves "hunger marchers" had been quartered for the night.

Police reserves were called out and tear gas was used before authorities gained control of the situation.

The fight was precipitated when some person threw a bottle at a policeman who was standing guard over a meeting being held outside the hall. The bottle struck him on the head. Two other policemen tried to drive the demonstrators into the hall, but were beaten.

GRANTS BONUS SEEKERS PERMIT TO MARCH TODAY

Commissioner of Police Allman yesterday granted a permit to the members of the bonus expeditionary force in Chicago to parade this morning on the south side. The marchers, estimated at more than 1,000, will assemble at Ashland avenue and 22d street at 9 a. m. They will proceed south to 95th street, east to State street, and south again to 115th street. There they will board an Illinois Central train which will take them to Danville, according to information given to the police. The marchers are traveling to Washington, D. C.

U. S. DOCUMENTS ON INSULL CASE REACH ATHENS

Court Hearings May Begin Next Week.

BY DAVID DARRAH.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ATHENS, Greece, Dec. 2.—The long awaited presidential warrant for the arrest of Samuel Insull, the request for his extradition to the United States, and depositions of the evidence on which the indictments of embezzlement and larceny against him were returned, arrived here today.

The documents were studied by Leland B. Morris, American chargé d'affaires, preliminary to transmitting them to the Greek foreign office. Morris locked himself in at the American legation, and it could not be learned when he would put the documents in the hands of the Greek authorities.

Andrew J. Vlachos and Charles A. Bellows, assistant state's attorneys of Cook county, Illinois, called at the legation this afternoon. It was said they did not discuss the documents with Morris and probably will not until their translation into Greek is completed.

The two Chicago prosecutors brought unofficial duplicates of the documents which arrived today and Vlachos, who has been working on the translation steadily, expected to have them completed Sunday so the English and Greek texts would be available for submission to the foreign office Monday or Tuesday. The translations must then be examined by an official foreign office translator and their accuracy formally certified.

It appeared probable they would be in the hands of the prosecutor of the Athens Court of Appeals by Thursday and that the court would be convened for the first hearing next Friday. As soon as the documents are filed with the court, Insull's Greek lawyer, Cristos Ladas, will have access to them to prepare his defense.

Insull was informed tonight that the papers demanding his extradition had arrived. He said, as usual, that he had nothing to say. The old man appeared unruffled by the prospect that next week he must make his final stand before the Greek courts to fight extradition.

M. J. Insull Gets New Delay.

BARRIE, Ont., Dec. 2.—(AP)—Martin J. Insull, whose extradition to Chicago is sought on charges of larceny and embezzlement, was granted another delay by Judge Dudley Holmes today until Feb. 7. It was the third adjournment of the proceedings, and Insull returned to his Orillia boarding house again released on $50,000 bail.

Joseph Sedgewick, acting for the state of Illinois, sought the adjournment on grounds that a "political disturbance" there had caused difficulty in getting the "necessary papers and instructions from Cook county authorities."

He said "the state's attorney at Cook county has resigned and we are experiencing difficulty to proceed."

[Assistant State's Attorney John Hampton, who has been handling the Insull case in Chicago, resigned Thursday to enter private practice.]

J. C. McRuer, counsel for Insull, said if depositions did not come forward he may make application for discharge of his client.

HOOVER MEETING WITH REPORTERS IS ABANDONED

Washington, D. C., Dec. 2.—[Special.]—The semi-weekly press conferences held regularly during the Harding and Coolidge administrations virtually have been abandoned in recent months by President Hoover. Although the President followed the custom set down by his immediate Republican predecessors during the first three years of his occupancy of the White House, few conferences have been held in the last six months.

According to press room records the last 16 scheduled conferences with the President have been canceled. It was thought the President would resume these semi-weekly meetings with the press following the election, but since that time each conference has been called off. From sources close to the President it was learned that he has not been wholly satisfied with the results of his contacts with the press en masse. Often more than 100 correspondents attended White House conferences when important news developments were afoot.

A year ago President Hoover would have talked to the press regarding the British-French appeals for debt revision. No official explanation has been given at the White House for the President's failure to meet the press. Under present conditions such official news as comes from the White House reaches reporters through Theodore Joslin, White House secretary.

12,000 Sq. Mi. of Gold Claims Filed in Labrador

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

HARBOR GRACE, Newfoundland, Dec. 2.—More than 12,000 square miles of claims have been staked and further large areas of gold bearing ores have been discovered in Labrador, the Newfoundland minister of mines announced today. The new auriferous areas are situated about 150 miles east of the location of Capt. D. S. Bondurant's initial claim. The discovery was made by a party of persons who for the last four years have been prospecting in the interest of an American company.

WANZER'S MILK at 9¢ a quart

WHAT IT MEANS TO CHICAGO FAMILIES

For 75 years the Wanzer Company has been serving the families of Chicago with milk and dairy products. During those many years the company has repeatedly pioneered in improving the city's milk supply.

Now the price of milk has been reduced to 9 cents a quart, as a result of the cooperation of the producers, drivers and dealers. There is absolutely no change in the quality of Wanzer's milk. It continues to be the finest milk that can be produced.

The present reduction, which amounts to over 18% for milk, comes at an opportune time. It will enable families to use more milk and keep their food budgets down. For young and old alike, milk is the ideal food. Use it oftener—use it in a wide variety of inexpensive dishes—drink it with meals. See that your children have it in sufficient quantities. Whatever other items you cut down on, don't skimp on milk.

To every family that does not know the high quality and rich flavor of Wanzer's milk, we offer this suggestion. Try Wanzer's now. Simply phone Boulevard 7900 (for all branches) and service will start at once.

SENATORS HEAR NEW ATTACK ON SEAWAY TREATY

Railway Labor Men Voice Their Opposition.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 2.—[Special.]—A new barrage of opposition to ratification of the St. Lawrence seaway treaty was registered before the senate foreign relations subcommittee today by spokesmen for organized railway labor, the Mississippi Valley association, and the New York chamber of commerce.

The organized labor groups, headed by D. B. Robertson, representing twenty-one standard railway unions, urged the committee to reject the treaty outright and abandon the idea to joint American development of the St. Lawrence river for navigation and power. Cleveland Newton for the Mississippi Valley association and Walter Williams, president of the Illinois state chamber of commerce, urged the treaty be revamped to eliminate the section limiting the Chicago water diversion to 1,500 cubic second feet.

Others Commend Project.

The opposition to the treaty was spread on the record in between a deluge of favorable testimony presented under the auspices of the Great Lakes Tidewater association. Among those who strongly urged immediate ratification of the treaty was former Gov. Theodore Christianson of Minnesota, James E. Davidson of Bay City, Mich., vice president of the American Shipbuilding company; Perry W. Jenkins, state senator of Wyoming; Elbert H. Baker, publisher of the Cleveland Plain Dealer; Roy S. MacElwee, consulting engineer, and A. O. Carton, director of the Bureau of Agricultural industry of Michigan.

So many witnesses were marshaled by the Great Lakes Tidewater association and other proponents of the pact that the committee today shut down on the time permitted opponents of the treaty in order to give more time at this stage of the investigation to the affirmative side. Over his objections Mr. Newton was forced by Senator Walsh to curtail his testimony to thirty minutes, and Mr. Williams was permitted but ten minutes to tell his story. As explanation the Montana senatorial advocate of the treaty told Mr. Newton that some of the proponents of the pact were threatening to leave unless allowed to get on the witness stand. He said that if Mr. Newton wanted more time he would have to wait until some later date.

Asked to Attend Monday.

Both Mr. Newton and Mr. Williams called the attention of the committee to telegrams forwarded to them last week by Chairman William E. Borah [Rad. Rep., Idaho] directing them to be in Washington Monday.

No explanation ever has been given by Chairman Borah or by other senators for the action of the committee in reversing normal procedure so that the opponents of the treaty had to state their case prior to the appearance of the proponents for the pact.

On his return to the committee room this afternoon Chairman Borah interrupted the testimony of Mr. MacElwee to permit Mr. Robertson and W. H. Coverdale, consulting engineer for the New York state chamber of commerce, to testify. As spokesmen for the class one railroads of the country have already demanded rejection of the treaty, Mr. Robertson's appearance lined up both railway executives and railway labor against the pact.

Sees Harm to Railways.

"I appear," said Mr. Robertson, "as a representative of the Railway Labor Executives' association, which is composed of the chief executives of the twenty-one standard railway labor organizations. Our position is that this project is not justified by economic necessity, would adversely affect labor conditions in the rail industry, and would tend to break down our present rail transportation system. It would mean the taxing of railroad employes to subsidize an enterprise that would eventually eliminate them from railroad service."

Mr. Newton faced a hostile committee from the time he took the stand until the committee time ruling shunted him to one side to permit the appearance of an advocate of the pact. He was interrupted repeatedly as he registered charges that the United States had lost a diplomatic victory to Canada when the treaty was negotiated and that its ratification would wreck the last hope of the Mississippi valley for a useful lakes to the gulf waterway. Newton charged under constant heckling that the lake states opposing the Chicago water diversion had stimulated much of the Canadian opposition to the allowance of sufficient water at Chicago for a successful lakes to the gulf waterway.

Mr. Newton rapidly sketched the long history of the Chicago water diversion together with the opposition it has caused in Canada and the lake states. He pointed also to the unequal division of power at Niagara, where the United States gets 20,000 cubic feet of water and Canada 36,000. He asserted the extra water represented compensation given Canada for the Chicago diversion. With the foregoing as a background Mr. Newton asserted that the treaty represented a surrender of the Chicago diversion by the United States without Canada giving up the power advantage at Niagara.

"On the Canadian side, with the new treaty, Canada will get 41,000 second feet and on our side of the lake we will get 22,425 feet," he asserted.

Mr. Newton said that he was not convinced that Canada would refuse to sign a new treaty if the present one was rejected.

Opposition to Waterway.

"We have a lot of influences againt our lakes to the gulf waterway right around the great lakes," he said. "I think Canada wants to be fair, and I think most of the opposition has been stimulated on the Canadian side by this row between Milwaukee and other cities with the Chicago drainage district."

During his restricted testimony Mr. Williams said the Illinois state chamber of commerce favored the seaway but opposed ratification of the Hoover-Bennett treaty now before the senate. This opposition, he said, was due to the fact that "the diversion allowed by the treaty was insufficient to operate the Illinois waterway, that the treaty was too indefinite regarding future prospects for increasing the diversion, and that the treaty surrenders American exclusive sovereignty over Lake Michigan."

TRADE GROUP IN SUBURB TO ISSUE OWN CURRENCY

In the hope of increasing spending at home a group of business and professional men and women of Park Ridge at a meeting last night adopted a plan to issue strictly local currency.

This currency, in the form of $10 certificates, is to be offered for sale within a week. The certificates are to be valid for all purchases and payments of services with those who cooperate in the plan. At present the total issue will be limited to $1,000, more to be issued if the project meets with success.

The local welfare organization will be allowed to buy $100 worth of the certificates at a 50 per cent discount. Any certificate not used once every seven days will be subject to a 5 per cent discount. At the end of twenty weeks the issue will be redeemed at par in United States money.

CHILD IS SAFE, A LETTER FROM KIDNAPER SAYS

Rensselaer, Ind., Dec. 2.—[Special.]—A letter from the kidnapers of Patricia Pearl Tripp, 4, has been received by Mr. and Mrs. Hamlin Smith assuring them that the child is "safe and unharmed," Tone Kanne, Jasper county sheriff, said today. The note was mailed yesterday from Hammond to the grandparents, who live near here and from whose home the girl was kidnaped.

Kanne said tonight he now has a definite clew, but declined to disclose its nature.

Illinois Manufacturers Start Hearings.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

The St. Lawrence seaway treaty, pending in Washington, was placed under study yesterday by the Illinois Manufacturers' association with a view of ascertaining what adverse effect the treaty, in its present form, may have upon the Illinois waterway, soon to be opened, and upon manufacturing and commerce in the middle west, now suffering from seaboard compression generated by the Panama canal.

The sentiment of manufacturers in Illinois is being gathered by the association, and hearings are under way at which both sides are being presented. Advocates of the treaty as it stands have been heard by a special committee and next week the opponents are to place their arguments. At a meeting of the board of directors Dec. 13 the association is expected to assume a definite policy on the treaty, on which a senate subcommittee is now holding hearings in Washington.

Manufacturers in some other valley states are reported to be planning similar action.

Meanwhile, opponents of the diversion article in the treaty, renewed the arguments advanced at the recent St. Louis meeting of the Mississippi Valley association, representing 24 valley states, that it would leave the Illinois waterway, on which $107,000,000 has been spent, without water enough for navigation. The arguments, which waterway advocates are expected to place before the Manufacturers' association with a view of showing how midwest industry and agriculture would be adversely affected cover the following general lines:

1. Article 3 is based on a diversion of 1,500 cubic second feet from Lake Michigan by Dec. 31, 1938, embodying the terms of the United States Supreme court decision, which dealt with sanitation but not navigation.

2. Goverment engineers have testified that a diversion of at least 5,000 cubic second feet is necessary for the waterway, unless it is to become "a noisome sewer" on which traffic would be impossible. Article 3 allows only 1,500 diversion, plus pumpage, which is about 1,800 feet, a total of 3,300 cubic second feet.

Attack Lake Michigan Clause.

3. Article 3 would vitiate a state department policy, and would give away control of Lake Michigan, which is inside the United States and not a boundary water.

4. To ratify the treaty with Article 3 would take from congress its rights to prescribe diversion for navigation purposes and would supersede the treaty of 1909, on Niagara river power use, which was based on a 10,000 cubic second feet diversion at Chicago.

Opponents of the treaty have been delving into the records of the treaty making of 1910, which were brought out in amplitude in the sanitary district case.

At present, under the treaty of 1909-'10, Canada has a diversion of 36,000 cubic second feet from the Niagara river for power and the American side of the river has 20,000. The difference of 16,000 feet between Canada's diversion of 36,000 feet from the Niagara river and the 20,000 on the American side is charged to the fact that in making the existing treaty the two governments recognized a 10,000 foot diversion at Chicago.

Tell Why There's Difference.

When the international waterways commission, with three Canadian and three American members, made its report in 1906, it set forth that the difference at Niagara in favor of Canada was allowed as compensation for what was then regarded as necessary diversion at Chicago. The three American commissioners recommended diversions from the great lakes as follows:

BY THE UNITED STATES.

	Cu. feet.
Niag. Falls Hydroelec. Power Co.	9,500
Niagara Falls Power Co.	8,600
Erie canal	400
Chicago drainage canal	10,000
	28,500

BY CANADA.

	Cu. feet.
Canada-Niagara Power Co.	9,500
Ontario Power Co.	12,000
Electric Development Co.	13,200
Niagara Falls Park Ry.	1,500
Welland canal	1,800
	38,000

The three Canadian commissioners made similar recommendations, saying "if our proposal is carried out, the diversion will be":

AMERICAN SIDE.

	Cu. feet.
Niagara Falls	18,500
Chicago drainage canal	10,000
	28,500

CANADIAN SIDE.

	Cu. feet.
Niagara Falls and Peninsula	36,000

Basis for Chicago Diversion.

On the basis of the joint commission's report the treaty of 1910 was drawn up. It put the diversion at Niagara Falls in round numbers, giving Canada 36,000 cubic feet and the American side 20,000. The diversion at Chicago of 10,000 feet was not specifically mentioned in the treaty because Lake Michigan is not a boundary water, as set forth by Elihu Root, then secretary of state, who said, explaining the treaty:

"I think that 36,000 feet can be taken out on the Canadian side and 18,500 on the American side without injury to Niagara Falls. I thought it wise to follow the report of the commission and put in 1,500 feet in addition to get round numbers, so our limit is higher than we want.

"There is this further fact why we could not object to this 36,000 cubic feet on the Canadian side: We are now taking 10,000 cubic feet per second out of Lake Michigan at Chicago and I refused to permit them to say anything about Lake Michigan.

"I would not have anything in the treaty about it, and under the circumstances I thought it better not to kick about this 36,000. They consented to leave out of the treaty any reference to the drainage canal, and we are now taking 10,000 cubic feet per second for this drainage canal, which really comes out of the lake system."

CREW REMOVED FROM SINKING BRITISH VESSEL

New York, Dec. 2.—[Special.]—The four surviving members of the crew of the crippled British schooner Clemencia were taken from her today and the schooner was abandoned, sinking after the French liner De Grasse had stood by for five hours in the storm-tossed Atlantic before daring to try the transfer. A wireless from the De Grasse told of the rescue and added that one man on the Clemencia was drowned when storms crippled her Tuesday.

The abandoned ship, which is about 250 miles out of New York, is a menace to navigation, the wireless said.

RUSSIA PERMITS SOME PEASANTS TO SELL GRAIN

MOSCOW, Dec. 2.—(AP)—The council of people's commissars and the central committee of the communist party today issued a decree permitting all collective and individual peasants in the Moscow province and the Tartar republic immediately to sell their surplus grain in private markets.

Although these regions contribute relatively small proportions of the nation's total grain, the order was significant in that they are the only ones which have supplied all the government's grain "collections"—that is the part of the crop the state requires peasants to furnish at fixed prices.

SHIP GROUNDED IN ST. LAWRENCE; FOURTH IN WEEK

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MONTREAL, Que., Dec. 2.—The fourth steamer to go aground in the St. Lawrence river between Montreal and Quebec this week while en route to the sea was reported today. The steamship Wearwood, a freighter filled with grain, struck the shore line near St. Amelie. The vessel was refloated two hours later.

Men and boats were still at work trying to free the freighter Cairndhu, which went aground in shallow waters two days ago. Two other steamers, the Dombey and Wanstead, were forced into the shallows Wednesday, but succeeded in freeing themselves.

SAVE FOUNDATION OF THE LAW, U. S. BAR CHIEF WARNS

Tells Illinois Body of Peril in Progressivism.

Charles E. Martin, president of the American Bar association, last night warned lawyers against being led into fostering radical changes of our legal system under the guise of supporting progressive measures. Mr. Martin, an attorney of Martinsburg, W. Va., was the principal speaker before the mid-winter meeting of the Illinois State Bar association at the Stevens hotel.

The fundamental rules of justice are based upon and find their origin in the natural law which is the manifestation of the eternal law, he said. Against these rules there are groups working to change the basic concepts and substitute for them new theories of relative rights and duties of men, under cloak of progressivism.

Called Refuge of Radical.

While progressivism is used more frequently than otherwise for the public good, yet the movement has become the refuge of the radical, the citadel of the Socialist, and the hope of the communist, he said. He held complete change should be made only when precedent is out of gear, when it is plainly wrong and completely at variance with the truth.

"We are forever asking ourselves in this present age, in view of the complexities of our problems, whether the civilization of our forefathers shall endure and whether we are strong enough to face the future confident that the basic concepts of justice will stand the strain and advance to the ultimate triumph of truth," he said. "That defects exist in the body of the law is true. Our object and purpose is to reduce them to a minimum.

Preserve the True, He Warns.

"The present duty of the American bench and bar is to maintain the fundamentals from assault from without and intriguing falsities from within: to bring order out of conflicting notions; to preserve the true and discard the false; to strive for celerity of action and uniformity of decision. Let us never forget the law is not based on works of economists or the conceptions of sociologists, however high we may regard them, but upon legal principles, solidly considered and applied in accordance with legal wisdom. We must not indulge in or attempt the perpetuations of friction and principles to the detriment of ultimate justice."

Chief Justice Oscar E. Heard of the Illinois Supreme court urged the lawyers to work out some form of pay check for teachers which will be redeemable at par. He blamed the reassessment as the basis of failure to pay teachers and other governmental problems in the county.

Heard Cites "Noble Experiment."

Chief Justice Heard declared it is far easier to enact a good law than counteract the effects of a bad one. In addition to the reassessment he cited "the noble experiment, the effects of which are being felt throughout the width and breath of the land."

Other speakers were June C. Smith, president of the state bar association, and Charles P. Megan, president of the Chicago Bar association.

FIREBUG STARTS HIS FOURTH FIRE IN FOUR NIGHTS

A firebug started his fourth incendiary fire in four nights last night in West Chicago and laid a trail of kindling and gasoline soaked rags from the garage which he fired to St. Mary's Roman Catholic church. There were 1,100 persons attending a service in the church at the time.

The fire was started in the private garage of the Rev. John Conley, pastor of the church. A janitor found it and put it out before it got well started.

As a result of the pyromaniac's activities members of the volunteer fire department in West Chicago have been gathering nightly at their firehouse to wait for calls. Police are searching for the man, but have made no arrests.

Three barns have been destroyed in the town in the last four days. On Tuesday night 48 chickens perished in the barn of Karl Lange. On Wednesday night Mrs. Joseph Horn lost furniture valued at $1,000 which she had in storage in her barn when it burned. A barn belonging to the William Hunt estate was destroyed on Thursday night.

OFFICIAL BALKS AUDIT AT MORTON HIGH, IS CHARGE

Harry V. Church, superintendent of the J. Sterling Morton high school in Cicero, declared yesterday that he and a representative of an auditing concern had been unable to make an audit of the books of the school's board because of lack of coöperation by Joseph A. Becker, controller for the board. Mr. Church had been authorized to make the audit for a citizens' committee, which has alleged extravagance in school affairs.

"Mr. Becker failed to meet us today," said the superintendent. "He said that he couldn't do much to help us without two office employés, who are ill. One of these employés is Miss Blanche Svoboda, daughter of the president of the school board. In my own opinion the board wants to stall the audit until next April, when a new school board will be elected."

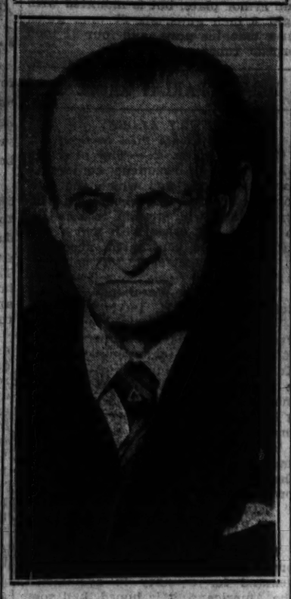
St. Louis, Mo., Dec. 2.—(AP)—St. Louis police said today that Walter Binderer, 26, released fourteen months ago from Leavenworth penitentiary after serving a term for violation of the Dyer act, confessed committing a series of holdups in and about Chicago following his arrest today.

Wins Will Contest



DR. EDMUND J. BOLIO.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

Judge Craig A. Hood in the Circuit court yesterday upheld the 55 year old will under which Dr. Edmund J. Bolio, 89 years old, a Detroit physician, is claiming the $55,000 estate of Mrs. Ida Marcoux, who died in Chicago in June, 1928.

Dr. Bolio asserted he found the will in a family Bible, years after it was executed by Mrs. Marcoux. She wrote it, he asserted, at the age of 7., leaving all her property to him because of kindnesses he had shown her.

The case has been in litigation for two years, first in the Probate and then in the Circuit court. Assistant State's Attorney Edgar B. Elder has attempted to claim the estate for the state of Illinois, on the contention that Mrs. Marcoux left no heirs-at-law. He produced testimony of handwriting experts in proof of a charge that the will was a forgery.

GREEN DENIES HE SEEKS LABOR POST IN CABINET

Action Paves Way for Consideration of Tobin

Cincinnati, O., Dec. 2.—[Special.]—At the closing session of the American Federation of Labor's convention today, President William Green announced that he was not a candidate for the position of secretary of labor in the Roosevelt administration.

By his voluntary action at this time, Mr. Green paved the way for consideration by President Elect Roosevelt of Daniel J. Tobin, president of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, who managed the labor bureau of the Democratic campaign. Mr. Tobin, it was said here today by his associates, has the indorsement of virtually the entire labor federation and the pledges of nearly all the leaders of national and international unions.

Recalls Gompers' Statement.

Mr. Green's statement today was in response to repeated inquiries from many sources which had assumed that he was a contender for the cabinet post in the next administration. He declared emphatically that "under no circumstances" would he accept any "political appointment or preferment," and recalled that when the late Samuel Gompers, his predecessor, had been asked to take a public office he replied: "I am president of the American Federation of Labor, and no greater honor can be conferred on me." That was the precedent Mr. Green said he would follow.

The statement was made just before adjournment of the session at which Mr. Green and the present staff of officers were reëlected.

Name Trade Congress Delegates.

Thomas E. Burke of Washington, secretary-treasurer of the United Association of Plumbers and Steamfitters, and Christian M. Madison of Chicago, of the International Brotherhood of Painters, were chosen as fraternal delegates to the next meeting of the British Trade Union congress, and James C. Quinn of the United Hatters of North America and secretary of the New York Central Trades and Labor council, was elected fraternal delegate to the Canadian Trades and Labor congress.

Washington was selected as the convention city for 1933 and on that occasion the Samuel Gompers memorial will be unveiled.

Shenstone road, Riverside, Ill. Patient springs from apparently superior stock; a family of education, refinement, and culture. Patient's father a fairly prosperous manufacturer of woodenware and his stepmother, a well read woman, active in local educational circles, live modestly with patient and the deceased stepgrandmother in the family's own two story bungalow at 264 Shenstone road, Riverside, a quiet suburb of Chicago.

Family Highly Regarded.

"The family is very highly regarded in the community, where they have resided for the last ten years. Patient had a room of his own, where he tinkered with his hobby of radio. His reading was supervised carefully by his stepmother, until last summer, when he indulged heavily in a spree of detective stories of the best type and adventure stories, especially of the South sea islands. He entered into the family activities enthusiastically, seldom withdrawing from the family group to the seclusion of his own room.

"The home atmosphere was essentially harmonious. The parents got along well together, both agreeing in their ideas and methods of training the children. From reliable investigation from friends of the family, friends of the patient, his minister, Sunday school teacher, parental discipline was not too severe and not more stringent than that imposed upon his associates, but it was consistently enforced.

Use of Car Forbidden.

"He was expected to be home by 10 p. m. on week nights, and 11 o'clock p. m. on Saturday nights. The use of the family car was forbidden him. He was granted an allowance of $1 per week, with an additional allowance for special occasions. No questions were asked him regarding the disposition of his money. Patient made a smooth adjustment in the home.

"The support between the patient and his stepmother was excellent. Not only did the patient express his fondness for her by a display of affection, but he made her his confidant. His father he regarded rather in the light of an authority inclined towards severity. His liking for his stepgrandmother, whom he is charged with spontaneously killing, was a well know fact. In his spare moments he played with his half sister and brother, though the stepmother stated that at times while working at his bench he would express his irritation at his 3 year old half brother's interference by pushing him away.

Father "Rather Nervous."

"Patient's father, Charles B. Arnold, age 41, American born of American Presbyterian extraction, is the president of Seymour & Peck, woodenware manufacturers of 917 West 30th place. He is in good health, and "rather nervous," according to his own statement. Was apparently well controlled, judging from his actions at the present time.

"His first wife died at the time of the patient's birth. He and his present wife, to whom he has been married for eleven years, got along very harmoniously. The father stated that the restrictions placed on the patient were no more severe than those imposed upon his associates.

The father of the patient appeared to be of superior intelligence, refined, understanding, objective in attitude and most cooperative.

Fond of Mrs. Arnold.

"Patient has always expressed and displayed a great fondness for Mrs. Arnold, whom he has regarded as his own mother. His attitude toward her has been one of friendliness and confidence and admiration.

"She in turn presented an intelligent and understanding attitude toward the patient. When he would chafe at discipline which he thought unfair, she would discuss the matter with him until they arrived at an agreement. For example: When the patient remonstrated that one dollar allowance was insufficient, Mrs. Arnold explained the financial status and worked out the family budget with him.

"Patient was born several weeks before a full term of pregnancy. Labor was so difficult that patient's mother died within three weeks after his birth from complications which set in. For a few months after birth patient was breast fed by a wet nurse, and then bottle fed. He was a healthy child, though always rather slight in weight. He walked and talked at the average time.

"Until the patient's father's second marriage, when patient was 5 years of age, he was shifted from one relative to another, first with his maternal grandmother, and then with a maternal aunt, his father being in the army at this time. Upon his father's return, he was cared for by a nurse in the home.

"As a child he was frequently truant from home, but never stayed away over night. Up to the age of ten, he had a very bad temper.

"The patient started school at the age of 6 in New Jersey, where the family was living at that time.

His Work in School.

"His parents moved to Riverside when the patient was 7. He started the elementary school there in the second grade, graduating from the Riverside Grammar school in June, 1930, at the age of 14. Up to the fourth grade his scholarship was so good that he was doubly promoted from grade 4 to six. In the 6th, 7th, and 8th grades, his marks were average."

"The patient was not a disciplinary problem in school. He got along well with his schoolmates among whom he was liked. The patient played the clarinet in a school band, entered but slightly in the extra curricular, having been a member of the debating club and boys' council, both sponsored by the dean of boys last year.

"Because of his slight stature, and a flat footed condition, the patient could not successfully compete in athletics. The patient's chemistry teacher stated that the patient was an average student in his class, not unlike any of the other pupils. He was rather spasmodic, though not "moody" in his work. If prodded he accomplished his work in a more satisfactory manner. Though no disciplinary problem in the classroom, one had to speak to him occasionally to pay attention.

"He exhibited an extremely vivid but logical imagination in class and seemed to prefer the theoretical rather than the practical side of chemistry.

"Impressions of the patient's personality from the various informants conflict in some degree. Certain salient features, however, in all the descriptions of the patient merge. He was a friendly, sociably inclined youngster, mixed well with the group, rather talkative, confiding and very affectionate. None of his associates or his parents could remember any unusual outburst of temper. His father stated that perhaps because of his stature, the patient evaded rather than initiated any fights. His closest boy friend stated that when the patient became angry at any of the boys he would usually become sullen and walk away rather than start a fight.

"Never Shirked a Fight."

"He has never, however, shirked a fight when forced into one. His was a rather impulsive, good natured personality, sympathetic and generous. All the informants agreed that the patient was rather 'high strung,' that is, somewhat hyperactive, quick moving, and rather sensitive. As a child he always liked to be kept busy in order to keep him out of mischief.

"Though his companions never noticed any emotional displays, his stepmother stated that the patient was quite emotional, that is, his moods would vary, though not to an extreme, from a short period of depression when he was refused a wish to a period of elation in which he would become very enthusiastic over an idea or event. Though the patient was not addicted to lying, he was inclined to stretch a point in order to impress his companions with his own importance. He seemed to value the opinion of his friends in regard to his ability and possessions.

Spreads Stories to Friends.

"During the week and a half before the offense, the patient had spread several stories among his friends that he was going to come into possession of considerable money within a short time. He bet with one school friend that by the following week he would have in his possession one hundred dollars. During that week he had also told his companions that his parents were leaving for Denver and had given him the use of the car and a checking account of one hundred dollars. On the basis of his stories the mothers of several of his friends had invited him to dinner while his parents were supposedly away.

"His stepmother noticed that for a few weeks prior to his arrest he had requested and begged for the use of the car repeatedly, reverting to the subject at every opportunity despite his parents' insistence on refusing. He had told his stepmother that he was going to start saving in order to buy a car.

"Matured Very Rapidly."

"During the past year the patient appears to have grown and matured very rapidly. Until this last year he had always seemed 'a little boy.' Childlike in physical appearance, interest and behavior. During the past year he has gained several inches in stature, his voice has changed, he has exhibited an interest in the opposite sex and attempted to assert himself as an adult.

"The patient has an enormous appetite, slept well, was neat about his person, smoked only occasionally and used no intoxicating liquor. He associated with a group of about 15 or 20 about his own age, classmates and neighbors in Riverside. His two closest friends appear to be bright, healthy youngsters, popular and leaders in school activities.

Home Four Nights Weekly.

"The patient was expected to be home four nights of the week. On Sunday nights he usually attended the Sunday School Round Table. The other two nights, Friday and Saturday, he went out with his school friends, usually to a dance, movie or visit among themselves. The patient had always done a great amount of reading, his literature supervised by his parents until last year.

"The last summer, when he could not attend camp because of the family's financial reverses, he spent most of his time reading any and all books in the Riverside Public library, mostly detective and mystery stories. He also read considerably on radio. He read rapidly and was able to digest the contents of a book upon casual perusal. He subscribed to such magazines as the American Boy and Youth's Companion, read also other magazines in the home, such as the Atlantic, Mercury, and Harper's.

"The patient's great hobby was radio. He enjoyed mechanics of all kinds, but was not daft in the manipulation of his fingers. He also enjoyed playing poker and blackjack with the boys after school.

"Until last summer the patient attended a supervised boys' camp in Minnesota for the last five years. He was greatly disappointed in his inability to attend this last summer because of the financial condition of the family. He was given a regular allowance of $1 a week.

"He usually spent this amount at the beginning of the week and frequently had to borrow small sums, such as 5, 10 and 25 cents, from his companions. According to his associates the patient never complained that he did not have sufficient money. None of his associates had much more. The patient carried his lunch to school.

Interest in Girls.

"During the last year the patient had exhibited an interest in the opposite sex, though not to any markod degree. It was well known that he enjoyed the company of girls, liked to take them out and dance with them. He was especially fond of one girl, age 16, an attractive, intelligent girl evidently well bred. She stated that the patient seemed to adjust himself well among the girls, was affectionate, but 'always the gentleman' and rather good company.

"He did not appear to be girl crazy. The patient was an active member of the Riverside Presbyterian church, Sunday school and Christian Endeavor society. He had joined the church of his own volition and seemed to derive satisfaction from his activities as a member.

"Though the patient was no disciplinary problem in the classroom, on the day before the offense, Nov. 17, 1932, he had difficulty with his teacher of French and when reprimanded in the classroom wrote the following note on his French examination paper which he handed back to the teacher.

"'Madam: If you cannot use more judgment than you have I should think you would resign your position. If you have it in for me I would be perfectly willing to drop French. After this if you want to see me I will be perfectly willing to come in after school. . . .

And Then "Forget It."

"Upon her written reply expressing her willingness to discuss that problem again at any time, the patient returned the paper on Nov. 18, with the written words, 'Forget it.'

"That afternoon after class the patient attended a school football game, where he joined in the hilarity with the other students, appearing in no way unduly excited or peculiar except in the following respects: That afternoon he refused to don his uniform and play in the school band for the football game.

"Before leaving the group to go home he again assured them, as he had previously boasted, that he would have the car to take them and their respective girl friends to the church dance that evening.

"One of the patient's companions, on the day of the offense, impressed on the patient to be sure to have the car and to have money. The patient was obligated to this boy, who had on several occasions driven the patient to dances and had bought sodas for the group after the dances.

"The patient was first seen by the examiners on Nov. 21, 1932, in the offices of the coroner of Cook county. He was very cooperative, did not appear to be emotionally upset, and cooperated to the utmost. He told of his past life, and corroboration of these statements showed they were true.

Says He Was Mischievous.

"He told them he was mischievous as a boy and ran away from home frequently between the ages of 6 and 10. 'Took it in his head that his folks treated him badly.' He stated that his father was strict, but from the age of 10 he and his father had been close pals. He had an idea that other children had greater privileges than he. Up to the age of 10 he had had a very bad temper, but this temper was curbed after he was sent to camp. Since going to camp he has been much better."

The report quotes Arnold on his early attitude toward his family and says he admits "flying off the handle" occasionally.

"During the first interview the photographers of the newspapers took pictures of him. After they had left he told the examiners, 'Strange I did not have a good picture for five years, but I hope they put a keen one in the paper.' He stated that he had daydreams—'I do it a lot.' I dream about my future—what I want to do, what I would like to be and do.' In his daydreams he imagines himself as being a popular leader of a jazz band, a famous doctor, or a noted basketball player and swimmer. He stated that his daydreams interfere with his school work. He got lost with his dreams. He has been intensely interested in radio and has built several sets.

Wants to Run Away.

"During the last year he had an impulse to run away from home—he wanted to go to the South Sea islands, about which he had read. It has been hard to resist this impulse to run away, but he wanted to finish his education first.

"He stated he always wanted to be noticed in a crowd—'I wanted popularity.' He told of the fairy stories he had been spreading some days before the offense, that he was going to have a car, that his folks were going out of town, and that he was going to have a checking account.

"On Friday night, Nov. 18, he stated he came home late from school and did not notify his parents. He knew his mother was going to meet his father in town to go to a movie, as they frequently did.

Date for Church Dance.

"He had a date to go to a church dance with several of his friends, whom he had promised to pick up in his car. He went upstairs and got dressed. He came down and asked his stepgrandmother for the use of her car and she refused. He states that she never let him drive the car. She was sitting in the living room reading a book.

"When she refused him, he states, she sort of slapped him—he does not remember whether it is was a slap or a pat. The hammer was on the table at the side of the couch and he hit her on the head. He doesn't remember much about it. She was knocked down on the couch and he saw blood coming from her head. She was still breathing; a little later she stopped breathing.

"He said, 'I had a date with my boy friends to go to the dance and I knew I would be incriminated for the crime if I did not go with them. I called for my friend and went to the dancing club at the church. I danced several dances and then went out for a ride. I wanted to smoke.

"'I came back to the house, put a rope around her, and dragged her through the living room and kitchen to the cistern and put her in there. There was a trail of blood on the floor, and I got some gauze to wipe it up. I took the hammer and put it in some water and placed it in the cupboard in the kitchen.

"'I was filled with some strange feeling. I took a dollar from my grandmother's purse and just beat it. I left home about 6:15 and came back again from the dance at 9:40. I left the house again at 10:15, took my grandmother's car and started driving on 35th street down Ogden avenue on route 32.

"'I arrived at a town about 50 miles away about 2 a. m., turned the car into a side street and had an uneasy sleep. I woke up about 4:30 a. m., and went to the station to get warm. I had a cup of coffee at the station.

"With No Destination."

"'I drove on with no destination, but kept on one route. I came to Morrison and ran out of oil, walked back to town and got cold. I drove on to Mount Carroll and arrived there at 1 p. m. Three or four miles out of Mount Carroll the radiator broke and I walked back to town.

"'I did not dare to give myself up. I went to a hotel. I had no money. I told the hotel man I came to Mount Carroll to visit some friends and they were out of town. He let me sleep at the hotel. I went under the name of my best friend.

"'On Sunday morning I started walking to the car and found it in the same place. I took a blanket from the car and walked into the woods close by.

"'I tramped up and down in the woods for two or three hours. I had nothing to eat from Friday night to Sunday except a cup of coffee. I walked and hitch-hiked to the next town, I don't know the name of it. I asked a restaurant man to give me a job for some food. He gave me some soup and I peeled potatoes for him. When I was peeling potatoes I was arrested.'"

"When asked why he did it or what the motive was, he said he did not know and he had no motive. He loved his grandmother. He told examiners that he always wanted to be noticed in a crowd—'I wanted popularity.'

"Always Been Bashful."

"The patient has always been very sensitive to criticism, inclined to be bashful and timid.

"He states he has always been of a very jealous temperament, has always had a great longing for popularity, of which he enjoys only a medium amount, an amount which did not satisfy him.

"For several months past he has been subject to periods of depression which lasted a day or part of a day. During these days, for what appeared to be trivial reasons, he became depressed, discouraged, might say to himself, 'I am no good, never was any good, and never will be any good,' but has had no suicidal contemplations.

"Physical examination reveals no abnormal findings, except that the boy is rather frail—his weight was 120 pounds at the time of his incarceration and appears to have lost ten or fifteen pounds. He has a scar from an old burn on the upper left thigh from the hip to the knee.

"Psychological tests revealed that this patient has an intelligence quotient of 117 (117 per cent of normal intelligence).

His "Personality Traits."

"This patient presents personality traits which have prevented him from making wholesale adjustments. These traits are as follows:

"Extreme emotional instability, oversensitiveness to criticism, diffidence, temper tantrums, sometimes rising to heights of rage, impatience and jealousy. He has always been conscious of a feeling of inferiority, thought that his associates did not give him enough recognition, they did not seek him out enough.

"Partly as a result of these feelings, and partly to less definable factors, he was given to day dreams.

Pictures Himself Leader.

"In his day dreams he pictured himself as one who obtained the homage of the masses, such as the popular leader of a jazz band, a famous doctor, a noted basket ball player or swimmer. Those day dreams occupied such an important part of his life that they prevented him from giving the proper attention to his studies, although he has superior normal intelligence. His day dreams prevented him from doing good work in school.

"The thought that he was so inspicuous and regarded indifferently by his friends was for him intolerable and hard to bear, and as a result he has for some time made deliberate efforts to impress his companions. These efforts were particularly noticeable during the past two weeks, during which period he confabulated in an attempt to gain more popularity and recognition and in order to convince his friends that he is worthy of more notice.

Flies Into a Rage.

"On Friday, Nov. 18, he wanted the car in order to take his friends to a dance and also with which to impress them. His foster grandmother refused him permission. This refusal may have seemed to her to be insignificant, but to the patient was an unexpected frustration of important plans and desires. As a result, he flew into an uncontrollable rage, and with no premeditation, struck his grandmother on the head with a hammer, resulting in her death.

"The various events in his life, day dreaming, intense and continuous desire for popularity and his unstable emotional makeup may be compared to gunpowder; continued refusal of his parents and grandmother for the use of the car could be compared to a fuse, and the slap, or pat, of his grandmother, as a match which caused the emotional explosion which terminated in this tragedy.

"IGGY" IS DENIED VISIT TO DOCTOR FOR X-RAY TESTS

Chief Justice John Prystalski of the Criminal court yesterday denied a defense request that James (Iggy) Varecha, 17 years old, killer and rapist, be removed from the county jail and taken to the office of Dr. Orlando Scott for examination. Varecha is waiting trial for the slaying of Frank Jordan during an attempted robbery Nov. 16.

Defense Attorney Joseph Nosek told the court that Varecha was injured as a youth and is believed to have suffered a fracture of the skull. He asked that Varecha be allowed to go to Scott's office for X-ray pictures.

Judge Prystalski held with Prosecutor Walker Butler that the request was unprecedented and that an X-ray examination could be made in the jail.

IL DUCE ORDERS ITALIAN NAVY TO BUILD 4 WARSHIPS

Two Will Be Cruisers of High Speed.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ROME, Dec. 2.—Two new 6,742 ton cruisers, of the Condottieri "B" type, and two 615 ton destroyers will be built by Italy, thus completing the naval building program for the current year 1932-33, according to an announcement tonight.

Construction of these ships has been delayed for a year under the one year armament truce, which 21 nations, including the United States, signed and which expired Nov. 1.

Premier Mussolini gave Rear Admiral Giuseppe Sirianni, minister of marine, the necessary authorization and it is expected the work will be undertaken without delay. Funds for building the four new units will be drawn from the ordinary navy budget.

Reply to French Cruisers.

The two cruisers, tentatively named Monticuccoli and Muzio Attendolo, complete a class of eight which was designed as a reply to French destroyers of the Lion type, over which the Italian ships have every advantage. They represent an efficient and novel type of cruiser, capable of overtaking the fastest destroyer. The turbine driven craft, generating 105,000 horse power, can speed at 40 knots and has a range of 2,500 miles. It has thin armor plate, but is mounted with eight 8 inch guns, six 37 mm. guns, three machine guns, and four 21 inch torpedo tubes.

DISARM PARLEY REOPENS

BY JAY ALLEN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

GENEVA, Dec. 2.—The crisis in which the disarmament conference now finds itself and which the five-power conversations scheduled to begin Monday will attempt to solve, is to be the last crisis with which this parley will be confronted, according to the announcements of delegates arriving here.

Prime Minister MacDonald of Great Britain, Normal H. Davis, American delegate, and the Italian representative arrived today. Premier Herriot of France is due tomorrow, and Baron Konstantin von Neurath of Germany is expected late Sunday to complete the staff of doctors whose treatment it is considered will either kill or cure the conference.

The American delegation has sharpened the realization that this is to be the last crisis by its demand for a preliminary disarmament treaty by Christmas.

See Little Hope for Success.

In contriving, with the British, to precipitate a showdown on Germany's demand for equality in armaments, the Americans, it is hoped, had some ground for optimism. If there is to be a preliminary treaty by Christmas, the French will have to grant the principle of equality and accept the promise of something being done for security later on, and Germany will have to accept paper equality with a promise of approach to the real thing later on.

Although the Americans and British insist that every one has come here with an open mind, there is little reason to think that the French and Germans have forgotten what they had been saying up until a week ago.

COWDREY, FORMER AURORA OFFICIAL, IS FOUND HANGED

J. Hamlet Cowdrey, 60 years old, a former market master of Aurora, who used to be pointed out as the town's handsomest man, was found hanged yesterday in a noose fastened to a bedpost in his room in Aurora.

Cowdrey had been crippled for 20 years as a result of an accident on a third rail train in which he saved the daughters of the late Bishop Charles Anderson of Chicago from accident. The accident occurred on the Batavia branch line of the Chicago, Aurora and Elgin railroad. Cowdrey was motorman of the train.

His passengers included Jean, Catherine, and Nancy Anderson, the daughters of the bishop. The girls rode in front seats. Suddenly there appeared in the path of the train several carloads of stone which had broken loose from moorings on a side track. The motorman could not stop his train in time to avoid a collision. He threw on the air brakes and ran back into the car and flung himself before the Anderson girls to protect them with his body.

The girls escaped injury, but Cowdrey suffered injuries which later brought on a paralysis of his legs. Bishop Anderson gave him an engraved scroll as an appreciation.

Later Cowdrey was made master of the Aurora municipal market. Still later he operated a parking field which recently was closed to make way for a new postoffice building.

PLEDGES RELIEF FUNDS TO MEET HOSPITAL CRISIS

Ryerson's Support Is Won by Kelly's Plea.

The sick poor of Chicago yesterday were given definite assurance that free beds in private hospitals will be provided for them within a short time. Because of crowded conditions at the county hospital thousands have been turned away within the last few months.

County Commissioner Peter M. Kelley, chairman of the county board's hospital committee, announced after a meeting with the board of directors of the Illinois Emergency Relief commission that Edward L. Ryerson Jr., chairman, had pledged the commission to provide the necessary funds for hospitalization of the poor.

"Mr. Ryerson and the others agreed that the situation at the county hospital has been caused by unemployment," said Mr. Kelly, "and thus the relief commission can properly use its funds for relief of conditions there. There remain only the details of the plan to be worked out."

Committee to Work Out Plan.

A committee composed of Dr. N. S. Davis, president of the Cook County School of Nursing; Dr. Frederick Tice, chief of the medical staff at the county hospital, and Commissioner Kelly will select a large committee to work out the details of hospitalizing the poor.

Among members of this committee will be Gov. Elect Horner, Mayor Cermak, Emmett Whealan, president of the county board; representatives of all the large endowment hospitals; President Bundesen of the city board of health, and representatives of the American Hospital association, American and Chicago Medical associations, and nurses' associations.

Among the problems to confront this committee will be the settlement of the proper cost of caring for patients and the manner in which the patients will be distributed among the various hospitals. The cost of caring for patients at the county hospital this year was $2.66 per patient per day, a decrease from the 1931 cost of $3.07.

Hospitals May Be Asked to Bid.

The hospitals may be asked to bid for the privilege of housing the charity patients. The large hospitals are admittedly eager for this business. At present, with their hospitals 50 per cent or less occupied, the medical and nursing staffs are idle part of the time. Bids of $2.50 per patient per day or less are hoped for by the county board.

Commissioner Kelly said that he has a force of experts reckoning what amount should be asked of the relief commission. On a $2.50 a day basis, $150,000 would probably be enough to relieve the crowded conditions at the county hospital during the months of December, January, February and March, it has been computed. With the end of winter, sickness becomes less prevalent and the pressure on the county hospital is lightened.

Real Need Is Convalescing Wards.

The commissioner again pointed out that convalescing wards are the real need in the private hospitals to care for poor patients. Many a penniless person, released as cured from the county hospital but in need of rest and minor treatment, has a relapse when sent back to live in poorly ventilated, chilly quarters, he pointed out. The patient goes back to the county hospital with a resultant doubling of expense.

As soon as the commissioner has estimated how much money will be required for hospitalizing the poor, Chairman Ryerson will call a special meeting of the emergency relief commission, he said, in order that the hospital fund may be authorized.

POLICE ADVISED A MONTH LATE, OPEN BOMB HUNT

Unofficial search for the person who sent a bomb by mail to the home of Solomon A. Smith, prominent banker, was supplemented yesterday by an official search. Chief of Detectives Schoemaker said he had made a late start, due to being notified of the crime almost four weeks after it happened, but that the detective bureau is now in the hunt.

When the bomb-package was opened by the banker's wife on Nov. 9, Mr. Smith was notified and called in the Secret Six. This organization, privately financed, notified neither the police nor the state's attorney's office, Chief Schoemaker said.

According to postal authorities it was not until two weeks after the package exploded in Mrs. Smith's hands that the government was advised of the outrage and of the subsequent extortion letter demanding $4,000 of Mr. Smith. Paul E. Lavery, attorney for Mr. Smith, said he and Mr. Smith thought the Secret Six a super-organization and they had no doubt notification would be given to the properly constituted authority, as the law demands.

"We'll give Mr. and Mrs. Smith whatever help we can now that we know about their trouble," Chief Schoemaker promised. "I have no complaint because a secret investigation was made, but we might have been of valuable assistance and we would have kept the secret."

J. T. LANG CALLS DEPUTY PREMIER A 'MAD MULLAH'

SYDNEY, Australia, Dec. 2.—(AP)—J. T. Lang, former premier of New South Wales, called Lieut. Col. M. F. Bruxner, deputy premier, a "mad Mullah" today, and then ran out of the legislative assembly chamber before the sergeant-at-arms could lay a hand on him. The incident occurred during debate toward the end of an all night session.

Brooklyn Elks Club Put in Hands of Receiver

New York, Dec. 2.—(AP)—The Brooklyn lodge of the B. P. O. E. was placed in the hands of receivers today after failure to meet an installment payment of $75,000 on a mortgage. This is said to be one of the most pretentious clubhouses in the country.

BRING SLAYER OF CATTLEMAN BACK TO CHICAGO

Merle Lowman, 19 years old, who was arrested recently in Gering, Neb., and who confessed the murder of Henry Shoup in the Stockyards inn on Oct. 31, was brought to Chicago yesterday. Shoop, a cattleman of Wibaux, Mont., had come to Chicago on business. Lowman told the police that he and Ben Herr, also under arrest, planned to rob Shoop and that they slugged him with a heavy glass tumbler wrapped in a towel when he resisted. The blow caused the cattleman's death.

5 Youths Held in $100,000 Bonds on Robbery Charges

Five youths, charged with a number of butcher shop and bakery robberies, were held to the grand jury yesterday in bonds totaling $100,000 by Municipal Judge Harold P. O'Connell. The defendants are Joseph Golembeski, 19 years old, 5028 Throop street; Stanley Sebroski, 18, of 5219 South May street; Edward Pierucci, 19, of 5210 Lowe avenue; Charles Hullinger, 20, of 5300 South Green street, and Leo Smith, 19, of 5219 South May street. They were arrested after Pierucci applied at a hospital for treatment for a bullet wound in his back.

COUNCIL URGES ALL TO AID WORK OF GOOD FELLOWS

Baskets Destined to Rout Tears and Despair.

The city council, in a formal resolution passed unanimously, offers a word of commendation and encouragement to the Good Fellows who, three weeks from today, will distribute baskets and cheer to homes where stockings and hearts would otherwise be empty on Christmas morning.

Bringing Cheer to Needy.

The resolution, introduced by Ald. Barnet Rodes [7th], reads as follows:

"Whereas, once again the Good Fellows are engaged in a campaign with the purpose of bringing Christmas cheer to needy children, an activity which has brought happiness and joy to thousands since the origin of the Good Fellows in 1909, and

"Whereas, this year the Good Fellows purpose also to leave baskets in homes of lonely and destitute old couples, and

"Whereas, this splendid work of the Good Fellows brings cheer and joy to thousands on Christmas eve where there would be tears and despair:

"It is hereby resolved that the city council of the city of Chicago extend its felicitations to the Good Fellows and THE TRIBUNE for their yuletide activity, and extend its cordial good wishes for the continued success of their endeavor.

Council Urges All to Aid.

"It is hereby further resolved that the city council of the city of Chicago urge every citizen of Chicago in a financial position to do so to respond to the appeal of this most worth while cause."

Wouldn't your holidays be the happier by being one of these Good Fellows. Tear out the coupon from a nearby column and mail to the Good Fellows, in care of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, or call in person at the Tribune public service office at Dearborn and Madison streets. You will receive the name of a worthy family for your basket of inexpensive toys, fruits, candy, and foodstuffs for delivery on Christmas eve.

ROCKEFELLER JR. GIVES $300,000 TO RELIEF FUND

Foundation Contributes $850,000 More.

New York, Dec. 2.—[Special.]—A personal gift of $300,000 to the Emergency Relief committee from John D. Rockefeller Jr. and a gift of $850,000 from the Rockefeller Foundation to the same fund were pledged today, according to the announcement of Harvey D. Gibson, chairman of the committee, which is seeking $15,000,000 to aid the poor of the city during the winter.

Tells of Aiding Idle.

"It gives me pleasure to contribute $300,000 toward the work of the Emergency Relief committee. In addition I have sought to promote the committee's primary objective, namely, to create employment, by pushing forward during the present year enterprises which might have been slowed down in view of business conditions.

"I refer to the development on Washington Heights of Fort Tyron park, which I gave to the city several years ago, and to the rebuilding of Claremont park, on Riverside drive, which the city has authorized me to do at my expense. In these undertakings an average of 500 men have been employed throughout the present year.

Gives Jobs to 2,500 Men.

"Moreover, in the building of Rockefeller Center employment has been given throughout the year to an average of 2,500 men a day. It is my purpose to continue carrying forward these enterprises during the coming year, regardless of the depression."

Mr. Rockefeller congratulated the committee "upon the great service it is rendering."

Chinese Bandits Shell Ship; Several of Crew Killed

HANKOW, Dec. 2.—(AP)—Wireless dispatches from the American Yangtze Rapids Steamship company's steamer Iping today reported the killing of several members of her crew, all Chinese, by bandits' shellfire. The bandits were deployed along the Yangtze's shores 35 miles below Ichang, a city of 55,000, due west of here in Hupeh province.

ASSIGN $5,434,718 IN RELIEF FUNDS TO 27 COUNTIES

The Illinois Emergency Relief commission allocated a total of $5,434,718 for relief of the idle in Cook county and twenty-six downstate counties during December at its meeting yesterday. The allocations were more than $1,000,000 less than the commission's previous estimate of the state's needs for the month, because funds have been made available in the diversion of the counties' shares of the state gasoline tax, the commission announced.

Cook county agencies will receive $4,992,109 of the total allocated, it was announced. The reduction in the number of downstate counties from sixty-one to twenty-six receiving federal funds to support their relief loads is due to the fact that many of them have become self-sustaining with the gasoline tax diversion. The allocation to the Cook county bureau of public welfare was pared $500,000 because of an anticipated diversion of that amount of the county's share of the gasoline tax.

The allocations voted by the commission yesterday exceed the amount loaned Illinois by the Reconstruction Finance corporation for December by about $500,000. The difference is to be made up by funds on hand, it was said.

FIND RETIRED FARMER DEAD.

Colder Weather Coming

5 Things motorists should CHECK TODAY!

Oil ✓ Gasoline ✓ Tires ✓ Anti-Freeze ✓ Batteries ✓

All can be purchased or serviced in one stop at Standard Stations. Drive in today and have your car completely serviced for winter driving

● Combine your purchases at Standard Stations . . . Colder weather is here! . . . and you need "quicker-starting" Standard Red Crown gasoline . . . "winter grades" of Iso-Vis motor oil . . . "winter grade" lubricants for your transmission and differential . . . new, "non-skid" Atlas tires . . . anti-freeze . . . and your battery checked for winter driving. Don't wait until your motor stalls or your car is wrecked on slippery streets. Come in . . . Combine your purchases at Standard Stations today!

1 Prompt Attention to Weary BATTERIES

Drive in and let our station attendants check your battery and fill the cells with pure water. Batteries demand more attention these colder, shorter days. Colder motors and longer nights wear them down. Come in . . . combine your complete winter car servicing requirements at Standard Stations.

2 "Quick-Starting" GASOLINES

Three grades of "Quicker-Starting" Standard gasolines — Red Crown Ethyl, Standard Red Crown and Stanoliad—are now available at all Standard Oil pumps. They start quicker because quick-starting "light-ends," saved from summer when they were not needed by a special Standard Oil process, have now been added to all winter grades of Standard gasolines.

3 "Winter Grade" MOTOR OILS

In cold weather more damage is done to your motor during the first starting moments than in miles of regular driving under normal conditions unless you are using the correct grade of oil. If you haven't drained your crankcase and changed to winter grade Iso-Vis, do so today! It costs little and may save you costly repair bills.

4 Safe ANTI-FREEZE

All anti-freezes are not safe . . . all station operators are not properly trained and equipped to service your car with anti-freeze. But you can depend upon both the anti-freeze and the trained Standard Attendant who will check your radiator with an accurate temperature corrected hydrometer. Buy your anti-freeze where you know you will get dependable products and intelligent service.

5 New NON-SKID TIRES

More accidents occur during winter months due to tread-worn tires than at any other season of the year. Don't risk your life all through this winter with smooth, skiddy tires. Standard Oil Company sells, mounts and guarantees its tires to you. Drive in. Let one of our service station attendants quote you prices on guaranteed Atlas casings. New tires are a better buy than old tires and new chains.

B-r-r-r . . . Colder soon . . . and it may be annoying for you most any morning if your car doesn't start promptly . . . Drive in today and let us service it for winter driving . . . Everything can be done at one stop . . . Cheerful attendants await you . . . Come in!

"The newspaper is an institution developed by modern civilization to present the news of the day, to foster commerce and industry, to inform and mold public opinion, and to furnish that check upon government which no constitution has ever been able to provide."

THE SELF-DESTRUCTION OF GREAT BRITAIN.

To those who have followed the perennial debate on war debts and reparations the British note published on Friday can have added little that was new. The note was merely a concise and well ordered brief setting forth familiar arguments and data. As such, of course, it deserves a careful reading and an examination, which will be all the easier in view of the complete lack of novelty in the presentation.

As usual, the transfer problem is stressed, and the fact that foreign trade has fallen off is cited as additional justification for the belief that the transfer of the debt payments cannot be made without precipitating further economic catastrophes here as well as abroad. There is, however, a singular omission of any statement which would suggest that the difficulties of transfer arise to no small degree in consequence of British domestic policies which have paralyzed British trade and therefore have destroyed Britain's capacity to pay.

Britain has been living beyond her means. She is in the position of a debtor who pleads insolvency but refuses to make drastic alterations in her scale of wasteful expenditures. Britain has attempted to support vast numbers of her people in idleness and the burden of that cost rests, of course, upon her industries and her accumulated wealth. Industries which must pay wages not only to those employed in them but to an indefinite number of other citizens as well cannot conceivably compete with rivals in other lands where less wasteful practices are followed. Obviously, if Britain has destroyed her foreign trade the problem of transferring even moderate sums will seem impossible of solution.

Britain has not been ruined by her debts, but by her politicians, who have taxed their country into economic stagnation. Capital for new ventures with which to build up export balances has been frittered away and much of it has been driven out of the country, thereby still further complicating the problem of the exchanges.

As long as these policies are pursued there is relatively little to be gained from any discussion of a scaling down of the debts. Whatever settlement is made will exceed the capacity to pay if the balance of trade continues to run against Britain because British politicians have deliberately destroyed their country's income from abroad through excessive taxes.

This is said not for the sake of holding up the British nation to scorn nor for the childish satisfaction of saying, "How are the mighty fallen." The purpose is primarily to point the only means by which the debts justly due us can be paid and, incidentally, the only means by which Britain's place as a customer for our goods can be restored. Britain today is the world's most conspicuous example of a nation ruined by excessive taxation. Her inability to pay the debts is the merest symptom of the degenerative disease which has brought her low. It seems almost unnecessary to add that the United States is neither too strong nor too wealthy to suffer a similar fate if we permit our politicians to sap our strength with similarly ruinous rates of taxation.

THE BARGE LINE CAN NOW BE SOLD.

In a few months at most the Illinois waterway will be in service. This is the moment for which the government is presumed to have been waiting, the moment to sell the federal barge line. The completion of the link between Chicago and New Orleans at last gives promise of sufficient business to justify a substantial investment in barges and towboats. In private hands the barge service will be brought to its full usefulness as rapidly as possible, but there will be no privately owned common carrier service of consequence on the gulf waterway as long as the government with no interest or taxes to pay on its barges is a competitor.

Fortunately the political circumstances are favorable to the withdrawal of the government in the next few months. The waterway was built by Republican administrations, and the barge service, though started by the Democrats under Wilson, has been operated for many years under Republican auspices. The barge line is not a Democratic baby and it can be abandoned by the new administration without loss of face and without a confession of failure.

More than a hundred million dollars has gone into the construction of the Illinois waterway. If that money is to be returned in the form of improved transportation services, the task of exploiting the possibilities of the route must be turned over to private business, for, as long as the government is in charge of the shipping line, political rather than economic considerations will determine to a large extent the uses to which the boats are put.

DEMOCRATS AND PROHIBITION.

Senator Joe Robinson, Democrat of Arkansas, says that prohibition repeal cannot be expected to go through the senate at high speed. He predicts that the senate will prove to be a very deliberative assembly and will not take its tempo from the house of representatives. Mr. Robinson, who should know, says that the dry south will want safeguards. Mr. Robinson and all the southern congressmen should also know that their party is the party of uncompromising repeal. That was their party pledge and they made the most of it in the campaign. They are now confronted with the alternative of honoring or repudiating their word.

This was one of the issues upon which they carried the country. They obtained the electoral votes of all but six states upon a program definitely stated in their convention and repeated by their party speakers in the campaign. They ridiculed the Republican reservations as hypocritical shams. They denounced the straddle by which they said the Republican party attempted to walk with one foot wet and one foot dry. Their own announcement was a rejection of all compromise. They spoke for immediate beer and for outright repeal without strings. The police power in prohibition was to go back to the states from which the federal government had derived it. That would end the days of Uncle Sam as a liquor policeman.

Is the country now to be treated to the rich irony of having the Democratic party attack and defeat the Republicans in a campaign and then adopt their opponents' position in office? Do the southerners want to confess that they have been in the wrong party, supporting the wrong candidate and the wrong platform? If the men who made the platform cannot keep the party from going Republican after the election they will present a spectacle of unreliability and infidelity which will be a bit too shameless for quick forgetting.

If the Democratic party requires the continuance of the federal government in the control of the manufacture, distribution and use of intoxicating beverages the place to have made a declaration to that effect was in convention and the time was before the election. The Republicans proposed to return the police power to the states with the proviso that the federal government would see to it, and there should be a constitutional provision to this effect, that the saloon should not be allowed in any state. When some one has defined a saloon the country will know more precisely what this proposal meant, but aside from that it did mean that sumptuary law, a police ordinance, remained in the constitution.

The Democrats said out with it. No one could misunderstand what they meant. They reneged on their immediate beer pledge and explained that. If they renege on the rest of their promises they'll be bankrupt in moral courage and public trustworthiness.

THE MILK SETTLEMENT.

Nine cent milk is now being delivered in Chicago. The agreements which reduced the price represent concessions voluntarily made by the three principal elements which enter into the production and distribution of the supply. All are well organized. The drivers took a five dollar cut in wages. The dairy farmers consented to a reduction of forty cents a hundredweight. The dairy companies take the balance. Independent dealers outside the organization had set the pace and made the price which required readjustments all along the line to meet.

The instance is a notable one of the ability of the organizations to handle a problem full of difficulties and conflicting interests close to the very lives of the thousands of persons involved. The reconciliation of these interests had to work three ways to be satisfactory and effective. It was not only a question of wages, and it did not concern merely employer and employé. The negotiators had to find the equities in spreading the cut three ways and satisfy the farmers, the drivers and the companies that the deal was square. The difficulties of splitting profits are small compared with those of spreading losses. There was a large public stake in the settlement involving an essential element in the metropolitan food supply which might have been exposed to the hazards of an economic struggle.

Recognition of the success of the negotiations is due all the persons in the industry. They untied a hard knot.

Editorial of the Day

A WAR WE MISSED.

[The Elgin Courier-News.]

The most interesting part of the study of history, very often, is a consideration of the things that might have happened but didn't.

Gen. Juan Barragan, former Mexican chief of staff, provided an opening for that kind of meditation not long ago when he published in a Mexico City newspaper an article asserting that Mexico had come close to declaring war on the United States early in 1917.

Gen. Barragan was a confidant of Venustiano Carranza, then president of Mexico, and was chief of staff of the Mexican army at that time. Germany, via the famous Zimmerman note, had just suggested that Mexico make war on the United States and induce Japan to do likewise; as a prize, it held out the vision of recovery by Mexico of the vast territory lost in the war of 1848.

That offer, says Gen. Barragan, came very near being accepted.

President Wilson sent Pershing into Mexico after Villa, in spite of Carranza's protests. According to Gen. Barragan's story, only the fact that Pershing was finally recalled and the expedition withdrawn prevented Carranza from leading his nation into war.

Now it is hard to think of anything more ridiculous than the suggestion that Mexico seize from the United States such states as California, Texas, Colorado, New Mexico and Arizona. But it is interesting to speculate on what course history might have taken if the attempt had been made. If Mexico had gone ahead and declared war, as Germany suggested, and had been able to induce Japan to go along—well, the history of the last 15 years would have been different, at any rate.

Instead of sending practically all of our trained troops to France, we would have had to keep a very sizable army busy in our own back yard. Our navy would have had to operate in the Pacific, and could have done little to help the British in the submarine war. All in all, the situation would have been very favorable for Germany.

But for Mexico it could only have been a catastrophe. Mexico is very fortunate that Carranza finally decided to turn the German proposal down.

A DIFFERENCE.

THE OPENING OF CONGRESS.

(As the bone drys fear and the sopping wets fondly hope.)

Speaker Garner (whanging the gavel fiercely on the table): "Order! Order! Order!"

A Member from Illinois: "Three beers here."

Speaker Garner: "Order! Order!"

Speaker Garner: "When I say 'Order' I mean the order of business."

A Gentleman from Massachusetts: "I move that the 18th amendment, the Jones 5 & 10 law, and the Volstead act be immediately rescinded, nullified, expunged from the records, canceled, wiped out, eradicated, squelched, squashed, swamped, submerged, wrecked, scuttled, erased, torn down, deleted, and absolutely blotted from the earth, from history, and from the memory of man."

A Gentleman from Maryland: "Mr. Speaker, while I fully indorse every word that the honorable gentleman from Massachusetts has said, he does not go far enough. I am unalterably opposed to any half way measures. We must not compromise, we must not extenuate. I move as an amendment to the motion of the gentleman from Massachusetts that in addition to doing what he mentioned to the 18th amendment, the Volstead act, and the Jones 5 & 10 law that this congress does now enact a law providing that the 18th amendment, the Volstead act, and the Jones 5 & 10 law be thrown overboard, torn down, blown up, exterminated, extinguished, devastated, dismantled, suppressed, dispelled, kicked into the gutter, sunk without leaving a trace, annihilated, abrogated, paralyzed, turned into dust, and kicked beneath our feet."

A Gentleman from Missouri: "I ask for information. Do I understand that the gentleman is opposing the retention of the 18th amendment, the Volstead act, and the Jones 5 & 10?"

The Gentleman from Maryland: "And how!"

The Gentleman from Missouri: "Then, Mr. Speaker, I object to the inadequate language employed by the gentleman in making his amendment. This is no time for quibbling, for splitting hairs, for deftly sidestepping and shadow boxing. Let us deal with the 18th amendment and its sister iniquities in no uncertain manner. Let there be no doubt about our attitude towards these measures. I move as an amendment to the amendment, Mr. Speaker, that the 18th amendment, the Volstead act, and the Jones 5 & 10 be hereby strangled; that they be kicked into small pieces by wild horses; that they be buried far from the surface of the earth in the deepest mine; then let us take whole hills and cast upon that mine, and move parts of the great Appalachian and the Rocky mountains and pile on that mine; let us pick up Olympus and cast it on that mine in which we have placed the 18th amendment, the Volstead act, and the Jones 5 & 10. And on Olympus let us pile Ossa and Pelion and Mont Blanc and a few others, and then, gentlemen, but not until then, can we feel we have done our duty."

The Speaker: "We will now proceed to vote."

DECEMBER.

They do you wrong, rare season of the snows,
Of crystal grottoes built by fairy hands;
They have no praise but for the June-blown rose,
For orchard gold, as plenteous as the sands.
There are no blossoms on December boughs,
But there are dreams within December hearts:
The firelight throws its cheer athwart the night
And wakes the fancy to a wild carouse;
Youth lives again, and hobbling age departs;
Love, spurned of old, returns to ply its darts,
And heaven dawns, amid the golden light.

And Summer gardens are as dear as song;
October boughs bend low with russet gold,
But to December brightest thoughts belong.
Then comes the snow, which in a single hour
Can rear a palace fit for Guinevere;
The beast of care goes skulking to its den
As children laugh beneath the frosty bower.
Amid such scenes can any shed a tear
For roses dead, for branches stark and sere?
Heap high the wood, glad Winter's here again!

BABY FEEDING.

HERE are some extracts from a lecture on child feeding, given to a group of specialists in that subject by Dr. Joseph Brennemann. They are so very simple that they must be scientifically correct. Nothing but truth can stand up in the plain, white light of clear, direct statement.

We should begin preparations for weaning a baby when he is 3 months old. Prior to that time he sucks instinctively and he has so little capacity for thinking that, from the standpoint of feeding, his powor to choose can be disregarded. Prior to 3 months of age a baby will take either the breast or the bottle and will switch back and forth between them with seeming indifference.

A baby should be offered a bottle once a day, or oftener, when from 3 to 5 months old. In practice it is advisable to begin offering a baby the bottle after his breast feeding when he is even less than 3 months old, since some underfed babies become apathetic instead of irritable, as is the general impression.

Every baby should know how to suck a bottle at 5 months and should have some desire to do so.

If a baby 9 months old has not been taught to suck from a bottle it will not be easy to teach him to do so and it may be impossible.

In giving the bottle to a baby under 3 months it should be offered just following breast feeding. That is called complemental feeding. If the child is between 3 and 6 months the bottle should be offered at the regular feeding times of one or more breast feedings and instead of the breast. This is supplemental feeding. If the child is partly breast fed for any reason after 6 months—and most children should be partly breast fed in the second six months of life—the bottle should be offered instead of the breast at one or more of the feeding times, and following each breast feeding the child should be offered the bottle.

It is normal for a child to go to sleep after breast feeding. If he fails to do so something is apt to be wrong, though not much so. If he cries violently, or is irritable after pulling on the breasts, the chances are the milk supply is insufficient and complemental feeding is called for.

A crying spell following the bottle is not of the same significance. The baby gets all that's coming so quickly that he is not emotionally prepared for the termination of the meal.

Cod liver oil is given in the first month and it is continued thereafter, summer and winter. It is put in the milk. The baby soon acquires a taste for it that equals his daddy's yearning for tobacco.

Fruit juice is given in the early weeks. It is added to the milk or it may be given by spoon.

The baby is given some cereal from a spoon at 3 months of age. Some sugar and milk are added to the cereal to make it appeal to the baby's appetite. However, the principal reason for giving spoon cereal is to accustom the baby to taking things from a spoon.

Vegetable purees are given at the fifth month. Some sugar or salt may be added. Vegetables simply mashed and not pureed are given in the seventh to the ninth month. The foods that are given mashed with a spoon may be toast, coarse dry cereal, puddings, scrambled eggs, very ripe bananas, stewed fruits, potatoes, carrots and spinach, and sometimes finely chopped meat. Milk is given from a cup at 11 months.

MARRIAGE OF COUSINS.

Mrs. P. W. S. writes: Is it true that when first cousins marry their children are in most cases defective in some way? I know of an instance where first cousins have married and they claim that since there is no sign of insanity or any other inheritable disease on either side their offspring will be mentally and physically normal. What is your opinion?

REPLY.

The marriage of first cousins is safe enough biologically if there are no inheritable defects or diseases on either side. It is unsafe from the legal standpoint in those places that have legislated against the marriage of cousins.

PARESIS.

R. C. writes: A friend and I had a talk about mental diseases. He claims that persons with general paresis have been known to become very old. I claim that a person with this disease lives only 18 months to 3 years. I know you will be able to set us right.

REPLY.

The truth lies in between your views and that of your friend, being somewhat nearer yours.

POPLAR TREES.

Chicago, Nov. 21.—[Friend of the People.]—We have two very large poplar trees in front of our home which have become a nuisance. The neighbors have complained about falling leaves and overhanging branches. Would we be allowed to take these out and put in another smaller one, or do we have to apply for a permit? W. N.

We have had an inspection made and are sending the writer a permit which will allow her to remove the two poplars and to replace them with one elm tree.

Superintendent of Parks, Recreation and Aviation.

UNPAID NOTE.

Chicago, Nov. 26.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—1. A few years ago I filed suit against a party on a note for $600 and the court bailiff was unable to serve notice on him. Nothing was ever accomplished. 2. I wrote the County court and asked the return of the note, as I now can get something out of it without an attorney. They advised me they could not return the note [3] without a release from the attorney when the suit was filed. 4. The party who owes the note has since, through an estate, been left the mortgage on my home and now wants to foreclose, knowing the note is tied up. How can I secure this note from the county files and how can I apply it against the mortgage which would just about clear it up? 5. Can you advise me of a lawyer to employ? G. C. S.

1. It is not clear whether you mean that judgment was entered by confession or that the only step was the filing of the suit. If judgment has been entered the judgment supersedes the note. In either case, you could secure court authority to withdraw the note on filing a certified copy. If the matter was handled through the Municipal court you can inquire at the information desk.

2. Your use of the word "bailiff" implies that it was a Municipal court case, which would seem inconsistent with your writing to the County court.

3. We do not understand how a release from the attorney would have anything to do with the matter. We could advise to better advantage if the wording of their letter was before us.

4. Your facts are too obscure for us to advise.

5. In order to guard against the suspicion that The Tribune law department is conducted to secure business and fees for favored attorneys we have been forced to adopt the rule of never supplying the names of attorneys. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

FROM THE TRIBUNE'S COLUMNS

16 YEARS AGO TODAY

DECEMBER 3, 1916.

LONDON.—On three sides of Bucharest the battle is raging without pause, with the Rumanians successful at some points, the invaders at others. West of Bucharest the defenders have been pressed back to the Argesu river, while to the northwest the Germanic forces have smashed through the Rumanian lines and are rapidly moving down the Argesu valley from Pitesci and down the Dombovitza from the Campulung region. South of the capital Ferdinand's troops delivered a powerful counter attack that forced the Teutons back from the Argesu line and reclaimed the villages of Tzomana and Gostinari. Meanwhile the terrific battle in the Carpathians is developing in favor of the Russians. They are reported to have gained a foothold in Kirlibaba, the key to the Rodna pass and the plains of Hungary, and to be attacking successfully at other points on the 250 mile front. The Russians also have seized the western end of the Cernavoda bridge over the Danube, thus putting a check on any movement of Gen. von Mackensen's troops across the river from Dobrudja. Gen. Sakharoff's forces continue their furious attacks along the entire line in the Dobrudja. The greatest reverse suffered by the Rumanians today was northwest of Bucharest. On the roads from Pitesci and in the Argesu valley the assaults of the invaders were irresistible. Both Bucharest and Petrograd admit the retirement of Ferdinand's troops in this district. The odds are greatly against the Rumanians making a successful stand for Bucharest.

LONDON.—The Greek crisis has passed, at least for the time being. The allied commanders have reached a compromise with King Constantine. He submitted to part of their demands and the others were waived and the allied troops have been withdrawn from Athens and Piraeus.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The ravages of "peace with Mexico" might be mistaken for the ravages of war by the undiscriminating, according to figures which have been extracted from the war department. The renewed activity of Villa, who now is threatening President Wilson's punitive expedition, indicates that the United States has barely made a start on its campaign "to take Villa, dead or alive," yet this initial effort already has cost the nation approximately $100,000,000, practically disrupted the National Guard, caused the death of sixty officers and privates, and the retirement on furlough of hundreds of others for disability.

NEW ORLEANS, La.—One of the season's most fashionable weddings was that of Miss Katherine Jennings Legendre, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James E. Legendre, and Henry Blair Keep, son of Mr. and Mrs. Chauncey Keep of Chicago, which was celebrated at Trinity church in the presence of a large assembly of the social world of New Orleans.

Chicago, Nov. 28.—I would like to reply to Mrs. Berliner who asks in today's paper what's wrong with the unemployed.

Nothing, my dear madam. The fault lies with you employers. Many of you misrepresent the job and when a girl or woman answers and you interview her it's an entirely different story than was told the employment bureau.

For instance, as you state in your case, no washing, and yet nearly every one who so states always comes and brings "just a few pieces I dare not trust the laundry to wash" and you do them or lose your job.

Another thing you say, you have your own room and sometimes own bath and when you get to the job you have to sleep with one of the children because we are crowded or have company.

Also they say you have every other Sunday and every Thursday off. What is a housemaid's day off? To work until 1 or 2 and leave about 3 and come back home to find the family had a full dinner with possibly one or two guests and the sink piled high with dirty dishes and the whole kitchen in a mess. Is that fair to the girl who does all the other hard work with only that one day off a week and maybe only every two weeks?

Employers also expect a maid, even though it is ironing day, to stop and change into her uniform and serve a luncheon or bridge party, then go on ironing or whatever outside work you may wish done, never thinking it's holding her ironing back or that it's dinner time.

You expect A-1 service, gilt edge references and usually want it all for room and board, or maybe $1 or $2 per week, but demanding $15 service.

JUST A HOUSEMAID.

LOOKING FOR A MAID.

Chicago, Nov. 28.—Your article, "Looking for a Maid," was very amusing to me, as I happened to be one of the "100 applicants." Why does not this writer state in your column what all her orders to the maid were and, above all, why does she not tell what her fair salary was? I will. It was $3 a week for all housework, all ironing, all cleaning, cooking, and many other duties which no ordinary maid could perform between 6 a. m. and midnight. M. H.

TOO SMART FOR US.

Chicago, Nov. 24.—I was in another country when the war broke out, and I knew that we would be declared in. [See letters I wrote you: none ever printed.]

We are not near as smart as we think we are. We didn't even know that we were being taken for a ride. If we hadn't had so many 101 per cent patriots we could have stayed out of the mess. I have no love for foreigners; there are too many in this country to suit me. But we might as well scratch off the I. O. U.'s and charge it up to experience. If they have to pay, they'll get us another way. See if they don't. PLUTO.

BANK RECEIVERSHIPS COMPARED.

Chicago, Nov. 28.—In reading over your report on closed banks Nov. 24 I observed that the Lake View State bank, with nearly a million less resources, has had $222,734 more expense in receivership than the Kaspar American State bank. Even allowing for the longer time Lake View bank has been closed and the larger collection, still why such a difference?

Humboldt State bank with less than half the resources of the Kaspar American State bank has $57,662 larger expense and has collected nearly a half million less.

ANDREW A. JOHNSON.

BOULDER DAM.

Chicago, Nov. 17.—In this morning's TRIBUNE we have a letter, written by Mrs. Beatrice Hillman Lederer, bemoaning the fact that President Hoover is sponsoring the construction of the Boulder dam at a cost of 205 million dollars, which sum, to Mrs. Lederer's way of thinking, is going entirely to waste. This money, she claims, would be much better spent in bringing about the return of prosperity.

The impression I get from her letter is that she thinks Mr. Hoover gathers about him some 205 millions of dollars and tears same to bits, whereupon, by some mysterious process, the Boulder dam suddenly appears, completed.

No, my dear madam, this is not the method of constructing dams. The cash passes through the hands of men before the work is finished; men who, beyond a doubt, were out of work before the beginning of the job.

It is universally agreed that the most practical way to bring good times is to give men employment. If Mrs. Lederer will write to some of the thousands of laborers, mechanics, engineers, and architects who join hands in the building of a dam she may hear the first real news of returning prosperity.

She refers to Mr. Hoover's statements concerning its benefits to mankind as being "childlike." Well, if the construction of an edifice which makes possible the farming of hundreds of miles of lowlands, which have heretofore been flooded, and the irrigation of the higher lands, which turn from barrenness to fertility, is a child's idea, then I am yearning for my second childhood.

WILLIAM COLLINS.

WAITING FOR THE JUDGE.

Chicago, Nov. 26. — Yesterday I was ordered to appear as a complainant at the 11th street police court, room 903, at 9:30. We all, about a hundred persons, waited the whole forenoon, but no judge appeared. At 12:15 the clerk announced that the court will be in session at 1 o'clock. Why should a judge be absent without a substitute, or at least inform the people that there will be no cases called? No business man would tolerate such a condition in his establishment. JOHN A. JACOBSEN.

SOMETHING OUGHT TO BE DONE ABOUT THIS

CITY'S STUDENTS GUESTS TODAY AT LIVE STOCK SHOW

Exposition Closes with Tonight's Program.

The gates of the International Live Stock exposition at the stockyards will be swung open today to admit the thousands of Chicago school children who will be its guests for the final day. The feature of today's closing program will be the awarding of sweepstakes prizes of $1,000 each to the best saddle, harness, and jumping horses at the show.

Today will also see the entire array of prize cattle, sheep and swine on display with their ribbons and trophies, including the Hereford steer Texas Special, which sold for $1.25 a pound, the highest priced meat animal in North America in 1932.

Yesterday's beef cattle auction brought happiness to many a 4-H club youngster who had worked all season to produce the fine stock shown by the youthful farmers in Chicago this week. But it brought special joy to Kenneth Zink, 19 years old, of Verona, Wis. Kenneth's junior feeding champion named Highland Laddie, was sold for 25 cents a pound. The current price for beef on the hoof is 7½ cents.

Girl's Lambs 31c a Pound.

The grand champion fat sheep of the show, a Southdown owned by Purdue university, sold yesterday for 50 cents a pound, while the champion pen of lambs grown and shown by Katherine Sheldon, 18 year old school girl of Oneonta, N. Y., brought 31 cents a pound.

Only the selection of the grand champion Clydesdale and Percheron horses remained after last night for the judges who have been active for six days appraising more than 13,000 animals. These honors among draft horse breeders were shared by breeders from Iowa, Indiana, and Wisconsin.

Two Horse Show Programs Today.

Two full horse show programs will be held today—a matinee at 1:45 p. m. and the evening show at 8. At ten o'clock tonight the largest stock show on record will begin to pack up and by 2 p. m. tomorrow the entire collection of valuable animals will be entrained. This quick breaking up of so large an assembly is made possible through a special system in which several hundred men were being schooled last night by O. T. Henkle, manager of the united stockyards, and B. H. Heide, manager of the exposition.

Latest compilations show that the entries of Emile Philip Schandein, of Milwaukee, have won more first prizes than any other entries. He won ten first place awards. Second is E. A. Stuart, of Seattle, Wash., with nine firsts. The Milky Way farm of Pulaski, Tenn., is third with seven, and the Happy Way farm of Elmhurst, Ill., fourth with six. Miss Mary Gwyn Fiers, of Oklahoma City, has five first places, and the Carnation Stable, of Pomona, Cal., four.

ALLOWS LAWYER TO DROP CLAIM FOR FACTOR FEE

Overmyer in Court on Judge's Order.

Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson yesterday allowed Attorney Franklin R. Overmyer to withdraw his claim to a fee of $77,000 allotted to him in the settlement of civil litigation against John [Jake the Barber] Factor. Attorney Overmyer, who represented the British crown in the criminal action against Factor, had been ordered into court by Judge Wilkerson to explain his desire to relinquish the fee.

The United States Circuit Court of Appeals recently held that Factor should be returned to England to stand trial on charges of defrauding investors of $7,000,000. The English investors also brought suit in the federal district court to break a $3,000,000 trust set up in Chicago banks by Factor.

Fee Division Revealed.

The civil suit was ended by a settlement of $1,300,000 given to the British investors by Factor. Under an agreement with the complainants, Attorney John H. S. Lee, who brought the suit, was to receive 20 per cent of the settlement figure as a fee. Distribution of the fee among attorneys who aided in the suit revealed that Attorney Overmyer was to receive $77,000.

Judge Wilkerson impounded the money and ordered Attorney Overmyer into court to show cause why he should receive the money. The attorney failed to appear and on Thursday retained Attorney Vernon Foster to withdraw his claim.

Attorney Foster appeared yesterday with his client.

"In view of the attitude taken by various attorneys in this case, my client has decided to abandon his claim," he said. "He is a litigant and it is his right to drop the claim and he should not be compelled to give his reasons. The remark was gratuitously made by counsel for Factor that Attorney Overmyer expected to receive compensation from the British liquidator if he dropped this claim. Mr. Overmyer now waives any right to compensation."

He Waives Compensation.

"Does he waive the right to compensation from the British liquidator?" Judge Wilkerson asked.

"He does," Foster replied.

"I wanted Mr. Overmyer in court in case charges were made that would endanger his professional career," Judge Wilkerson said. "He has been given a right to explain and has not seen fit to do so."

Attorney Overmyer was silent, his attorney said, because he did not want other attorneys to distort the facts.

"That is an admission that there are facts," said Attorney G. Gale Gilbert, one of Factor's lawyers.

"This is a matter of public policy," asserted Attorney Allen Carter, another of Factor's counsel. "Charges have been made and they should be aired. Mr. Overmyer went before the Court of Appeals and said that he was not interested in the civil case. I challenge him to explain that."

Attorney Foster interjected the remark that Carter's speech was made for reporters.

"And will you answer the charge before the secretary of state?" Attorney Gilbert asked. The hearing was closed by Judge Wilkerson, who continued the case until Dec. 6 to dispose of a claim for $50,000 in fees advanced by Tamplin & Co., a London law firm.

NILES CENTER KILLING A MYSTERY.

An inquest into the death of Daniel J. Rohan, 47, years old, 4220 North Claremont avenue, who was found shot to death in Niles Center on Oct. 19, resulted yesterday in a verdict of murder by persons unknown.

CENSORSHIP OF FOREIGN NEWS.

A review of history of fifteen years of soviet government in Russia by the correspondent of a New York newspaper is a significant document. It reveals what happens to a reporter in Red Russia and is proof of the effectiveness of the censorship. It gives a picture of the communist experiment which the Kremlin could and of cou did approve.

This is the price paid for being allowed main in Russia. It is a price THE TRIBUN London Times and some other newspapers refused to pay. We have refused to prin tored reports and preferred to get such inf tion as is available in spite of censorship. Russian government has recently tried to silence THE TRIBUNE'S correspondent at Riga and other correspondents at that place who were telling too much about conditions under the soviet. Correspondents who have been in Russia and insist upon sending out frank reports have to leave sooner or later, and usually sooner. Those who remain yield to discipline and give to their readers only such matter as the soviet rulers are willing to let out. So far as these correspondents are concerned the censorship is more than a success. Complete silence would be sinister, but censored reports have the appearance of news and thus the reporters became the agents of soviet publicity.

It is our policy to refuse to coöperate with foreign governments at the expense of our readers. THE TRIBUNE will not submit to a system of censorship, although it recognizes the right to control publicity in dangerous crises. This has nothing to do, however, with a continuing suppression or control of the publicity, and wherever this is imposed THE TRIBUNE prefers to take its men out. We refuse, for the sake of appearances or merely to have what purports to be news from a foreign country in our pages, to accept the responsibility for helping any régime to give an official portrait of itself. There are a good many governments in the present disordered condition of the world that cannot afford to have their story told, but THE TRIBUNE prefers to do its best to tell all it can learn of them in spite of the censor rather than exchange its freedom for official tolerance.

DONALD DAY
Chicago Tribune Correspondent at Riga.

From the Chicago Tribune of November 18, 1932.

YOU GET ALL THE NEWS ABOUT RUSSIA IN THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE

The Tribune prints the Associated Press dispatches from Russia. It prints United Press dispatches from Russia.

In addition, the Tribune prints news from Russia which other newspapers do not print. To make certain that Tribune readers get the truth, the Tribune Russian correspondent, Donald Day, maintains his headquarters across the Russian border at Riga, Latvia. There he writes the real facts about conditions in Russia, unmuzzled by soviet censors, and the Tribune prints them.

The soviet dictators do not like this arrangement. As recently as last month the soviet government demanded that Latvia expel the Tribune's correspondent from that country.

As set out in the Tribune editorial of November 18, reproduced above, the Tribune does not take orders from Moscow. Nor does it take orders from Tokio, or Paris, or London, or from Washington.

The Tribune is independent—politically and financially. Its stand on any question, public or private, is not compromised by affiliation with any person, corporation, bank, bloc, political party, government, or fear of censor.

To get the truth, the real news of happenings at home and abroad, read the Chicago Tribune!

THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER

MISSIONARIES IN CHINA SHOULDER PICK AND SHOVEL

Extend Their Activities to Practical Help.

BY JOHN POWELL.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SHANGHAI, Dec. 2.—The familiar caricature of the American missionary going about with a Bible under one arm and a bundle of religious tracts under the other will have to be scrapped. In place of the religious literature there will have to be substituted implements suitable for digging irrigation ditches, building river dikes and road construction.

The American missionaries in China, of whom there are some 5,000, have changed their approach in the matter of converting the country to Christianity. They, and also the European missionaries, have decided to devote more attention to the pressing problem of relieving distress among the millions of Chinese rather than to trying to induce them to improve their ways of living as preparation for a future existence.

Urged to Swing Pick.

The November issue of "The Chinese Recorder," organ of the mission boards, is devoted almost entirely to articles pointing out the necessity for missionaries to "no longer hold themselves aloof from efforts which have as the primary objective the relief of human pain and suffering." The missionary is urged to shoulder pick and shovel and go out and show the Chinese how to dig drainage ditches, build modern roads, and construct dikes to prevent the rivers from flooding the land.

"We cannot be true to the call of the Master or truly follow in His footsteps if we do not respond to the crying need of famine stricken sufferers," the publication says.

The movement is due to a succession of natural calamities which have left millions of Chinese prostrate. American missionaries had considerable to do with initiating the movement in 1931 which resulted in the United States farm aid board selling China some 12,000,000 bushels of wheat, which was used to relieve the famine resulting from the floods in the Yangtze valley which drove some 50,000,000 Chinese from their homes. The wheat was used to pay wages to thousands of refugees employed in repairing dikes and building roads after the floods. Dozens of foreign missionaries assisted in the work, serving as supervisors of labor gangs and in the dispensing of relief to the starving.

Help in Other Projects.

Missionaries, due to their familiarity with local conditions and their wide acquaintanceship with the Chinese people in the interior, also have assisted in other relief projects, including irrigation schemes in Chahar, Shansi and Shensi provinces. Some years ago they had almost complete charge of an extensive relief project which resulted in the saving of thousands of lives of Chinese famine sufferers in Kansu province.

John Earl Baker, graduate of the University of Wisconsin, who several years ago inaugurated a plan of road construction as a means of providing employment for famine sufferers, told how he had utilized the services of missionaries in auditing the funds involved in financing the construction of 850 miles of roads in Shantung province. The peasant refugees employed on the job would not trust their own local magistrates, but they did trust the missionaries.

Another element which has caused the foreign missionary to adopt "practical work" as part of his program in China, has been the growth of Russian communism. The Russian propagandists pointed to the American and European missionaries as "parasites" who rendered little practical service to the Chinese people. The result was an extensive anti-Christian movement which for a time was disastrous to mission work in many interior districts. In recent years, however, the anti-Christian movement has subsided.

RESTAURANT MEN MEET TO FIGHT FOR BEER TRADE

Thirty restaurateurs from various sections of the country, representing 5,000 restaurants, met as members of the National Restaurant association in the Hotel Sherman yesterday to discuss the expected return of beer.

The association will fight any attempt to allow beer to be sold at soda fountains, said Fred A. Simonsen, Detroit, president. Plans were made to seek stabilization of the restaurant industry, combating the springing up of thousands of little restaurants, it was said.

"It is our contention that beer rightly belongs in an established eating place such as a restaurant, and has no place in drug stores or confectionery shops," Mr. Simonsen said. "We hope to force legislation so that beer may be sold only in recognized and real restaurants."

THIS $100 GIFT WILL BUY LUNCH FOR 2,000 PUPILS

Tops Day's Donations for Food Fund.

A contribution of $100 from an anonymous donor kept the total of contributions to the Hungry School Children's fund from sinking to a new minimum for one day. The gift was sufficient to give a free noonday lunch to 2,000 grammar school children. The contributions for the day totaled $135.98.

Equally welcome, because of the spirit that promoted it, was the gift of Mrs. P. E. G. James of Downers Grove. In a letter she said:

"I am inclosing one dollar to aid some child to get a meal at school. May all the blessings of the Almighty be upon you in your good work and the workers in this good drive to help fit children for school work. I cannot promise any amount, but will give what I can. I have not earned one dollar in three years, but when I can see a chance to send a dollar I will."

Total More than $14,000.

The day's contributions brought the grand total for this year's drive to $14,375.97. Last year, during the winter period, the Hungry School Children's fund fed 10,000 children daily, in 209 public schools, at a cost of $48,000. The need is much greater this year. Acknowledgment is made of the following gifts:

Elise Liveright, Actress, Sues for $20,000 Alimony

New York, Dec. 2.—(AP)—Mrs. Elise Bartlett Schildkraut Liveright, actress, has started a legal attempt to make Joseph Schildkraut, actor, pay her some $20,000 alimony. Justice Callahan signed an order yesterday permitting her to question him before trial as to how much wealth he has. The actress contends an alimony agreement was not carried out after she and Schildkraut were divorced in Los Angeles in 1930.

THEFT OF TAX LISTS TO BE PUT UP TO COURTNEY

Assessor J. L. Jacobs said yesterday that he will ask Thomas J. Courtney, when he takes office Monday as state's attorney, to investigate the discovery of personal property assessment records, which the assessor says were stolen, in the office of the National Tax Service bureau, 75 East Wacker drive.

The records were found in a raid of the office Thursday, and were seized upon a subpoena duces tecum obtained by Mr. Jacobs. Edward F. Ashenden, head of the bureau, was taken to the assessor's office, questioned, and released. He asserted that he purchased the records from a man whose name he did not know.

It was established yesterday, Mr. Jacobs said, that the records were abstracted somewhere in the printing plant of the James T. Igoe company, which printed them. Copies of the records had been delivered to the assessor's office, but the packages were found unopened. Congressman James T. Igoe, head of the company, promised Mr. Jacobs yesterday to make a personal investigation of the leak.

JAPANESE ADMIT KILLING 350, BUT DENY 'MASSACRE'

Chicago Consulate Tells of "Fushun Incident."

An official explanation of the "Fushun incident" on Sept. 16, when Japanese soldiers were reported to have slain 2,700 Chinese men, women, and children at Chenchinpao, Manchuria, was issued yesterday by the Japanese consulate in Chicago. There was no massacre, the statement said, but about 350 "bandits and the unruly elements associated with them" were killed, it was admitted, and the village of Chenchinpao virtually was destroyed by fire.

"On the night of Sept. 15," the statement said, "about 2,000 bandits, including some of the insurgent elements which had been active along the Hailung-Mukden railway, advanced to attack Fushun. They set fires at various places along their route of march and attacked the Japanese garrison stationed at Fushun. The bandits were found to have made their headquarters at two villages, Chenchinpao and Lichiake, near Fushun.

Claims Chinese Fired First.

"On the afternoon of Sept. 16 one section of a Japanese army company, commanded by Lieut. Inouye, was dispatched to Chenchinpao to search out the bandits. As the troops approached the village they were fired upon. They returned the fire, using a small trench mortar. The fighting lasted about thirty minutes, the bandits being defeated. In the meantime most of the village had caught fire and was destroyed. About 350 of the bandits and the unruly elements associated with them were killed."

After stating that Japanese soldiers aided inhabitants of the village who had been wounded or rendered homeless the communication closed by terming the massacre story "Chinese propaganda."

Chinese Driven Back.

TSITSIHAR, Manchuria, Dec. 3.—[Saturday.]—(AP)—Japan's winter offensive aiming to wipe out the power of Gen. Su Ping-Wen, who has been holding nearly one-quarter of Manchuria against the Manchukuo government, today reached the northwestern village of Halasu.

A Japanese vanguard, advancing in deep snows of the Kinghan foothills, occupied Halasu, where they hoisted the rising sun flag with the temperature 22 degrees below zero. Near Pokoto, 100 miles south of the soviet border, Japanese airplanes bombed a long west bound train supposedly filled with troops under command of Gen. Chang Tien-Chu, Gen. Su's chief aid. Three bombs hit the train and hundreds of occupants fled into the hills.

Another Japanese air squadron bombed a supposed insurgent concentration at Ching Shing, southeastward from Tsitsihar, and was believed to have inflicted heavy losses. The Hirage brigade, crack Japanese unit, was reported mopping up between Fulaerchi and Chantzushan. The bulk of the Japanese forces was pushing on to these points after occupying Chalantan, 75 miles northwest of Tsitsihar. One of Gen. Chang's cavalry commanders, with 1,000 followers, was reported to have surrendered southwest of Chantzushan.

Yellow Cab

So that the Public May Know

This cry for lower taxi-cab rates isn't as much on the square as some of you may think it is. There's a lot of shenanigan about it that you know nothing about. So, we advise you to keep your eyes peeled, your ears open and your caution in good working order before you fall for it.

What does it mean, you ask? Simply this—that racketeers have muscled-in the taxi-cab business in many of the big cities of the country, and have grabbed nearly every reputable industry under the sun, with the direct result that reliable and standard institutions have been seriously harmed. Do you want them to muscle-in the taxi-cab industry here?

LOWER CAB RATES MEAN LOWER CAB SERVICE.

If these proposed additional cabs, without financial responsibility, are licensed, it means that things will return to the frightful cab conditions that existed here fifteen years ago and that the public will again be at the mercy of irresponsibles. Doubtless you recall the dirty, ill-smelling, rickety cabs, and their tough drivers, which ran wild in Chicago at that time, charging you what they pleased and compelling you to pay.

You begged for relief. The Yellow Cab was the answer to your plea. Complete revolution took place. Yellow Cab presented you with roomy, sanitary cabs, designed for ease and comfort—it established a perfect system of operation, faultless fare registers, decent, reliable drivers, a high-class organization and FINANCIAL RESPONSIBILITY which guaranteed you against accident, ill-treatment and over-charging, a feature no other cab concern had.

Do you want racketeers to step in now and take all this away from you? Do you want to return to the miserable times of fifteen years ago?

REDUCE SURPLUS OF MILK TO MEET FALLING PRICES

BY PAUL POTTER.

The lowering of retail milk and cream prices in the Chicago metropolitan area, effective Thursday, which gave consumers the first 9 cents a quart milk and 15 cents a half pint cream in more than a decade, already has produced a notable change in farming operations in the twenty-four counties of three states supplying four million persons.

In a survey of this territory yesterday it was found that nearly 20,000 dairy farmers, anticipating a reduction in their daily income, began a program of retrenchment nearly two months ago. Instead of continuing to feed their fine herds of inspected cattle for liberal milk production, they have turned most of the cows onto open pastures and reduced their feed rations.

Protect Own Markets.

"The dairy and live stock farmers plan their production operations over a long period," stated A. M. Krahl, an officer of the Pure Milk association. "Yet they are able to control their surpluses better than grain farmers. In spite of favorable weather and low feed and labor costs, members of our association and other dairymen have refrained from creating enormous surpluses which in turn would have destroyed their markets, as is the case with wheat or cotton farmers."

Beef cattle prices in the last fortnight have touched the lowest levels in 21 years. Yet the sheep and hog producers within a few hours of the Chicago stockyards have found conditions favorable for feeding their large corn crop "on the hoof" this winter.

Fatten Western Lambs Here.

There are 50,000 sheep being fattened on farms near Sycamore alone. As in many other northern Illinois farming areas, the De Kalb county farmers fatten western lambs on a contract basis. They were supplied the thin young lambs by Nebraska, Wyoming and Colorado breeders at 4 to 4½ cents a pound, and are paid for all the gains in fattening at current market prices, which yesterday were 6 to 6½ cents a pound.

"One of the striking developments in sheep production," declares John Caine, sheep marketing specialist for the Union Stockyards and Transit company, "has been the almost complete elimination of mutton production. The economic advantages of producing fat lambs have been so great that the sale of old animals for meat is now a negligible part of the total sheep industry. Mutton seems to be reserved for those with old world tastes."

PRISONER SHOT; WOMAN HOLDS GUN ON HIS PAL

Laurence Pfohman, 36 years old, of 719 3d avenue, Elmhurst, was shot in the hip last evening when he tried to get away from a private detective outside of the South State street police building. He says he is an ex-convict.

Pfohman was arrested with James McCormick, 44 years old, a companion, when he allegedly tried to pass a bogus check in Goldblatt's store at Chicago and Ashland avenues. Both were put into a car and driven toward the detective bureau by William Clarke, chief of the store's special service, and Miss Frances Hill, a store matron.

In front of the bureau, Pfohman jumped out of the automobile. Clarke followed him while Miss Hill, drawing her own gun, held McCormick prisoner. The chase led to the alley in the rear of the police building. Clarke, after firing two warning shots, fired a third one directly at Pfohman, hitting him.

A touch of comedy was added to the chase when a hobo, hearing the shots, jumped out from a doorway yelling, "I surrender." Police let him go, believing he surrendered through habit.

Report Brazilian Cruiser Sank Peruvian Vessel

PARA, Brazil, Dec. 2.—(AP)—Persistent rumors from the vicinity of Leticia say that the Brazilian cruiser Floriano recently sank a Peruvian launch in frontier waters there. The ministry of marine at Rio de Janeiro has received no confirmation. The Floriano was sent recently to the waters separating Brazil, Peru and Colombia to protect Brazilian neutrality in the dispute between Colombia and Peru over the Leticia area.

SPAIN SENTENCES AIDS IN PRIMO'S COUP TO PRISON

Republic Strikes at Old Dictatorship.

MADRID, Dec. 2.—(AP)—The republic struck at the remnants of Primo de Rivera's seven year dictatorship over Spain today when the "tribunal of dictatorship" handed down sentences for "responsibilities" incurred during Primo's régime.

Twenty-eight military and civilian officers who served under the dictatorship between 1923 and 1930 were placed on trial beginning Nov. 22. Some of them are dead, others in jail, others on parole, and still more have fled abroad. The sentences will be announced next Wednesday, but one of the tribunal officials announced the decisions were as follows:

The longest sentence was twelve years' confinement in a Spanish place to be determined by the government, coupled with 20 years' deprivation of civil rights. Gen. Frederico Berenguer one of the leading generals who took over the Madrid garrison during the coup d'état in 1923, was sentenced to this punishment.

Deprived of Civil Rights.

Others who suffered likewise were Gen. Martinez Anido, Gen. Munoz Cobos, and the Marquis de Cavalcanti, all of whom were in the front rank of Primo's supporters.

All members of the second dictatorship were deprived of their civil rights for life and banished to 20 years' exile, with the exception of Gen. Francisco Jordana and Antonio Mayandia y Gomez, both of whom are in jail.

Others involved received lesser sentences. Gen. Leopoldo Saro, who returned from a long residence in the Philippine islands on Nov. 6 only to be promptly thrust in prison, will be permitted to return to the Philippines under a six year banishment order.

Only nine generals are actually in jail, while several others are on parole because of advanced age.

The tribunal is composed of 21 national deputies. The court was established to "investigate, ascertain and prosecute for the national congress" crimes committed under the past régime.

The trial was held in the building of the former senate, a body which was discarded as a legislative instrument by the new constitution.

State and Church Dispute.

Meanwhile a project of law looking toward settlement of the controversy between the state and the church was presented to congress today by the parliamentary justice committee. It provides for official recognition of religious orders placed under civil laws and permits ecclesiastical authorities to be freely named by the church, but stipulates that they must be Spaniards. It also provides for taxation of convents, seminaries, and episcopal palaces, and states that the church must expect no financial aid from the state.

Religious orders under the proposal would be permitted to buy movable property only in so far as required for religious services. The future law would grant the church certain buildings and objects declared to be national property, but they cannot be sold or disposed of. Religious orders would not be allowed to teach, maintain business, or enter into politics.

WRIT FILED FOR RELEASE OF WOLF, BANK EMBEZZLER

A writ of habeas corpus which seeks the release of Walter J. Wolf, former employé of the Continental Illinois Bank and Trust company, who is now serving 10 consecutive sentences of 1 to 10 years in the penitentiary for embezzlement of more than $3,000,000 from the bank, was filed yesterday before Chief Justice John Prystalski of the Criminal court. The writ was made returnable on Tuesday. It is alleged in the petition that the sentences imposed on Wolf are illegal because they do not specify a definite time for the start and ending of each sentence.

Details Life Story of Noted Jungle Hunter

Duguid Writes More About Famous Guide.

If you read "Green Hell," one of last season's best jungle thrillers, you naturally wanted to know more about Tiger Man, the indomitable, insouciant and at time almost irritatingly efficient Sacha Siemel, who piloted the author and his two companions through South American terrors. There wasn't nearly enough about him to satisfy the curiosity of the reader.

Julian Duguid apparently felt the same when he finished writing "Green Hell" and had gone back to the comforts of London. So he cabled Siemel, asking if he might write a story of his life. Tiger Man said yes. Duguid dashed across the globe and spent six weeks with his former jungle guide, delving into Siemel's adventurous career.

Part of this time was spent hunting. Siemel killed seven jaguars with a spear, roped three cubs and with bow and arrow shot two jaguars [or tigers as they call them in that part of the world] and a puma. Which will show that his reputation as a great hunter with spear and bow and arrow is not undeserved.

⊰⊱

Siemel's colorful career started tamely enough in Latvia. But the dullness of Labau palled on him and he ran away from home as a stowaway on a tramp, and for several years worked on sea and land, even clerking in a candy shop in Chicago until his love of sweets cost him his job.

His wanderings eventually landed him in South America, lured there by his brother Ernst's dramatic words: "Every forest trail is a finger pointing to El Dorado."

In Buenos Aires he encountered romance which nearly led to tragedy and which was one reason for his seeking forgetfulness in the Matto Grosso district of Brazil.

Then followed years of adventure as he and his brother worked as mechanic and photographer through Matto Grosso, in towns as hard and quick on the trigger as any western mining camp. Thrills were as plentiful there as in the jungle.

⊰⊱

During these years of tropical wandering Siemel, with an Indian as teacher, became one of the most famous hunters in South America. He could kill a tiger with a spear with the skill of a native.

For a time he made an income out of the hides of the tigers. The ranchers within a radius of fifty miles hailed him as a protector, for a full grown jaguar will eat as many as seventy cattle a year.

Then Siemel made the motherly old barge Adventuress his adventure base. Accompanied by his devoted Argentine cowboy companion, Appariclo, two monkeys and his dogs, he floated into thrill after thrill.

Siemel had one real tragedy in his tumultuous jungle life—the murder of his brother Ernst, who had accompanied him for years but who never had learned to understand the sensitive Brazilian and had never been happy away from cities. His lack of understanding cost him his life.

Tiger Man is an outstanding biography of a tropical adventurer, well told and picturesque in its setting of wild life, both animal and human.

The National Home Library Foundation has issued a special edition of 500,000 copies of "Alice in Wonderland" by Lewis Carroll, with a specially written introduction by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt. The volume also contains the sequel "Through the Looking Glass" and "The Hunting of the Snark." The foundation will distribute this edition immediately to schools and public institutions at 10 cents per volume.

"Death of a Fleet" Reveals Secrets of German War Mutiny

"Death of a Fleet," by Paul Schubert and Langhorne Gibson [Coward-McCann], is a dramatic picture, told for the first time in detail and with authority, of the disastrous mutiny in the German navy which was climaxed with the sensational sabotage of the imperial high sea fleet at Scapa Flow after it had been surrendered to the British.

The authors spent eighteen months in a cross-ocean search for the secrets which their book divulges. They discovered details, never before published, of the 1917 and 1918 mutinies which took place at a time when the allies thought Germany still a real sea power.

The first part of the book is devoted to the gradual growth of the mutiny throughout the fleet. This is told in a style that is irritating in its brevity. Sentences are cut to a minimum and paragraphs are sometimes slashed to a few words. The authors' ideas are put over with a machine gun rat-a-tat-tat-tat that theoretically should fit in with the rapid fire action of the narrative—but don't.

But the chapter on the heartbreaking sinking of the German grand fleet by the Germans themselves, one of the most dramatic episodes in naval history, is worth all of the preliminary staccato sentence shooting.

Anthropologist Pens Tale of Riffian Life Based on His Study

"Flesh of the Wild Ox," by Carleton S. Coon [Morrow], is a Riffian chronicle of "high valleys and long rifles." The author, a young anthropologist from Harvard, was sent up into the Moroccan hills to study the Riffians. He spent nearly two years exploring this mysterious country and living among this warlike people. His wife accompanied him.

His book is a literary byproduct of his intimate knowledge of these people. Although written in story form, it is claimed to be an authentic portrait of Riffian life, based on oral tradition of the legendary history of the Rif. It is a continuous narrative leading to the recent Riffian war which forms the background for the action of the story.

The unusual title is based on an old Riffian proverb: "They that partake of the flesh of the wild ox grow in courage, and he who eats of its brain becomes crafty."

Sherman Life by Lloyd Lewis Given Praise

Work Classed with Great Biographies.

BY FANNY BUTCHER.

"Sherman, Fighting Prophet," by Lloyd Lewis. [Harcourt-Brace.] Published Dec. 1.

UNQUESTIONABLY one of the great American biographies is offered to the world in "Sherman, Fighting Prophet." From the pen of a young man whose historic writing has been confined to that excellent first half of "Chicago, the History of Its Reputation" and whose biographical research in "Myths After Lincoln" although it produced a volume of historical importance gave only a hint of the sustained power and the delicate precision of this superb work, "Sherman" is the literary surprise of the year.

LLOYD LEWIS.

"Sherman" has something of the quality of our own Tribune Tower. It is a shaft of literary beauty soaring into the sky, modern in the sense of the welding of idea to action, of action to idea, its sturdy steel structure bearing it aloft to literary heights. It is classical in its outward design of a biography which records rather than interprets.

Lloyd Lewis has done in "Sherman" what may seem on the surface a conventional biography, for he has set down the facts of the life of the man and left the psychological interpretation of his actions and his words [recorded in his letters and his memoirs] to the inference of the reader. The "modern" biographer has been given of late to the omission of detail of action and an interpretation rather than a minute chronicling of events. The anecdotal method has superseded the older documental one.

Mr. Lewis has gone back to the documental method—on the surface—and has with the most meticulous care sought the factual source of every sentence which he has written. But the documentation has been in his own mind and his own files. He offers his readers sentences pregnant with fact, and yet never is the reader conscious of the actual documentation. Fourteen pages of fine printing of a bibliography documents the general sources and the sources of the statements in each chapter. Six hundred and fifty-three out size pages state the details of the life of William Tecumseh Sherman [in other times it would certainly have been printed in two volumes, and I suspect that the fact that it was chosen by the Book of the Month club as much as anything else influenced its appearance in one volume], but never on any one of those pages is the reader conscious of "dull details" or overdocumentation.

That is because the author has used his documented material only as the outer covering to the firm, steel integrated interpretation of a period. Sherman lived through, in the span of his eighty-two years, probably the most dramatic period of American history. His boyhood saw the last of the crude pioneer days, his youth the spectacular days of California, his manhood the first obvious stitches dropped in the knitting of south and north in one union, his maturity the sudden rending of that fabric, his later maturity the political tragedies of the patching of that rent, and his old age the luxury of the warmth of a comfortable reknitting.

The years after the civil war march by in Mr. Lewis' pages in comparatively swift parade compared to the years before and during the war, but in no biography of late years—unless perhaps in Carl Sandburg's "The Prairie Years"—is there to be found such minutely detailed records of the contemporary American life and American consciousness.

"Sherman" has some superbly written chapters—the description of the battle of Shiloh, for instance, and the moving last paragraphs about Sherman's death—but it is the perfect marriage between subject matter and manner that makes Mr. Lewis' volume the monument that it is both to the author and to his subject. "Sherman" is the kind of book that gives most reviewers complete satisfaction, because they cannot imagine that particular job conceivably being better done. This reviewer, for one, expects to see "Sherman" laureled with the year's biography prize.

ABOUT PEOPLE.

Emily Dickinson Face to Face, by Martha Dickinson Bianchi, contains 150 unpublished notes and letters from the most discussed woman poet of America.

My Friendship with Oscar Wilde, by Lord Alfred Douglas [Coventry], presents the other side of a famous case.

POETRY.

The Plays and Poems, of W. S. Gilbert [Random House], collects the plays in poetic form that have delighted several generations.

Troilus and Cressida, in modern verse formed by George Philip Krapp [Random House], is a poetic rendition of Geoffrey Chaucer's immortal story. Illustrated by Eric Gill.

O'Brien, Compiler of Short Stories, Pens Life of Nietzsche

Edward J. O'Brien, who was born an American but who has spent most of his life in Europe, and is now settled permanently in England, is known throughout the literary circles of two countries for his distinguished and valuable yearly anthologies of British and American short stories.

In "Son of Morning" [Brewer, Warner & Putnam] Mr. O'Brien has made a considerable departure from his customary literary activities. This book is his first attempt at biography and presents the tortured life cycle of one of the most interesting of German philosophers, Friedrich Nietzsche. Most people attach to this name an almost mythical and legendary portrait of the blackest pessimism and anti-Christian philosophy.

The author lifts the veils from this bitter and beaten figure to reveal a sensitive and human man, brought up in childhood in the deepest religious atmosphere, and forced into a complicated defense mechanism to shield himself from the pain of his life and the pain that he helplessly inherited.

The author brings out much that has been heretofore concealed about the love of Nietzsche for Cosima Wagner, an unrequited love with a tragic ending. He shows how, in his belief, the whole trend of European philosophic thought was influenced by this love affair. "Son of the Morning" is a penetrating and just study of Nietzsche the man and the philosopher.

Story of American Shore Whaling Told in Book First Time

For the first time the story of American shore whaling has been told in "Whale Off!" by Everett J. Edwards and Jeannette Edwards Rattray (Stokes). The authors are the son and granddaughter of the famous old whaler Cap'n Joshua B. Edwards of Amagansett, Long Island. In an introduction by Roy Chapman Andrews that famous explorer points out that it tells of an important phase of American history — shore whaling — which has been neglected by other writers.

Everett J. Edwards tells of the whaling adventures of himself and his father, old Cap'n Josh. Mrs. Rattray adds several valuable chapters of historical data on whaling, going back to revolutionary days.

The book describes not only the thrills of shore whaling but it pictures the daily work and play of these shore whalemen who were farmers and fishermen when not harpooning whales. It's a picturesque volume, well illustrated, well written and an important addition to lovers of whaling lore, sea adventure and authentic Americana. It has interesting end paper maps.

Agate Prepares Collection of Views on Stage

Quotes Leaders of Opinion for Centuries.

BY FRANK SWINNERTON.

LONDON. — [Special Correspondence.]—Within a few days James Agate's new anthology, "The English Dramatic Critics," will be published in this city. It should be welcome, for Mr. Agate has gathered together in its pages brief extracts from the leaders of critical opinion from the seventeenth century to the present day.

Nor are the extracts haphazard, for Mr. Agate is an authority on the drama and an unusually well read man. One might not think this from the boisterousness of some of his writing, but it is true. Mr. Agate graduated upon the Manchester Guardian. He came to London a good many years ago and is dramatic critic to the British Broadcasting corporation, dramatic critic to the Sunday Times in succession to St. John Ervine, and literary critic to the London Daily Express.

He has written novels, bred horses, kept a shop, and argued endlessly with everybody he met. A vigorous and flamboyant personality. And also one in which vigor and flamboyance is not the last secret to be revealed. This anthology that he has prepared should be a very good one and very valuable to all who care to follow the vagaries and consistencies of dramatic criticism throughout the ages.

Now we are all aware that experience of acting has often been a prelude to the writing of admirable plays. Have we not the cases of Miss Clemence Dane, Noel Coward, and Frank Vosper among present day dramatists? And, among their forerunners, Shakespeare and Granville-Barker? But for an actor to write novels is something less common. The late Bram Stoker, who wrote "Dracula," was never an actor, but was business manager to Sir Henry Irving.

Russell Thorndyke, however, the brother of Dame Sybil Thorndyke, and himself an actor of power and versatility (it was he who took the chief part in Joseph Conrad's dramatic version of "The Secret Agent," and he has lately been acting in a series of Grand Guignol dramas in London), has before now shown his skill as a novelist. He has just written another novel, entitled "The Water Witch," which will appear shortly.

No hint is given by the publishers in their early announcements of the nature of this book, but I expect it to be a story of incident and adventure rather than a study in morbid psychology.

Two volumes of short stories are nearly ready by two of the best short story writers among the younger authors. The first of these is "Five for Silver," by Malachi Whitaker; the second is "Apples by Night," by H. A. Manhood, the author of "Gay Agony," whose former book of short stories, "Nightseed," made his reputation.

Mr. Manhood is a writer of whom many good judges expect really great things. He does not belong, as so many fashionable writers do, to the English upper middle, or "good family," class, but is a born writer who is making his own career. He is also uncompromising.

TRANSLATOR

T. E. Shaw as he looked when as "Lawrence of Arabia" he brought off his great war time coup about which he wrote in "The Revolt in the Desert." Mr. Shaw has just translated "The Odyssey of Homer" into very beautiful and vivid English, which is published by the Oxford University Press.

'The Linebook, 1932' Has Dashing Sketch of Famous Conductor

"The Linebook, 1932," compiled by Shelby Little, has just made its appearance, with a dashing sketch of the famous and beloved conductor of "A Line o' Type or Two" on the front cover and the back adorned by Dick passionately driving his modern Pegasus—a buzz buggy—through the contribution filled air outside Tribune Tower and the little Sealyham wearing out his paws keeping up with lizzie (as the literary saying goes).

Inside is the usual fun and frolic in poems, bon mots, quips, sallies, wisecracks, jests, persiflages, whimsicalities, etc., including "Manchuria, Personally Conducted," in which the personal conductor of the Line points out a few of the natural disadvantages of a place where he spent fifty years one twelvemonth. This linebook is the ninth.

The Prince of Vagabonds

"Magnificent Obsession" Book with Strange Career

"Magnificent Obsession," by Lloyd C. Douglas, whose second novel, "Forgive Us Our Trespasses," was recently published, has had a strange career. Published in October, 1929, the first novel of an unknown writer, it suffered the obscurity that often is visited upon first novels by unknown writers. Then suddenly it began to be asked for in the bookshops and it was reprinted—for the first time—in August, 1930. During the two years since then it has gone through twenty printings, and it has even been a best seller in some shops.

APPLETON BIOGRAPHIES
"These books exactly meet the needs of many modern readers who have neither the time nor the willingness to read full-sized, detailed biographies of all the world's great, concerning whom they want to know enough to be able to think intelligently about them. Their aim is not to present the usual formal biographical narrative but rather to make an interpretative picture of the man in relation to his times. . . . There has been a careful selection of authors. . . . The point of view of each is fresh and modern."—New York Times. "Such richness of reading matter is enough to triple star any day."—Fanny Butcher in The Chicago Tribune. Eight volumes now ready.

JULIUS CAESAR
By John Buchan. "Rich, live picture of Caesar and his Rome."—N. Y. Herald-Tribune. "Superb."—Chicago Tribune.

VOLTAIRE

MARLBOROUGH

MOZART

LEONARDO DA VINCI

EAGLE LEADERS' LOTTERY TRIAL IS NEARING END

Case Expected to Go to Jury Today.

New York, Dec. 2.—[Special.]—Conrad H. Mann, Kansas City business leader, and the three men who helped him raise $1,750,000 almost two years ago through the sale of tickets by members of the fraternal order of Eagles, were described today as "benefactors of mankind," and also as shrewd business men whose motive in violating the federal lottery law was private profit.

The first description was by Albert C. Ottinger and Max D. Steuer of defense counsel, the second by Louis Mead Treadwell, assistant United States attorney. All three attorneys summed up before the jury, which will receive the case tomorrow after being charged by Federal Judge Frank J. Coleman.

Four Are on Trial.

In addition to Mann, who was worthy grand president of the order in 1931, when the alleged lottery was conducted, the defendants are Frank E. Hering, who was editor of the Eagles magazine, Bernard C. McGuire, promoter, who shared with Mann and Hering $460,000 of the enterprise's net profit, and Raymond Walsh, McGuire's small salaried assistant, accused of having arranged for the shipment of lottery tickets across the state line.

Witnesses testified earlier in the trial that about $400,000 of the money raised through the sale of tickets had gone to the aeries or local chapters of the order, which in turn had distributed some or all of the proceeds to charity.

Drawing Held on Boat.

The attorneys began to sum up after witnesses had testified to a drawing for prizes which was held, they said, on a boat bearing representatives of all aeries. The boat sailed from Toledo, O., in August, 1930.

It was Mr. Steuer's contention that when Mann and McGuire entered into the contract to raise money neither had planned to give out awards on the basis of lot or chance.

Every purchaser of a ticket was entitled to a chance to win a prize, and the tickets admitted their bearers to entertainments conducted by the aeries.

BEG YOUR PARDON

The law firm of McNab, Holmes & Long points out that taxes totaling $4,888 have been paid upon the property at 131-7 South Wells street, owned by William A. Pinkerton and the estate of Robert Pinkerton. The taxes were paid Nov. 21. An item in THE TRIBUNE, printed Nov. 24, stated that the records of the county treasurer did not contain a record of the payment of the taxes as of Nov. 19.

ONLY 2 FUNERAL CONCERNS RESIST DRIVER LOCKOUT

The lockout of members of the Livery Car Chauffeurs' union by undertakers and liverymen of the Funeral Services Associated was practically complete yesterday. Only two livery companies defied the association's ban on union drivers.

The livery companies operating are the Shenandoah Auto livery, 3635-37 North Halsted street, and the Hursen Auto livery, 35 North Western avenue. The former is a suspended member of the association and the latter is not affiliated with it. Both will continue to operate today.

Funerals were conducted in an orderly manner despite the wage dispute between the union and the association. Police were on watch for trouble and will continue on duty today. Undertakers and livery company owners, who are, incidentally, union members, drove their own cars in funerals.

GEORGE E. DEAN, HEAD OF ALBION COLLEGE, IS DEAD

Albion, Mich., Dec. 2.—[Special.]—George E. Dean, steel products manufacturer and president of the board of trustees of Albion college, died at his home here tonight after a brief illness. He was 60 years old.

Mr. Dean, long interested in Albion college, was elected its board president only last Saturday. Twenty-four hours later he was stricken with a heart attack. He had made numerous donations to the school and built the Dean dormitory for girls. He will be succeeded as board president by Howard C. Lawrence, state treasurer.

Mr. Dean was founder and president of the Union Steel Products company and president of the National Association of Bakery Equipment Manufacturers. Surviving him are his widow, Belle, and six children, W. Clark Dean, Mrs. Reginald Smith, Mrs. Paul Ewbank, Miss Ruth, Frank, and George Dean Jr.

HENRY B. FARGO, FORMER GENEVA MAYOR, IS DEAD

Henry B. Fargo, 89, a former mayor of Geneva, member of the legislature and for years one of the outstanding promoters of Fox River valley development, died at his home in Batavia road late Thursday night. Theater and hotel buildings in Geneva, Sycamore and Dixon bear his name and he owned considerable other property.

Realty men put the value of his holdings at more than a million dollars. He was long prominent in Masonic circles and made liberal provision for institutions of the order.

For years Mr. Fargo was identified with the Cummings Real Estate association of Chicago. He was born at Wausaw, N. Y., Aug. 29, 1843, and lived until 1889 at Fond du Lac, Wis.

Surviving are a son, Charles, of Oak Park, and two grandchildren, Miss Anne Fargo of De Kalb, and Mrs. Claude Sansone of Peoria. Mrs. Fargo died in March, 1930. Funeral services will be held from the home in Geneva tomorrow at 3 p. m. Interment will be in Oak Hill cemetery, Geneva.

DR. BUNDESEN'S MOTHER IS DEAD IN CALIFORNIA

Dr. Herman N. Bundesen, president of the board of health, left for San Francisco last night on receiving word that his mother, Mrs. Ida Bundesen Hill, had passed away. Mrs. Hill, who was 79 years old, suffered an attack of influenza a few days ago which was followed by pneumonia, messages from San Francisco said. Until 25 years ago Mrs. Hill was a resident of Chicago. Funeral services and burial will be held in San Francisco on Monday.

John P. Scott, Composer of Sacred Music, Is Dead

Syracuse, N. Y., Dec. 2.—(AP)—John Prindle Scott of New York City and Washington, composer of sacred music and a concert singer, died here today. He was 55 years old. Mr. Scott's career as a musician and composer began when he started teaching singing at Saginaw, Mich., an occupation he followed two years. For more than 10 years he appeared in public as a concert singer. Among his sacred compositions were such widely known anthems as "O, Little Town of Bethlehem," "Christ Is Risen," "Angels, Roll The Rock Away," "The Voice in the Wilderness" and "The Trumpet Shall Sound."

Funeral Services Monday for Mrs. Frank Allen

Funeral services for Mrs. Frank Allen of Glencoe, wife of the president of Brinks Express company, who was accidentally drowned recently at the Allen island summer home in northern Wisconsin, will be held in the Church of the Atonement, Kenmore and Ardmore avenues, Monday at 2 p. m. Bishop Frank E. Wilson of Eau Claire will officiate. Interment will be at Rosehill. Mr. Allen was in South America when Mrs. Allen lost her life. He reached Chicago yesterday.

Mrs. Margaret Treitz Dies Suddenly in Evanston

Mrs. Margaret Treitz, who moved to Chicago before the fire in 1871, after her graduation from Heidelberg university, in Germany, died yesterday in her home at 540 Forest avenue, Evanston, of a heart attack suffered after an afternoon automobile ride. Her husband, Rudolph, is a retired brewmaster, formerly employed by the K. G. Schmidt Brewing company.

Mrs. Emma Welsh, Wife of Golf Club Manager, Dies

Mrs. Emma Welsh, wife of Edward C. Welsh, well known as a golf club manager in the Chicago area a decade ago, died yesterday at her home in Chillicothe, O., following a recent operation. Mr. Welsh formerly was manager at the Exmoor and Midlothian Country clubs, and more recently of the Indianapolis County club.

LOUIS J. PETIT, CAPITALIST OF MILWAUKEE, DIES

Milwaukee, Wis., Dec. 2.—(AP)—Louis J. Petit, 76, Milwaukee capitalist and sportsman, died in a hospital today following an emergency operation Wednesday night.

Mr. Petit had been a resident of Wisconsin since 1877, when he came to Milwaukee to represent eastern salt companies. For twenty years he virtually controlled the salt trade of the northwest after organizing his own concern, the L. J. Petit Salt company.

He sold out to the International Salt trust in 1902 in a deal involving more than $1,000,000. As principal owner of the Norrie and Pabst Iron mines in northern Michigan, he participated in the sale of this business to the Carnegie Steel company for a reported $3,250,000.

In 1904 he succeeded Fred Pabst as president of the Wisconsin National bank and remained in that post until 1919, when the bank was merged with the First National.

From 1907 to 1920 Mr. Petit was a director of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railway.

SUE TO SET WILL ASIDE; ACCUSE DAD'S SECRETARY

Herbert V. and Charles C. Hansen Jr., operators of a machine shop at 2451 West Harrison street, filed a bill yesterday in the Circuit court to set aside the will of their father, who was president of the Refrigerator Specialties company, 729 South Sacramento boulevard, at the time of his death, Dec. 23, 1931.

Six days before his death the elder Hansen executed a will dividing the bulk of his $200,000 estate between his secretary, Miss Mary A. Noth, and a daughter, Mrs. Ethel Mey, 844 Marengo avenue, Forest Park. The two sons were left $1,000 each.

In their bill the sons charge that Miss Noth became intimate with their father and went to live with him at his summer home at Lawsonia, Green Lake, Wis., for the sole purpose of influencing him to cut off his sons in the will and give her a large share of the estate. The charge is also made that shortly before his death Hansen established a $100,000 trust fund for Miss Noth and his daughter.

CHARLES VAVRIK, 22 YEARS G. O. P. WARD CHIEF, DIES

Charles Vavrik, 68 years old, for twenty-two years Republican committeeman of the 23d ward, formerly the 34th ward, died of pneumonia last night in his home at 4255 West 21st street. He had been in local politics for thirty-five years.

Mr. Vavrik was born in Bohemia and came to Chicago when he was a boy. As a ward committeeman his was the deciding vote in nominating a former mayor to his first term of office. From 1915 to 1919 Mr. Vavrik served as chief deputy and later chief oil inspector. In 1930 he was commissioner of compensation. Mr. Vavrik annually distributed 700 Christmas baskets to the poor. He was a 32d degree Mason and member of the Shrine, Odd Fellows, and Foresters.

Surviving him are two daughters, Mrs. Libby Prehler and Mrs. Jewel Oden. Services will be held at 2:30 Monday. Burial will be in Bohemian National cemetery.

HIGHLAND PARK COUPLE HURT IN EVANSTON CRASH

Collide with Youths' Car at Howard Street.

Fred A. Ellis, 73 years old, and his wife, Charlotte, 74 years old, were seriously injured last night in a collision just inside the Evanston city limits at Ridge avenue and Howard street. Ellis, who is president of F. A. Ellis & Co., Winnetka, heating contractors, and his wife were taken to St. Francis hospital in Evanston. He had suffered a spinal fracture. His wife's hip was fractured.

The Ellises, with their son Claude driving, were north bound in Ridge avenue toward their Highland Park home when a southbound car veered left in Howard street. The cars crashed. The other car contained Walter Brown Jr., 18 years old, of 526 Melrose street, Kenilworth; George Burkhard, 20, of 544 Exmoor road, Kenilworth, and Miss Grace Rugen, 17, and Miss Agnes Stickrath, 19, both of Glenview. The girls were bruised.

Second Woman in Crash Dies.

Mrs. Cora Sandals, 45 years old, of Milwaukee, died yesterday in the Billings Memorial hospital of injuries suffered Thursday in an automobile collision at 60th street and Ellis avenue. Mrs. Caroline Norden, also of Milwaukee, was killed in the same accident.

This death increased the Cook county motor toll since Jan. 1 to 1,029.

Swims to Save Autoist.

Two men escaped serious injury early yesterday when their automobile plunged through a bridge guard rail and into the Calumet river at Torrence avenue and 139th street. They are O. C. Schroeder, 1001 North Marion avenue, Oak Park, and Louis Emerman, 2208 Pratt boulevard. Schroeder swam ashore after the car struck the water and Emerman, unable to swim, clung to the sinking car until he was rescued by an 18 year old boy. Later the boy was given $50 and a promise of a job.

Edward Springer, 56 years old, 4414 North Maplewood avenue, was killed on Thursday near Alvin, Wis., when an automobile in which he was riding skidded into a ditch and overturned. He was head porter of the Sells Floto circus.

MRS. J. J. KELLY, 63, DIES; MOTHER OF CONGRESSMAN

Mrs. Nellie A. Kelly, mother of Congressman Edward A. Kelly of the Third Illinois district, died yesterday at her home, 7708 Union avenue, after an illness of three weeks. Death was directly due to heart disease.

Mrs. Kelly was 63 years old and a native of Chicago. She was the mother of thirteen children, of whom eight survive. She is survived also by her husband, Capt. John J. Kelly, veteran member of the Chicago fire department.

Gets Rabbit and Quail with One Rifle Shot

Ladoga, Ind., Dec. 1.—[Special.]—Myron Banta, 13, accompanied by his father and Russell Mahan, Crawfordsville, went hunting in the woods at Wesley, near Waynetown. Just as Banta leveled his rifle to shoot at a rabbit, out flew a quail and with one pull of the trigger both rabbit and quail fell to the ground.

Assembly Upholds Its Tradition of Formality Despite Gay Time

BY JUDITH CASS.

THE one and only Assembly of this season—usually there are two and last year there was none—was as elegant and formal as the tradition of the Assemblies demands. And yet last night's ball seemed more gay and youthful in atmosphere than those of bygone years.

Perhaps it was because the music and floor were so good—two of the most popular orchestras in the city played and the new floating wooden floor in the Drake ballroom is so resilient that it makes dancing even more of a pleasure than it ordinarily is—but perhaps it was just because this year more than ever a bored and blasé attitude is not fashionable. So every one seemed to be having a really good time last night, which couldn't have been written about some of the Assemblies this reporter has "covered."

The ballroom was decorated in palms and ferns, effective but simple, in accordance with the desire of the governors to keep the expenses of the ball down so that as large a sum as possible could be realized for the Emergency Welfare fund.

Everything over and above the expenses will be given to the welfare fund, but William H. Mitchell, treasurer, could not estimate last night how large the sum would be. The only flowers used in the decorations were huge white "mums" in tall standards at both ends of the receiving line which stood in the northwest corner of the ballroom.

Receiving were the wives of eight of the governors—Mrs. Stanley Field was on the list but she did not return from New York in time for the ball—Mrs. Arthur Meeker, lovely in black velvet with ermine shoulder straps; Mrs. Howard F. Gillette in becoming silver lace; Mrs. Morris L. Johnston in wine color velvet; Mrs. William R. Odell, also in wine color velvet; Mrs. Eames MacVeagh, petite and charming in gold color lace with a bertha edged in sable; Mrs. William McCormick Blair wearing white satin, the only touch of color being a red velvet bow at the shoulder; Mrs. Albert A. Sprague who wore silver lace, and Mrs. John A. Stevenson.

White Flowers For Ladies.

The governor, Lester Armour it was, who selected the flowers for the ladies in the receiving line, was wise in choosing white, for that goes with everything, and the bouquets he had selected were colonial ones of gardenias and white carnations with short white ribbon streamers and the lace paper holders that give such a quaint and old fashioned air to such bouquets.

The invitation list to the Assemblies is the most select one of any large affair and those who are invited may be said to compose Society with a large S. No debutantes are asked to these exclusive parties and only a few second year girls.

Some of the younger persons at last night's ball were Miss Florence Crane, Miss Jean Stevens, Miss Beatrice Kirk, Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Laflin, Ellsworth Laflin and his bride, the Robert S. Piries, the junior John T. Piries, Mrs. Byron F. Harvey Jr.—her husband is in Cleveland—Mr. and Mrs. Conway H. Olmsted and Mrs. Olmsted's brother, Hulburd Johnston. Mr. and Mrs. John Valentine, Ezra J. Warner Jr.—his wife is in New York—Charles S. Dewey Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Potter Palmer III., Mr. and Mrs. Frederic McLaughlin II., Miss Harriet McLaughlin, Mr. and Mrs. Edison Dick, the Paul McBrides, and the Willard Boydens. Mrs. Boyden, the former Angela Johnston, was stunning in an ice blue barheera cloth gown with a cape of the same color and artificial flowers.

Mrs. Mitchell In White Velvet.

Mrs. William H. Mitchell was lovely in white velvet made with a jacket effect, long sleeved, the neck outlined with sable. Mrs. Lester Armour, who arrived with Mrs. Mitchell, wore white velvet with a wide crystal bertha. They made a stunning picture, for Mrs. Mitchell is a beautiful brunette and Mrs. Armour is a lovely blonde.

Mrs. Hermon Dunlap Smith chose to be fashionable in woolen material and her gown was a lovely bright blue. Mrs. Edward K. Welles wore a stunning creation of black crêpe faced at the hem with blue which showed as she danced, and with blue flowers in the middle of the low back.

Mrs. Francis Johnson was in black velvet and Mrs. Waller Borden—they were in the same party—was in white crêpe with a purple girdle that tied in the back, the ends hanging to the bottom of the gown.

Supper—or breakfast, as it might more properly be called—was the favorite simple menu of smart society, scrambled eggs and sausage and coffee. Many of the dancers, however, chose to have sea food in the new Cape Cod room which was kept open until 5 a. m. at the request of Mr. Armour, who was in charge of arrangements for the ball.

Among others at the ball were Mrs. C. Morse Ely, Mr. and Mrs. Walter B. Wolf, Mr. and Mrs. Shreve Badger, Dr. and Mrs. Paul Magnuson, Mrs. George Magoun, Robert F. Carr, James Keeley, the Philip Reeds, the Kimball Salisburys, Mr. and Mrs. Byron F. Harvey, the Herbert E. Schwarzes, Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Rodman, Mr. and Mrs. Russell P. Kelley, the James L. Houghtelings, Mrs. Freeman Hinckley, who came from Boston for the ball, Mrs. Merrill Hubbard, the Philip Mathers, the Wolcott Blairs, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph T. Bowen, Mr. and Mrs. William H. Mitchell, J. Russell Forgan—Mrs. Forgan is ill—the Vincent Healys, Miss Nellie Carpenter, Miss Marie Rozet, and the Tracy C. Drakes.

Debutantes at Another Party.

While their elders were dancing in the ballroom—long before, in fact, for there were few at the Assembly until midnight—a group of debutantes, including Miss Marjorie Goodman, Miss Nancy Traylor, Miss Mary Senior, and several of the second year girls, Miss Betty Offield and Miss Marjorie Horton included, were dining and dancing at a party in a private room given by some of the vice consuls of the foreign consulates.

Miss Traylor was wearing the pale green starched lace frock that she modeled at the St. Luke's fashion show and which every one thought so becoming to her; Miss Senior was in red taffeta; Miss Horton in pale blue with a purple coque feather boa and Miss Offield in black.

Tiny Artificial Yuletide Trees Win Shoppers

BY RHEA SEEGER.

Whether you are a trained or amateur shopper, this is the season when promising new ideas in clothes, gifts and gadgets stand out among otherwise dull collections like the twinkling stars in a deep blue velvet winter sky.

For instance, Christmas conscious florists are showing a most realistic pine tree, about two and one-half to three feet high, a sort of a perennial affair that is a knockout. Being frankly a substitute for a needle dropping real fir tree, this new idea will undoubtedly glow on lots of festive dinner tables as well as occupy the position of honor among gift packages.

But the exciting news about these miniature trees are the tiny twinkling tapers, not quite an inch long, that have real honest to goodness electric lights concealed in the tips. These lovely green trees [a sparkling snow white tree is also available] are positively fascinating. They glitter bravely, looking like a tree covered with obliging glow worms that have turned on their tail lights. Midget lights together with the midget tree can be used and then packed away for the next year's revelry.

You expect stars at Christmas time and this year some of the best star attractions are for the table . . . look for the huge flat glass mirror stars that are about fifteen inches wide and about three-quarters of an inch thick.

This large size star is used for a centerpiece, the crystal clear glass forming the five pointed star that is superimposed in a circle of deep blue glass. Between the points of the stars are the holes for the candles.

Small clear crystal mirror stars about five inches wide with a single candle hole in the center are used for each plate on a long and wide table or for corner motifs on the smaller size. Slender new moons of pale amber glass are other intriguing glass decorations for the Christmas feast.

In every other year handkerchiefs for your small cherubs have been flat, rather ordinary affairs, but this year there are some new ideas. Brightly colored small squares with hand rolled hems, good sized scraps that can be clutched securely in baby hands, are covered with letters of the alphabet, plain, easy-to-read letters in white to contrast with the colored backgrounds.

The same educational idea is sponsored in small hankies that have the one-to-ten numbers also printed in white against vividly tinted backgrounds. Four of these effective aids to memory can be boxed and ready for Christmas for a ridiculously small sum.

Other printed hankies that will thrill small funny-paper readers are books of linen squares depicting the life and times of a certain famous Mickey Mouse and his gang. Eight of one size are available in one book, six of a larger circumference are gathered together between the covers of yet another book.

Good Morning!

Romance! Romance!

That's what they have on sale over at the Chicago this week! Romantic pictures featuring a romantic actor, AND, on the stage, Maurice Chevalier in the flesh—and sotcha flash!—singing, singing, smiling, smiling—with that LIP—my DEARS . . .!

Herbert Marshall, who is notoriously one of the era's most happily married men—he and Edna Best refusing ever to part e'en though to do so might forward their individual careers—plays an Austrian nobleman whose fortunes have been shattered by the war. In order to live he becomes a gigolo in a Viennese café. Decides on this occupation because dancing is his one accomplishment, and he feels that, as a dancer, the money he accepts will not be charity—as it would be were he to take the salesman's job proffered him by the wealthy Mr. Fischer upon whose daughter he looks with the eyes of love. Miss Fischer loves him, too—so that's that.

While gigoloing Count Franz meets a lonely, wealthy American widow who has come over seas to have a lovely time, as much as possible like that enjoyed by the beautiful heroine of "The Merry Widow." She is all set to spend a lot of time at Maxim's, which, she is to learn, is in Paris—not Vienna. But her hotel clerk is an obliging soul and tells her of a café that has a "widow's night," and where she may dance with real members of the aristocracy. If you're asking me, Mary Boland and not Sari Maritza is the real feminine heart-tugger of this production. As Jennie Kent she adores Vienna and the handsome count who beaus her about, unawares for a long, long time that he's doing it for pay, and is the kindest, sweetest, most amusing person imaginable. To Jennie, who ultimately becomes his good angel, the count accords the most sincere and charming homage. Their scenes together are a source of delight.

With the exception of several incidents at the start, "Evenings for Sale" is staged in Vienna. This furnished the opportunity for introducing much exquisite familiar music and to go picturesque in gay light opera fashion.

Mr. Marshall IS fascinating. One quite understands how his wife feels about him. Charles Ruggles, entirely sober this trip, contributes his usual satisfying brand of comedy. Sari Maritza is adept and pretty and the other rôles are pleasingly handled. Direction and photography are of the best. The story holds your interest.

MINUTE MYSTERY CAN YOU SOLVE IT?

BY H. A. RIDLEY

Dr. Fordney is professor of criminology at a famous university. His advice is often sought by the police of many cities when confronted with particularly baffling cases. This problem has been taken from his casebook covering hundreds of criminal investigations.

Try your wits on it! It takes but ONE MINUTE to read! Every fact and every clew necessary to its solution are in the story itself—and there is only one answer. How good a detective are you?

CLASS DAY.

"Unless you chaps develop the faculty of quick and accurate observation of the commonplace you will achieve little success in criminology," said Prof. Fordney to his class. "Half of the observation of the average person is nothing but guess work. Let's see if you're improving," he continued.

"Finding my berth made up when I boarded the train, I undressed, slipped into it, and settled down to enjoy a good detective story. As we halted in Trenton, I put my book down, raised the shades and observed two men talking on the platform a few feet ahead of me. One waved goodbye and the other boarded the front of the car. His face was vaguely familiar. Where had I seen him before?

"As he came down the aisle I parted the curtains . . . yet I couldn't place him. Finally I turned off the lights and drifted into sleep. I awoke with a start as the train jerked to a stop. The sound of padding feet and hoarse cries told me something was amiss. Hastily donning a dressing gown, I slipped into the aisle and was informed by an excited brakeman that some one had pulled the emergency cord.

"Then I remembered! The Comstock train robbery had been staged in just that manner. The man who engineered it was Raymond Forbes, the passenger whom I hadn't recognized. He was near the front of the car and when he caught sight of me, ran into the platform and before any one could intervene, opened the door and fled into the night!

"WHAT DO YOU OBSERVE WRONG IN THAT?" concluded the professor.

Perhaps you have one you would like Prof. Fordney to submit to his students. If so send it to him in care of this paper. He will be delighted to see what they make of it.

[See solution on page 33.]

Chuckles Open New Regime at Blackstone

Refreshing Bit of Comedy Presented.

"SPRINGTIME FOR HENRY."

THE CAST.

M. Dewlip	Henry Hull
Mr. Jellicoe	Gavin Muir
Mrs. Jellicoe	Edith Atwater
Miss Smith	Aleta Freel

BY CHARLES COLLINS.

"Springtime for Henry," the play with which Guy Hardy and his associates inaugurated their regime at the Blackstone theater last night, contains the kinds of chuckles that are to be found in the stories of P. G. Wodehouse. It is a refreshing bit of British comedy gone "a bit loopy," to adopt a choice phrase of slang from its text.

It tells an eccentric love story with a hey nonny no and a hot cha-cha; it is witty, well educated, and slightly touched in the head. Its drift is strongly in the direction of pure farce, for its characters are fantastics, its emotions are tantrums, and its dialogue is keyed to a rapid-fire pace.

This diverting piece, which fits neatly into the Blackstone tradition, comes from the pen of the young transplanted Briton named Benn M. Levy, whose fresh touch as a playwright has already been illustrated in "Mrs. Moonlight," "The Devil Passes," and "Art and Mrs. Bottle." He has a habit, it seems, of doing the thing differently, but without any of the pretentious gestures of alleged modernism. In "Springtime for Henry" he is a humorist of the sly old Saxon breed, allusive, ironical, and beamingly daffy.

The proceedings center about Henry Hull, a skillful actor of ebullient young men who has been absent from the Chicago stage too long, simply because he has been in constant demand in New York. He comes here as a star and he deserves the rating, for he is vivid, alert, dynamic, and exceedingly droll.

He appears as a crisp lad of the London upper classes who has inherited an automobile factory and runs it in a series of brain storms in which women play an important part. Henry [the character] is a grouch, a go-getter, an amateur Casanova, and a sentimentalist by turns; and when he isn't trying to seduce his best friend's wife he is letting himself get reformed by a prim, high minded typist. Stenographers, one might add, are the chief cause of Henry's emotional explosions. He throws telephone directories at them; he tweaks their noses, and he falls unluckily in love with them also.

The course of Henry's wild-eyed romance, as springtime comes to him, need not be retold in detail. This is one of the stories that should be heard but not repeated. It is slight of incident but rich with mirth, and its purpose is to bring Henry to the conclusion that love, as extolled by the poets and romancers, is the bunk.

The others in the good little cast are Gavin Muir, excellent as a bland and chuckle-headed foil for Mr. Hull; Edith Atwater, picturesque and candid as a wife on her misbehavior, and Aleta Freel, cool and coy as the typewriter girl of the plot. They form a group that puts "Springtime for Henry" through its skittish paces in high style.

Stephens, World Flyer, to Marry Society Girl Today

Los Angeles, Cal., Dec. 2.—(AP)—The marriage of Moye Wicks Stephens Jr., 26, the air pilot who flew Richard Halliburton, the author, around the world, and Miss Louise Jamss, prominent Los Angeles debutante, will take place tomorrow afternoon at a fashionable hotel. The bridegroom is a former mail pilot and also served as a film aviator.

Marjorie Goodman Wears Court Presentation Gown at Debut

Mrs. James M. Hopkins Holds First At Home to Introduce Daughter to Society.

BY JUDITH CASS.

MISS MARJORIE SAWYER GOODMAN was introduced to society yesterday afternoon at the first of two at homes to be given by her mother, Mrs. James M. Hopkins. Miss Goodman wore the same exquisite gown in which she was presented to the English king and queen last June.

The gown is a "robe de style" of white tulle with three wide bands of peach color ribbon and bows trimming the full skirt. The bodice is tight fitting with a dropped shoulder line. Miss Goodman yesterday did not wear the court train that she wore to the court, but she did have a bouquet similar to the one made for her in London. Yesterday's was of white sweet peas, valley lilies, and one white rose.

Mrs. Hopkins and her daughter and Miss Goodman's paternal grandmother, Mrs. William O. Goodman, received in the beautiful silver drawing room of the Hopkins apartment at 1530 State parkway, where only the white flowers of the many floral tributes sent to the debutante had been put. The quantities of lovely colored flowers were in the hall and dining room. Calla lilies and crystal candelabra ornamented the tea table which was presided over by four sister debutantes, the Misses Mary Reed, Mary Senior, Jean Schweppe, and Louise Dewey. Next Friday Mrs. Hopkins and Miss Goodman will be at home during the same hours, 4 to 7, to the others of their friends who were not invited to yesterday's affair.

Mrs. Shedd to Give Musical.

Although Miss Mary Reed and Miss Jean Schweppe protest against being called debutantes and have refused to have their mothers or grandmother give a traditional tea for them, the musical that their grandmother, Mrs. John G. Shedd, is giving for them this afternoon really marks their formal introduction to society.

The debutantes' mothers, Mrs. Kersey Coates Reed and Mrs. Charles H. Schweppe, will be assisting this afternoon, but they will not be in the receiving line at the musical which will be given in the Drake ballroom, starting at 4 o'clock. Edward Johnson will give the program.

Tomorrow the Misses Reed and Schweppe will be given a progressive luncheon party by the Woodbury S. Obers [Jane McLennan] and the Edison Dicks [Jane Warner], the 20 guests assembling at the Obers' residence for the first half of the luncheon and moving on to the Dicks' for the last half.

Monday night Mr. and Mrs. William J. Chalmers will give a dinner and theater party for the granddaughters of their old friend, Mrs. Shedd. They have invited about 30 young friends of Miss Reed and Miss Schweppe to dine at the Casino and then see Ed Wynn in "The Laugh Parade."

The donations for the annual Christmas sale at the White Elephant Rummage shop at 27 East Ohio street, which is conducted for the benefit of the Children's Memorial hospital, were so numerous that the sale is to be continued today.

A Job a Day

Every little improvement we make in our home right now helps us—and the other fellow, too.

Stormy days are here again and by installing a slender umbrella rack on some inconspicuous part of the front or rear hall wall we have a utility which family and friends can avail themselves of. Of course, it should fit as closely to the wall as possible and its size range from four to six umbrellas, according to the family size. If there is a wrap closet such a rack can be built against one of its walls, thus keeping umbrellas from toppling over and making general nuisances of themselves.

BARTER AND SAIL

By HENRY C. ROWLAND

SYNOPSIS.

Capt. Henry White sails his four master ship, the Admiral White, in search of a ship filled with pearl oysters sunk by a French captain before the world war in a lagoon in a South sea island. Arlette Mordecai, the French captain's granddaughter, has brought him complete instructions for finding the ship. Arlette is accompanied by an English woman of title, known as Ladybird. In his crew are Adam Eden, an anemometer engineer; Roberta Millbank, and Peter Cavan. Roberta's father died after his bank failed and Peter was his trusted employé. Henry Shepard, backer of the venture, fills the boat with a cargo of his own choosing, including a lot of used cars and launches, and plans to stop at certain ports to trade cargoes. One owner of an unused car sends his French chauffeur, Raoul, along. Ladybird, who is a naval officer's daughter, is made mate. Benny, a cook, hires up for his keep. Four seafaring men Henry hired to load the cargo didn't appear to collect their wages before the boat sailed. They turn out to be bandits, who hide on the ship until it is well out to sea, then take charge.

INSTALLMENT XII.

UNDER STOWAWAY'S ORDERS.

Capt. Hiram broke the silence in which this seizure of the vessel had been conducted. He asked sharply, "What's the game?"

"Nothing rough, captain, so long as you don't start it."

"What do you want?"

One of the men stepped to his side and passed his hands over him. "Okay," he reported.

Capt. Hiram lowered his arms without waiting permission. "What's the idea?" he asked.

"We're taking charge."

"To do what?"

"Never mind about that. All you people got to do is what you're told."

"Who are you?"

"Capt. Smith, of the rum runner Maggie May until about a week ago, when we fell foul of a chaser. Mebbe you heard about it."

"No," said Capt. Hiram. "I've been busy. Looks like I'd been careless, too."

"All we want is a getaway, and all you need to do is to keep right on the way you're going till further orders."

"When is that apt to be?"

"Not for some time yet. You'll know soon enough."

Better let me take the wheel, sister, while you tell your mates the sad news.

"You want me to keep on running my ship?"

"Sure. Why not? I can check you up. The only place we want to go is away."

"It's apt to be a long hitch."

"Okay with us. We know all about what you folks are tryin' to do. It might work at that. We don't intend to stall your game any more than can be helped. When the time comes we'll leave you."

Capt. Hiram said slowly: "Since we got no choice I suppose we'll have to make the best of it."

"Now you're talking sense, Cappy. But we gotta play safe. Seein' ther're six men of you and only four of us, I'll have to keep two of you locked up."

"There'll be no trouble as long as you behave yourselves," Capt. Hiram said.

Capt. Smith said carelessly, "Don't worry about that. We ain't goin' to bother anybody. We ain't hijackers or pirates and we didn't stow away aboard the night before you sailed to grab your ship and raise hell with you. All we want's a passage. When it comes time to leave we'll take one of these boats and go."

Capt. Hiram said dryly, "That's comforting, but take it from me that you've got to behave yourselves or we're apt to get all fouled up."

"Call it a bet," Capt. Smith said indifferently. "Men in a racket like ours got to protect 'emselves, haven't they? This was just another of those accidents bound to happen sometimes in the rum game. But that don't say we're the sort of gorillas you see in the movies."

It did not look so bad to Ladybird. There had always been smugglers of some sort and this particular branch of the business seemed to have the backing of the bulk of citizenry. What if a coast guard or two had got knocked overboard? That was a chance for which they were paid. It was not as if these men were the burglars she had suggested. The leader at least had his points. Besides he was a sailor, a skipper, and she was lenient toward that guild.

He looked at her, then said politely, "Better let me take the wheel while you go tell your mates the sad news, sister."

She obeyed, giving him the course. Then she turned and said, "You can free the cook, old Benny, and tell him to give you something to eat."

"Okay." He gave the order to the other two men. The third had gone forward again.

Capt. Hiram leaned again on the rail watching him. His heart was bitter. This was what came of not keeping a watch on deck. It would never have occurred to him that anybody might wish to stow away on a vessel of this sort about to sail for an unknown port. All the same, he should have been more vigilant.

He was immediately aware that at least the rum running captain had told the truth about his nautical ability. A sailor can tell instantly when his vessel is being badly steered. He does not need to look at the compass nor even to glance aloft.

Capt. Hiram, without appearing to do so, noticed that slight handling of the spokes that is instinctive in the trained helmsman who steers by instinct or reflex. The man was looking into the cabin more than into the binnacle. He turned then and said:

"You've been shipmates with sail," Capt. Hiram said.

"I've been shipmates with everything from an Old Town canoe to a liner. When they told me a year ago at the shipping board in Washington there were a thousand of us tryin' for any billet I grabbed at the only one that was left."

"And been making money," Capt. Hiram said bitterly. "I suppose you'll be wanting me to edge in near the shore somewhere so that you can fetch it in a few hours with one of these boats on deck."

"Something like that. I might even pay you for the boat," Capt. Smith said in his cool, indifferent voice.

"Well," said Capt. Hiram, "this stuff wouldn't bother me a bit if we were all men aboard."

"You needn't bother about the girls." There was an impatient cut to his voice. "I learned all about them ashore and know they're swell janes caught in a jam and tryin' for a stake. But what I warned you about startin' anything goes for them, too."

The situation had eased curiously. Ladybird laughed and said, "Not my idea of a holdup, skipper. What's to prevent your getting your shotgun and taking charge again?"

"I'd thought of that. So has this fellow. I don't think it would be worth while."

"Not if he keeps his word."

"It isn't that," Capt. Hiram said. "So long as they don't act rough it isn't worth getting any of our crowd killed over. You turn in, Mr. Mate."

She nodded and went back into the cabin. Capt. Hiram steered the big ship on her course. It was a curious position; the captain and owner of the four-master sailing his ship across what was now a lonely sea without let or hindrance, and with the knowledge that she was no longer his ship nor was he master of her.

Hunts 18 Years for Queen Anne Table Service

BY RUTH DE YOUNG.

Mrs. Charles Harrington Chadwick has never revealed herself as a student of conchology, but there isn't an appointment in her elaborate Lake Shore drive apartment that she dotes on more than the table service of Queen Anne shells done by Josiah Wedgwood.

For 18 years she has been scouring every nook and cranny of the world for the shells—and now, at last, her collection is complete. A few weeks ago she added the twenty-fourth ash tray. It came from the tiny village of Mougins, just back of Cannes in the Maritime Alps.

This means that she has two dozen service plates, two dozen ash trays, two handsome center pieces, candlesticks, and several small shells in unusual shapes for table ornaments—all of them Queen Anne Wedgwood. The remainder of the service Mrs. Chadwick has been fortunate in matching—that is, as far as the delicate pink color is concerned—in Crown Darby and Royal Worcester china.

"Apparently Josiah Wedgwood made very little Queen Anne ware," Mrs. Chadwick explained the other day, "but what he did make was all a delicate pink in color and shell shape, the reason, obviously, that it is impossible to assemble an entire service of Queen Anne Wedgwood.

"The famous potter made it on special order," she continued, "but in all of my hunting I've never been able to discover for whom."

Much of the fame of Josiah Wedgwood, a fourth generation potter and the father-in-law of Charles Darwin, depends on his special orders. Best known among them, perhaps, is the 952 piece dinner and dessert service completed for the Empress Catherine II. of Russia in 1774—952 pieces and every one with an original design of a notable country gentleman's house, a castle, or an abbey. Wedgwood [the name comes from "wegge-would" and means "by way of the wood"] scoured the country for artists. The enameling alone cost more than £2,000. It is the frog in the border that distinguishes an original piece from the hundreds of imitations that have flooded the market during recent years.

Interesting enough, Chicago boasts one of the three remaining original pieces of the famous Catherine service. The other 949 pieces are resting at the bottom of the North sea. Taken to London for exhibit in 1914, the ship that carried the china was bombed and sunk on its return to Moscow. Three plates were all that was recovered.

Two of these pieces are on exhibit at the Wedgwood museum in Etruria, Stoke-on-Trent, Staffordshire. The other was loaned to a department store here for exhibit purposes.

Miss Goodman Makes Debut in Court Gown

Mother Holds First of Two At Homes.

sale, and among those who assisted them yesterday and will be on hand again today—no social engagements interfere with their working for their pet philanthropy when an emergency arises—are Mrs. Samuel T. Chase, Mrs. Frederic W. Upham, Mrs. William M. Scudder, Mrs. Oren E. Taft, Mrs. Charles C. Adsit, Mrs. Secor Cunningham, Mrs. Edward F. Carry, Mrs. Seaborn T. Whatley, and Mrs. Augustus K. Maxwell.

The children attending this morning's performance of the "Secret Garden," the Junior league play which has filled the Playhouse to the doors the last few Saturday mornings, will find a new little Mary Lennox in the person of Miss Sarah Hinde.

Miss Hinde was called on only this week for the part when Mrs. Robert M. Hoffman Jr., the original Mary, was rushed to the hospital for an emergency appendectomy, and after less than a week of intensive rehearsals Miss Hinde is ready to take over the major rôle.

Today and next Saturday are the last times the "Secret Garden" will be given.

Libby Chase Leaves Today.

Miss Libby Chase is leaving today for San Antonio, Tex., to join Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Brooks of New York and start from there for a flying hunting trip through Mexico.

The intrepid trio expects to be back in Chicago by Christmas, and unless present plans are changed, Miss Chase, who is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel T. Chase of Lake Forest, and Mrs. Brooks, who is the former Alicia Patterson and a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph M. Patterson, will be leaving shortly after the first of the year to fly to India and indulge in a little pig sticking, a sport new to these young but experienced sportswomen, and one said to be intensely exciting and dangerous. Mr. and Mrs. Brooks and Mr. Patterson flew to Sea Island, Ga., the other day and have been hunting.

Mr. and Mrs. John Vaughan Clarke III. [Helen Rend] have left for a brief visit to Mr. Clarke's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Bertram Clarke, in Pasadena. The senior Mrs. Clarke has not been very well, which is why the younger Clarkes decided rather suddenly to make the trip west so early in the winter.

Mrs. Victor Elting Jr. [Helen Stanley] is recuperating splendidly after having her appendix removed several weeks ago, but she is to remain with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. Edwin Stanley of 1530 State parkway, until after Christmas. Mr. Elting will come from Cedar Rapids to spend the holiday with his wife, and she will return home with him at that time.

Lecture on War Debts Today.

Charles S. Dewey is presiding at the luncheon of the Chicago Council on Foreign Relations being held today at the Palmer house. Jacob Viner of the University of Chicago will speak on "War Debts."

Other guests will be Frank J. Loesch, Frank G. Logan, George Rossetter, Lucius Teter, Noble Brandon Judah, Laird Bell, J. W. Bell of Northwestern university, Lessing Rosenwald, William Hale and H. A. Millis of the University of Chicago. Graham Aldis is president of the council.

The Highland Park-Ravinia center of the Infant Welfare society is giving its second annual dinner dance at the Shawnee Country club in Wilmette this evening. There will be bridge in addition to the dancing. Among those interested are Col. and Mrs. Henry B. Clark, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Creigh, Mr. and Mrs. Henry L. Glidden, Mr. and Mrs. James L. Martin, Mr. and Mrs. George A. Mason, Mr. and Mrs. Harry A. Parkin, Gen. and Mrs. Robert E. Wood, and Mr. and Mrs. Everett B. Millard.

This ball is being given in the hope of completing the center's quota for the Alice H. Wood Infant Welfare station.

Many are the parties being given for Miss Jane Willett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard L. Willett of 2130 Lincoln Park West, who next Saturday becomes the bride of Dr. Samuel Gale Taylor III., son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Gale Taylor of 73 East Division street.

Tonight Miss Imogene Bucklin is giving a spinster dinner for Miss Willett at her home, 1415 Astor street, at which the Misses Gloria Griffith, Margaret Goebst, Florence Otis, Jane Lawrence, Mildred Lawrence, Ida Lustgarten, Isabel Gordon, and Welthyan Harmon will be present.

Next Monday Mrs. Franklin Miller, 1500 Lake Shore drive, will give a luncheon, bridge, and kitchen shower for Miss Willett, and that evening Miss Willett's brother, Howard, will give a small informal party for her and Dr. Taylor at the Tavern.

Tuesday night Arthur Barnhart and Miss Ida Lustgarten will entertain for Miss Willett at a dinner for fifty guests at the Blackstone hotel. The dinner will be followed by a piano recital by Miss Lustgarten.

Mr. and Mrs. Willett will give the bridal dinner for their daughter at the Tavern on Thursday.

Miss Miriam Celia Hamilton will give a tea this afternoon at her residence, 3500 Lake Shore drive, for Miss Stephanie Shambaugh, her former roommate at Vassar, who will be married soon to Ferd Kramer. Miss Shambaugh is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. George E. Shambaugh.

Dateless Girls Tend to Blame It on Goodness

BY DORIS BLAKE.

They keep on reporting that they're "good girls" and consequently have no chance of being redated. O yes, these girls get a first date. It's the second one that does not follow up that provides the "good girl" alibis.

I grow weary of this weak streak in young womankind—pouncing upon their goodness as the cause of their unpopularity. It's not bright to talk that way. And it's a horrible indictment of the young men of their generation. Utterly false, too.

It may be admitted that there is looseness going on and that a certain type of girl enjoys popularity of a sort for a while on these terms. But it is stupid to charge off all popular girls with conduct that one of the "good" girls would never be guilty of.

"Teeny" says, after the usual extolling of her virtuous qualities, that "the boys won't give her a second tumble."

Yes, you can have the sterling virtues and still be company that is deadly dull.

We want you girls who take to the "good girl" alibi to get it through your heads that the trouble with you is not that you're good but that you may be tiresome, or dull, or boring. You bring only goodness to the popularity market and it's not enough, these days. You have to bring goodness plus. You have to be attractive of appearance, be bright and charming of manner, be able to dance well, play bridge or do something to make your company desirable.

You're competing with girls among whom goodness is a common attribute in spite of your silly alibi. But the popular ones practice a decent standard of behavior, and beside aim to make themselves liked, interesting, amusing and thoroughly good company.

Stand on Your Head, Stay Young, Beauty Decrees

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY

Now, what you t'ink they're asking us girls to do to keep the birthday wolves from howling?

Stand on our heads!

Now, I ask you if that's a nice suggestion with things as upside down as they are anyway? Well, it seems it is! It seems that if you can't stand on your head without breaking your neck or other favorite pottery you're just nothin' in juvenile circles.

Far be it from me to advocate that you, who have never done a handspring since you were 9, start in heads down and feet up where the hat is usually worn. But I've got to keep you informed on what they're doing in the best gymnastic circles. And it appears that the dumb-bells are being returned to the wood pile for want of enthusiastic patrons and exercises that can't put a bit of skill or showiness into their performance are doomed.

They tell us that this trick of standing on the head is easy if you are in good condition—and there's the catch. There's a technique to it which, if you're smart, pliable, and ambitious, I'd like to add, you get in a few days' tryout.

I see photographs of Lady This and the Baroness That and the Earl of Standards (let's call them) all standing pretty on their heads. There's a nice, soft beach handy, I note, should they suddenly decide to catapult to a prone position.

Well, if we've got to do it, we've got to do it. Only, remember what I'm telling you that the responsibility is yours, not mine, should you decide to try.

Seriously, though, it goes to show how athletically skilled our women are getting to be. And unless we start in at once limbering up the old bones and muscles (on simpler movements, I recommend) we're going to be just old porch rocker sisters that nobody'll ask out to run a mile.

The most interesting questions each week will be answered in the Saturday column. The rest are sent back by mail.

First, from Miss R. M.: "Please settle an argument. Is there such a thing as a brown edible cherry?"

Not to my knowledge, Miss M. Possibly you have heard some one mention the "ground cherry," the plump little green and yellow berry that grows on a plant in the garden and is made into jam. Occasionally Queen Anne cherries may take on a blush and turn rather brown in the can.

Next from Miss A. J.: "How can one substitute sweet milk for sour or sour milk for sweet?"

While there may be some recipes where one or the other should be used because of flavor, etc., as a rule sweet or sour milk may be alternated. When sour milk is used in a sweet milk recipe add one-half teaspoon soda per cup of milk and stir the batter slightly longer, as the acid in the sour milk tends to break down the strength of the flour glute and give too tender a baked product. The soda, of course, is to counteract the sour milk acid. The same amount of soda should be omitted when sweet milk is substituted for sour.

Question: "How much raw weight [dressed] do you allow for roast turkey, roast duck, and chicken for a serving? How much per serving if the chicken is to be creamed or fricaseed?

Three-fourths to one pound per serving should be allowed for roast turkey or roast chicken when dressing is not to be served; one-half to three-fourths of a pound when it is to be served with dressing. Roast duck has a larger proportion of bones to meat. One pound of this should be allowed. For chicken à la king, creamed, or in pie, allow one-third pound raw meat per person. Fricaseed chicken requires three-fourths to one pound, the same as unstuffed roast chicken.

Next from Mrs. J. K. J., who writes: "I have a fruit cake recipe that calls for candied pineapple and cherries. Is it possible to take canned pineapple and candy it? I have some good canned sour cherries which were put up in clear water. Could these be candied, and how?"

Yes, this is certainly possible, and the results will be good, though they may not be exactly like the commercial candied varieties. Drain the fruit, cutting the pineapple slices into cubes. Spread them on a shallow tray and sprinkle with sugar, then set in a slow oven or in the warmer and let dry for several hours or until no longer sticky. Sprinkle several times during the drying with more sugar. Candied cranberries, which may be quickly made at home, offer another pleasant substitute for crystallized cherries and may be used in fruit cake in the same way.

Guild Presents Two Young Musicians at Kimball Hall Recital

The Musical guild, which makes a practice of discovering and presenting young musical talent, added to its services last night by creating a public hearing for Mildred Chinlund, mezzo-contralto, and Charlotte Holenia, pianist, in a joint recital at Kimball hall. Both thereby became members of the group of professional musicians, and, in accordance with the aims of the guild, both are talented and have acquired considerable development along their respective lines.

Miss Holenia, playing the Schumann Sonata in G minor with the exception of the last movement and two groups of shorter numbers, showed good tone, good taste in the matter of interpretation, and sufficient technical development to accomplish her pianistic tasks without apparent effort. Miss Chinlund displayed a voice of smooth, attractive quality, not greatly ponderous, but round and with a praiseworthy ability to project words as well as musical phrases.

Phyllis Pratt Is Bride

MISS PHYLLIS PRATT.

Home Ceremony

New York, Dec. 2.—[Special.]—Miss Phyllis Pratt, youngest daughter of Mrs. John Teele Pratt and the late Mr. Pratt, financier and philanthropist, was married to Paul Henry Nitze, son of Dr. and Mrs. William A. Nitze of Chicago, this afternoon at the home of her mother here. The house, one of the most beautiful in New York, was decorated with autumn flowers, palms, and oybotium ferns. Only members of the two families and a few close friends were present at the ceremony performed by the Rev. Dr. William Greenough Thayer, who also officiated at the marriages of the bride's sisters.

The bride is a granddaughter of the late Charles Pratt, founder of the Pratt Institute of Brooklyn, her mother is the United States representative from the 17th congressional district of New York city. She was given in marriage by her brother, Edwin H. B. Pratt. Her gown was of ivory colored satin, the bodice made with a deep V neck with wide revers of the satin, and mousquetaire sleeves. The bride's bouquet was of white orchids.

Miss Barbara Pratt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Irving Pratt, a cousin of the bride, was maid of honor and her only attendant. Walter Maynard was best man for Mr. Nitze. There were no ushers.

Mr. Nitze and his bride will go to Europe on their wedding trip, and on their return will live in New York city. He is connected with the firm of Dillon, Read & Co. His father is an authority on the French language, and is head of the department of romance languages and literature at the University of Chicago.

A FRIEND IN NEED

BY SALLY JOY BROWN.

Needs Clothes for Job.

"I have been promised a job which will start immediately and my clothing is so ragged I am ashamed to appear for work. Do you think you could get me a suit and overcoat, size 38, and some shirts, 15½? It would help me so much and I hate to give up this chance of a job. F. S."

Etchers Offer Splendid Show You Should See

BY ELEANOR JEWETT.

The Chicago Society of Etchers has just opened its exhibition of prints by members in the Rouilier galleries, Fine Arts building, to continue through December. It is a stunning show and a brilliant show. Here is the kind of an exhibit which the record of the society has made familiar to us, the kind of an exhibit for which no superlatives are fantastic. The wildest enthusiasm is its due.

There are etchings here dealing with many and different subjects. Many and different, too, are the techniques of etching shown. Nowhere, however, is there sloppy or crude work to be found. This is an intelligent, picturesque, pleasing exhibition. Good craftmanship and good taste are on every hand.

Elisabeth Telling shows a delicate portrait study from her recent travels —"Non Jong Dancing, Bali." A whimsical study of two frogs which will catch the eye of fisherman and parent is "A Frog He Would," by Helen Forman. Charles Morgan offers a stunning piece of work in "Peace—In A Storm—Flanders," a team of horses plodding through the rain along a deserted road.

Delicate and whimsical in theme is "Startled Doe" by Rodney Thomson. A splendid skating scene is "When the Icicles Hang by the Wall," by Kenneth Holmes. "Star Boat" by Y. E. Soderberg is a beauty.

Among the other many striking, beautiful and interesting prints are "Strutting Grouse," by H. Emerson Tuttle; "Bridge to Toledo," by Walter Fletcher Seymour; "Madonna After Desiderio," by Walter Tittle; "Persimmons," by Bertha Jaques; "Limoges," by John Taylor Arms; "Timothy Cole," by William Auerbach-Levy; "Locating the Wind," by Lee Sturges, "Caroline Pines," by Alfred Hutty; "Song Birds," by Gordon Grant; "Arabella," by Arthur W. Hall, and the amusing "Repent, Ye Sinners," by John Groth.

Children Need Playmates of Their Own Age

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS.

You can share many things with your children—the joy of wind in the trees, the happiness of the early morning sun, which is a very special kind of sun; the delicate humor of young things in a zoo, the ecstasy of a wild ocean surf. And you can partially share with them, through remembrance, the excitement and thrill of the Fourth of July, Christmas and other holidays. But there is a realm where you cannot enter. There only a small-like soul can hold this communion.

"What are you doing?" I asked a little friend who was visiting us. He was stretched out straight on the couch, an intense look on his face, and queer sounds issued from his mouth. Was he having a convulsion, or a fit, or something?

"I'm making believe I'm a sky rocket," he said.

Do you believe any grown-up could be quite so delightfully imaginative as that or as "foolish?" Only a boy of the same age could truly understand and be interested. I saw that as soon as another boy promptly made himself into a right angle and began to hiss in imitation of a Fourth of July "sizzer."

They need our companionship and should have it, lots of it. But there is a place filled by a companion of their own sex, or size, or temperament that cannot be filled by the most loving, sympathetic and imaginative parent.

It is surprising that even in the larger cities or specially chosen suburbs it is often difficult to find neighborhood playmates for children. Many of my correspondents write who are faced with this problem. It may be that there are no children of the right age near them, or their children are shy and do not make friends easily. But companionship should be managed.

Parisienne's Wardrobe Is Incomplete Without One Semi-Evening Ensemble

BY BETTINA BEDWELL.

PARIS.—[Special.]—So much has been said about semi-evening fashions in these columns that you all know by now the important part they are playing in French winter fashions. No fashionable wardrobe is complete without at least one frock of this sort.

In the sketch today is shown the newest semi-evening ensemble to emerge from the salons of Jean Patou. The finger tip length coat, shown at the left, is in black velvet and is trimmed with a black astrakhan collar.

The frock of this ensemble presents something new in the way of material for a semi-evening gown. Its blouse is made of lattice work formed of narrow strips of white, cut leather. A black foundation of silk crêpe shows through this lattice work and at the point of the V neckline is placed a flat bow of the black silk crêpe. This frock has the new low down waistline, indicated by two bias cut, narrow bands, at the sides of which insets of white leather show.

This sleeveless frock has a skirt of black crêpe silk, which is given fullness at the front by means of gores. At the back center it has a shallow, inverted pleat.

Smart Parisiennes are wearing ensembles of this type to tea and cocktail parties, then going on to dinner, as the length of the jacket and skirt make it appropriate for street wear.

C. Y. O. BOXING CHAMPIONS CROWNED BEFORE 16,000

CHRISTY BEATEN IN UPSET BY SUB FOR RODAK

Ketter Loses Bout to Bukowski.

Champions

Following is the list of the eight Catholic Youth Organization champions:

112 pounds—Oscar O'Hanlon.
118 pounds—John Ginter.
126 pounds—Harry Booker.
135 pounds—James O'Connell.
147 pounds—Harry Rothler.
160 pounds—William Nurczyk.
175 pounds—Max Marek.
Heavyweight—Chester Bukowski.

BY WILFRID SMITH.

Eight stout-hearted boys, the best of 1,600 entrants, were crowned champions of the second annual amateur boxing tournament of the Catholic Youth Organization last night at the Chicago Stadium. Sixteen thousand watched the finals which determined the team which will face the champions from Los Angeles next month and later will be rewarded with a trip to the Panama Canal Zone.

The 32 boys who had won their way to the semi-finals were evenly matched—so well, in fact, that only one of the preliminary bouts ended before the full three rounds.

Christy Halted in Finals.

Jimmy Christy of Our Lady of Mount Carmel of the north section was defeated for the 126 pound championship in an upset. Christy, who had romped through his earlier bouts, met a hard hitting colored youth, Harry Booker, of the south section, and succumbed to a third round attack.

Booker was substituted at the last moment for Leo Rodak of SS. Peter and Paul, who fought in the International Golden Gloves bout with Germany last summer. Rodak was unable to compete because of an attack of influenza. Booker won by whipping the two best opponents obtainable in his division.

In the semi-finals Booker defeated Joe Roman of Joliet, the 1932 Golden Gloves featherweight champion. The thousands at ringside were divided over the result. The championship bout was another story. Booker waded into Christy and in the last round had Christy staggering.

O'Hanian Popular Winner.

Oscar O'Hanian of Waukegan, the 112 pound champion, proved himself one of the best and most popular boxers in the tournament. He won from Henry Fuscaldo of the south section in the semi-finals and then bested Gerald Mathieu of the west section.

Henry Rothler easily won the welterweight title. He had no difficulty defeating William Daly of the west section in his first three round appearance. Then Henry, who won his international fight last summer at Soldiers' field against the Germans, came back to outpoint Valentine Penko. Rothler's bobbing and weaving confused his opponent. He scored repeatedly with left hooks to the head.

Rothler dominated his division just as he swung the tide of battle to the United States team last summer when he was the first winner in the international series.

Ketter Loses Decision.

Frank Ketter, who had reached the final tournament by knocking out his opponents, was halted in the heavyweight final match. He had no difficulty defeating John Solik of Joliet in the semi-finals, but Chester Bukowski, a veteran amateur boxer, whipped him decisively for the championship.

Bukowski had Ketter on the verge of a knockout in the third round, punching him with a series of lefts and rights to the head. Ketter was dazed at the bell.

Max Marek, runner-up in the light heavyweight division of the 1932 Golden Gloves tournament, won the 175 pound championship. Marek and O'Hanian were the only champions to retain their places on the C. Y. O. team.

Marek, who weighs 170 pounds, won

Passes Win as Many Games as Running Plays

New York, Dec. 2.—(AP)—The forward pass, vital attacking weapon in the hands of the leading football teams of the country accounted for as many winning touchdowns as running plays in the 1932 season according to Parke H. Davis, national football statistician.

Among the games listed by Davis as having been won by forward passes were Nebraska's 12 to 6 victory over Iowa State, Auburn's 14 to 6 defeat of Mississippi, Michigan's 14 to 8 victory over Princeton, Columbia's 6 to 0 conquest of Cornell, Kansas' 7 to 0 victory over Missouri, the 20 to 13 defeat of Minnesota by Wisconsin and Minnesota's 7 to 0 victory over Northwestern.

Notre Dame scored two of its three touchdowns against Army on forward passes and narrowly missed counting twe more via the aerial route.

Big Ten Basketball Coaches Modify Three Second Rule

Basketball coaches and officials of the Big Ten, meeting at the Hotel Sherman yesterday, terminated four hours of debate over rules interpretations by adopting the 10 second restriction as it is included in the national code and making minor concessions in the application of the three second and pivot play regulations.

On the pivot play it was decided to call a foul on the offensive man playing the pivot if he makes contact more than once with the man guarding him. It was the coaches' contention that the spot the pivot man occupies in making the play rightfully belongs to the defensive player and that if the pivot man makes contact more than once he is blocking the defensive man out of the play.

Modify New Rule.

The three second rule, which had gained disfavor among many coaches in early season practices, was allowed to stand, but the conference agreed to permit a man in possession of the ball to make any play he starts within his three second limit, even though it requires more than the specified time to complete the play. It was the coaches' contention that a man who attempts to make a play within three seconds is evincing a willingness to force the offensive, and therefore should not be penalized under the rule which is aimed at stalling.

Under the rule, as it stands in the guide book, a player must surrender possession of the ball at the end of three seconds, whether he has come out of the pivot to make a play or not.

Several arguments turned up on the 1933-34 schedule, so it was sent to Maj. John L. Griffith, conference athletic commissioner, for revision.

Meet Again Today.

Yesterday's meeting was a forerunner of a series of meetings to be held today in which the athletic directors, football coaches, track coaches, and baseball coaches of the Western conference will get together.

Two items of major importance are slated to come before the athletic authorities of the various conference institutions. The first is a discussion over the advisability of rescinding the present rule prohibiting post-season games and the other concerns to what extent the Big Ten institutions will curtail schedules in minor sports this year.

Opinion appears to be general that the conference faculty heads would have placed their approval on Michigan's going to the Rose Bowl game had the invitation not already been sent to Pittsburgh and accepted. The fact that for the third year in a row a conference school has been forced to pass up the Rose Bowl game has started agitation towards rescinding the rule.

The basketball coaches were the only group with business on hand yesterday, and their long drawn out deliberations on the ten second and three second rules gave the other

Five Teams Ride Into Tie for Lead in 6 Day Bike Race

New York, Dec. 2.—[Special.]—Furious riding by the German team, Franz Deulberg and Ewald Wissel, pulled this combination into a temporary lead in the six day bicycle race at Madison Square Garden tonight. Starting the sprints three laps away from the leaders, the Germans pedaled into the lead at 10:45 o'clock. They were ten laps back at 10:45 on Thursday night.

But at 11:30 Spencer crashed into Croley and Deulberg, causing one of the most dangerous spills of the race. The three riders skidded down the steep embankment in a mass of tangled wheels and painfully bruised bodies. All three riders had to be assisted off the track.

The crash put a temporary end to an outburst of speed riding that saw constant changes in the positions of the teams. Deulberg and Wissel, leading an hour earlier, were shunted back among the trailers in the terrific riding. Hill and Grim, Letourner and Debaets, Spencer and Peden, Binda and Georgetti, and McNamara and Dempsey kept abreast of the dizzying pace and were tied for the lead at midnight.

ECONOMIES GIVE GOLF CLUBS GOOD START FOR 1933

Several Show Profit for Past Season.

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.

The firing has ceased and the smoke has cleared away in the financial battle which has been waged along the Chicago district golf front since the opening of the season last spring, and a number of clubs are prepared for what is undoubtedly the greatest tournament schedule the district ever has faced, that of the World's Fair year.

Annual treasurers' reports on the 1932 season from member clubs of the Chicago District Golf association reveal that the budget war into which a majority of them were forced earlier in the year ended with a number of them victorious. Several others, although failing to show a profit, have at least broken even, largely through strict adherence to the economy policies they outlined for themselves last winter.

Weather the Storm.

Among the Chicago district clubs which have weathered the storm and consider themselves ready to face next season are Kildeer, Glen View, Knollwood, Olympia Fields, Briergate, Sunset Ridge, Edgewater, Calumet, Glen Oak, Flossmoor, Edgewood Valley, Beverly, Acacia, Itasca, and Westward Ho.

In a preface to Treasurer James O. McKinsey's report on Olympia Fields, William G. Wise, president of the huge south side club, points out that, notwithstanding the decrease in income of more than $40,000, the club has reduced interest bearing obligations by $28,500 and accounts payable to trade debtors nearly $40,000.

Frederick L. McNally, treasurer at Glen View, reports a highly satisfactory season at his club, which concluded the season up to Sept. 30 with an operating profit of approximately $6,500. J. De Forest Richards, treasurer at Knollwood, where golf shares a place with swimming, tennis, and riding, joined the ranks of those showing a profit, with a gain of more than $9,000. Briergate also crowded into the black side of the ledger with a slight profit. The club has made a notable record within the last two years with regard to outstanding obligations, having retired $42,500 of these within that period.

Kildeer Makes Good Record.

Kildeer, a comparatively young club, made one of the finest records in the district, concluding the season with 414 members in good standing and a net operating profit of $6,728. No assessments were necessary. Bonded indebtedness of $7,500 was written off and a $2,500 bank loan paid, in addition to the installation of a new water pump.

Flossmoor came through with one of the most amazing seasons in the district, according to Treasurer H. A. Anderson's report. The club showed an operating profit of $15,000, as against a loss of $3,300 for 1931. Much of the gain was attributed to the strict economies practiced during the recent season, including drastic reduction in greens fees and minimum expenditures for repairs and replacements. Reduction in taxes and interest charges, as well as increased income from transfer fees, also played a part in filling the Flossmoor exchequer. The club reduced indebtedness from $32,500 to $7,500, and will reduce its yearly membership by 17 per cent beginning April 1.

Will Install Watering System.

Edgewater and Sunset Ridge also came out in front in the bookkeeping battle, and both will install fairway watering systems on their courses next year. Sunset Ridge, which was more than successful in its family plan, whereby women and junior players were encouraged to use the course more, finished with a total profit of $6,447 and scored $17,000 decrease in the club's funded debt. A pro lounge, extension to the dance floor, and a hot water plant were paid for out of income. Sunset Ridge gained 68 new members during 1932.

Mush Came to Hawks; Then There Were 6 March Brothers

BY EDWARD BURNS.

Mush March, 140 pounds of dynamite, who is so popular with Blackhawk hockey fans, is one of seven hockey playing brothers. The best hockey tradition, like the best tradition in other lines of athletics, demands that the best known of an athletic family tell how much better his less famous brothers can do their stuff than he can play himself.

Mush, if given half a chance, probably would have made great claims for at least one or two of his half dozen brothers. The trouble was that when Mush became a sensation immediately upon coming into organized hockey, all the scouts in the business looked over each member of the March clan. All reported that Mush's relatives were equipped with sticks, skates and uniforms. Beyond that the scouts didn't care to be quoted.

Harold Does a Solo.

So little Harold (Harold's Mush's right name) has been carrying on alone for four years to spread the fame of the March name in major league hockey. He came to Chicago Dec. 6, 1928, deserting junior amateur ranks. He has been a Hawk fixture ever since he glided on the ice in McLaughlin regalia at the age of 19.

Aside from his speed March's greatest claim to fame is his aggressiveness. Though much smaller than most forwards and all defense men, Mush never has recognized size as an element in hockey. Three times he has been knocked unconscious through his disregard in the matter of overmatching himself in poundage. The number of times he has been knocked flat, but not out of his head, is not recorded.

March's aforementioned aggressiveness for a time was out of control. While playing with the Regina Monarchs in junior hockey Mush got so that he couldn't get his fill fighting with opponents so he started scrapping with teammates during practice.

Coach Chases Him.

After one especially serious fight Mush was chased off the ice by his coach. The Monarchs were in line for the junior championship, which they later won, and the prospect of being set down was quite a shock to our hero. He promised to be a good boy from then on and was restored to good standing.

March has kept his pledge not to do any more fighting and has devoted his surplus energy to playing tough hockey, mostly within the prescribed rules.

March first was spotted as a brilliant prospect by Dick Irvin, then with the Hawks, but after the Monarchs won the junior championship the Maroons, Maple Leafs, Rangers, and Boston joined the Hawks in going after him. He was signed just four years ago. He was signed in the evening after a conference that had lasted since early morning. He was an amateur but he knew much about the business end of hockey.

Thank You, Mr. Zinck.

Asked to jot down a few things about Mush, Announcer Zinck of the Hawks, most rabid and detailed hockey student in Chicago, set down the following:

"March has no fear of large opponents.

"Toronto has offered $15,000 for March. Manager Connie Smythe wanted to team him up with his speedster, Bob Gracie.

"March's favorite play is to get around the defense by sheer speed. Has a great eye for picking the corners from about ten feet in front of and to the right of the cage.

"Has no peer and few equals at back checking.

BEST BROTHER

FOOTBALL FORECAST.

WE now have arrived at the after-dinner coffee and cheese stage of the season's gridiron menu—perhaps one should be careful to state that cheese is not used in an offensive sense in such a statement. The principal contest for this afternoon, from an intersectional viewpoint, is Alabama's game on the coast against St. Mary's.

Alabama is not a stranger to California post-season games. The Crimson Tide competed in three Tournament of Roses tests and emerged with two victories and a tie. In 1926 Alabama defeated Washington, 20-19, and the following year tied Stanford, 7-7. In 1931 the southerners took Washington State, 24-0. In connection with these dates they really were the elevens of the fall preceding, for Roses games are played on New Year's day.

Alabama this year has not been the Crimson Tide of yore. It lost to Tennessee, 3-7, and Georgia Tech, 0-6, then surprised by crushing Vanderbilt, previously unbeaten, although twice tied, 20-0. St. Mary's has an impressive record, despite defeat by Fordham. Forecast:

Army, 13; Navy, 0.
Detroit, 18; Loyola (N. O.), 0.
Maryland, 20; Western Maryland, 7.
St. Louis U., 20; Missouri, 6.
St. Mary's (Cal.), 14; Alabama, 7.
Nebraska, 13; Southern Methodists, 6.
Alabama Poly, 13; South Carolina, 0.

Old Hard Time.

I think I'll have my little say
About the topic of the day.
I'll talk about some folks I know,
Of Mary and her husband Joe.
Now Joseph made a fairish wage
When spending money was the rage,
And in their company I see
The world in general—you and me.
In fact, all seemed to have a flair
For throwing hard cash everywhere.

Ten dollars to fly in the air,
Fifteen to dink up every hair;
A car to scurry here and yon
And visit every U. S. town;
Of course an oriental rug
And drinking water from a jug;
A maid to make the washer go
While Mary tuned the radio.
Then OLD HARD TIME just came about!
Are they to blame? I should say not!—
As Mr. Hoover found out. H. R. C.

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Philadelphia, Pa., Dec. 2.—For the first time since they fell out of love in 1927 and settled down to the most exhausting tongue sticking-out campaign in American football warfare, the Army and Navy will meet willingly in a football game tomorrow afternoon with the entire ancient routine of ruffles, flourishes, plug hat liftings, and salutes. They will play on Franklin field, the athletic ground of the University of Pennsylvania, which is surrounded by a towering brick boom time plant with room for more than 80,000 patrons.

The advance sale of 78,000 coupons suggested that the issue would be oversubscribed at $4.40 each, and this, regardless of the outcome of the game from a sporting point of view, would assure the West Point football organization of one of its by no means negligible triumphs of the season. They played to a business of more than $300,000 against Notre Dame at the Yankee stadium a week ago, and this week's receipts undoubtedly will be just as great.

Can Claim Commercial Title.

Football being a commercial as well as a sporting activity in college affairs, a team which can command $600,000 of gate receipts in two cold weather dates under present conditions must be a champion or logical contender for the commercial championship at any rate.

The pageantry of the Army-Navy show, now that the superior officers have called off their pout to which no cadet or midshipman ever was a party and agreed to touch caps to one another across the field, will have to be acknowledged as a slightly more influential lure than the actual football game.

My language is blunt, but on the evidence up to this time it appears as though the West Pointers will be meeting a distant imitation of the Rockne stuff, with modern gadgets, which left them flat on their feet and also on their rompers in their game with Notre Dame last Saturday. The Navy plays Notre Dame stuff as taught by an old Notre Dame, Rip Miller, but a hoe-down fiddler is no Kreisler and Navy is not Notre Dame.

Mule and Goat Courtesies.

The regiment of midshipmen and the corps of cadets will descend on Philadelphia in special trains in the morning and will begin their parade into Franklin field at 12:15, clearing the playground in time to allow for some social courtesies between the Navy's goat and some local mule, identity unknown and not particularly important, which will be dressed in the official full dress mule uniform which is part of the Army's football equipment.

The secretary of war, Mr. Hurley, and the secretary of all that remains of the navy, Mr. Adams, are promised also, and presumably they will resume the old formalities which embroidered the ceremonies in the time before the great falling out.

There was no obligatory form for these courtesies prescribed by congress, but generally the secretaries got out their toppers and met in the middle of the field to hoist them back and forth like a couple of European diplomats trying to lift each other's watches while exchanging assurances of the highest esteem and most cordial feeling.

It will not be obligatory for Mr. Hurley and Mr. Adams to meet at midfield in this matter, but there is a sentiment that it would be very nice if they would, as it would tend to demonstrate that the Army and Navy are really back on their old terms of joyous enmity.

Have to Play, Anyhow.

The schools met in New York last fall and also in 1930, but, though the Navy side wished to be friendly and jovial, the Army people let it be plainly understood that they were there under orders and against their wishes. Some high authority, who did not wish to accept public responsibility for the order, had knocked their heads together and made them play in response to a public clamor on behalf of charity.

Having played twice to almost a million dollars of gate receipts which were given almost entirely to the unemployed, the officers decided this year that, inasmuch as they had to run the game anyway, they might as well do it willingly and thus retain the receipts for the purposes of their schools. That is how it happens that

New Orleans, La., Dec. 2.—[Special.]—Jockey Monte Parke, younger brother of Ivan Parke and one of the lightest if not the lightest race rider in America, scored with four winners at Jefferson Park today. It was the first such feat of his career, for he began riding only last summer at Chicago, and the first time any jockey has scored four winners in one day at the present meeting.

Weighing in at less than 80 pounds, Parke nevertheless has shown that he possesses the power to boot home winners, for he has been in demand and already has had more than 160 mounts. His winners today were Chianti, Blue Law, Winifred Ann and Chiclero.

Grand Prince Wins Feature.

The day's feature was the fifth in which the Shandon farm's seven year old gelding, Grand Prince, won by a nose in a thrilling finish from Hoops, the favorite. The winner was piloted by Melvin Lewis and returned $18.20 for $2. Ante Bellum was a length away in third place.

This test was at six furlongs. Grand Prince completed the route in 1:12 2-5 over a fast track.

Ante Bellum was first to show in front after the barrier was sprung and opened up a three length lead. Hoops and Grand Prince were trailers in the early part, but they came into the picture with a smash when the stretch was reached. Hoops was the first to reach contention and was the momentary leader in the last furlong, but the strong finish of Lewis decided the issue. Parke was rider of Altmark in this race and finished fourth after forcing Ante Bellum's early pace.

Chianti Varies Style.

Chianti was the 4 to 5 choice in his race and came on in the stretch in a manner strange to him. He is a son of High Time and usually runs to the front and stays there if possible. These tactics were successfully reversed and Parke got his mount home a three lengths winner over Uforme, with Hippias third.

Parke had only six mounts during the afternoon. The race in which he did not ride was third on the program and was won by Polly E., which returned $124.60 for $2. E. Burke was up on the winner, which drove home lengths to the good over Drastic Lass with Polaire third. The favorite was Red Fellow, which brought up fifth.

Big Ten Votes to Modify Cage Rules

Says Eight Favored Trip.

Fielding H. Yost, Michigan's athletic director, was the leader of the discussion, as well as the most disappointed individual in the place. He said that everything was all set for the Wolverines to obtain permission to go west, only to have Southern California produce a shocker in inviting Pittsburgh.

Yost said faculty committee members from eight Big Ten institutions had decided to vote "yes" on the question of suspending the rule prohibiting post-season games, and that Coach Harry Kipke and his team were ready to resume training for the battle, which would have marked the first appearance of a Big Ten team in the Rose Bowl classic since 1920.

Here's Basketball Schedule.

Quick Trigger Fingers Take Hunters' Lives

BY BOB BECKER.

Despite repeated warnings concerning the care one must exercise while hunting wild game with either rifle or shotgun, the list of hunting accidents in the central states continues to increase. In Michigan the toll was 15 dead and 24 injured before the deer season really got under way. Illinois and other states with several hundred thousand hunters also add to the total of accidents in which sporting firearms are involved.

Since the duck season does not end until Dec. 16 in Illinois, and with the rabbit season scheduled to run for some time, sportsmen may well examine some typical accident cases to freshen their minds on some of the more important "don'ts" connected with upland hunting or marsh shooting.

What Not to Do.

Here is one episode which teaches the lesson: Don't go hunting with a fellow who shoots before he takes a good look at the game. A hunter and his partner were out after pheasants and rabbits. Hunter No. 1 shot a rabbit, picked it up, and carried it along in one hand. A few minutes later he stooped to put down the cottontail. The second hunter saw the rabbit, but not the partner who had been carrying it. Hupter No. 2 fired quickly and the shot entered his partner's arm. This accident, due to avoidable carelessness, fortunately wasn't fatal. It was a typical "shooting too quick" accident.

Other stories concerning hunting accidents have come to our attention and merit retelling if they will serve to warn hunters to be careful.

One of the saddest cases we have heard about in the last five years concerns the man and wife who were shot by the same bullet while hunting in the Adirondack. The husband was wounded in the knee. The bullet then traveled on, entering his wife's body. The man who fired this shot hurried out of the woods to get a doctor. Before medical help arrived the wife died beside the wounded husband.

Boy Wounds Partners.

These are the results that may follow when a deer hunter doesn't really look at what he is shooting. The fellow who mistook a woodgatherer for a pheasant is hard to understood. We can't see much similarity between a ringneck and a man with an armful of wood.

In rabbit hunting a careless shooter in a party of three or more may make trouble. A typical rabbit hunting accident of this season was one involving three boys. A rabbit ran between two of them. The third member of the party shot at the rabbit, hit it, and wounded both of his shooting partners.

Paul Dazzo to Make New York Debut Next Week

Paul Dazzo, Chicago featherweight, who won the Golden Gloves bantamweight championship in 1930 as Paul Leberto, will make his professional debut at New York next Friday night on the Fidel La Barba-Kid Chocolate card. He will meet Sid Lampe, New York veteran, in a five round match.

After two years of professional fighting Dazzo appears headed for the first flight. He first attracted national recognition when he knocked out Frankie Wallace of Cleveland at the Coliseum last September. Wallace was listed first in the National Boxing association's 1932 featherweight ratings. On Sept. 20, five days after Dazzo stopped Wallace, the N. B. A. dropped Frankie to tenth position in the class. Dazzo followed the Wallace victory by defeating Jackie Sharkey of Minneapolis, Minn., at the Chicago Stadium six weeks ago. Dazzo will go to New York today.

Young Stuhley, Kewanee, Ill., boxer, will seek his twentieth straight victory in Chicago when he meets Young Terry of Trenton, N. J., in an eight round bout on the King Levinsky-Primo Carnera card at the Stadium next Friday. In the event that Stuhley wins he will be matched against topnotch middleweights. The match is Stuhley's first in the Stadium. He will arrive Monday to finish training. Terry has been drilling for 10 days at the Arcade gymnasium.

The Central A. A. U. boxing committee yesterday appointed Fred W. Steers to draw up a resolution to submit to Governor Elect Horner pledging coöperation with the incoming Illinois athletic commission. The committee has ordered 60 amateur boxers to appear at the Illinois Athletic club tomorrow morning to answer charges of professionalism.

Gorilla Jones, former middleweight champion, passed through the loop yesterday from Davenport, Ia., en route to his home in Akron, O. . . . Seal Harris leaves today for Terre Haute, Ind., where he faces Tiger Jack Fox on Tuesday. . . . Tony Canzoneri, lightweight champion, has agreed to meet the winner of the Jimmy McLarnin-Sammy Fuller bout at New York on Dec. 16.

RICKARD'S WIDOW MARRIED

REVEAL SECRET MARRIAGE OF TEX RICKARD'S WIDOW

New York, Dec. 2.—[Special.]—The marriage of the former Maxine Elliot Rickard, widow of Tex Rickard, fight promoter, to Frank Dailey was revealed today. The marriage took place at the Church of the Blessed Sacrament more than a year ago.

The marriage was revealed when it was learned that Mrs. Dailey was in a sanitarium recovering from an operation which was performed last Monday.

"We didn't want any fuss. We wanted it done as quietly as possible," Dailey, a business man, said when asked why the marriage was kept secret.

Battalino Quits Boxing; Ex-126 Pound Champion

Hartford, Conn., Dec. 2.—[Special.]—Bat Battalino, rugged Hartford Italian, who formerly held the world's featherweight boxing championship, is through with the ring. He announced his retirement today.

Battalino won the 126 pound title by defeating Andre Routis in 1929. He successfully defended his title against Earl Mastro, Kid Chocolate, and Fidel La Barba, but forfeited it last January when he entered the ring over the featherweight limit for his bout with Freddie Miller at Cincinnati, O.

Shamrocks to Play Cicero Pros Tonight

The Cicero eleven won the Midwest Football league championship with seven victories and a tie game. Cicero has a strong line led by Mandy Sachs, a 155 pound guard.

In the backfield the Shamrocks appear to have an edge with eight all-round performers. The starting lineup tonight will include Jack Downs, Bernie Leahy, Bud Edwards, and Ed Weber. This quartet's passing attack will be the Shamrocks' main threat.

Morton's quintets divided their opening games at La Grange. The heavies lost, 33 to 25, and the lightweights, Suburban league champions, won, 21 to 16.

New Trier's lightweights were held to two free throws as they lost to Lane Tech, 32 to 2. Klivicki starred for New Trier, scoring four field goals and one free throw. Murphy, left forward, and Leonard, right forward, collected Lane's only points.

Mount Carmel Wins.

Mount Carmel's lightweights, defending Chicago Catholic High school league champions, started their season with a 28 to 24 victory at Calumet. The Mount Carmel heavyweights also triumphed, defeating Calumet, 26 to 16. t was the second defeat in as many days for Calumet's heavies.

Phillips, Chicago Public High School league lightweight champion, which lost to Tuley Thursday, triumphed, 15 to 14, over Roosevelt at Roosevelt. Phillips heavyweights won their opening game, defeating Roosevelt, 32 to 23.

Waller Wins Two.

Waller's quintets scored a double victory over the Central Y. M. C. A. day school. The lightweights, with Overlander and Martino leading the attack, won, 32 to 10, and the heavyweights triumphed, 20 to 13. The lineups:

MOON MULLINS—CO-EDUCATIONAL

WGN to Broadcast Army-Navy Game and N.U. Banquet

W-G-N, THE TRIBUNE radio station, will broadcast the Army-Navy game from Philadelphia starting at 11:50 o'clock this morning. Ted Husing, Columbia sports announcer, will be at the microphone.

The Northwestern football banquet at the Stevens hotel will be broadcast by W-G-N at 7:45 o'clock tonight. Bob Elston will be at the microphone, with Coach Dick Hanley, President Walter Dill Scott, Tug Wilson, and Capt. Pug Rentner, all of Northwestern, delivering the principal addresses.

Little Nineteen Votes Down Group Plan

An attempt to divide the Little Nineteen conference into two or more groups to make it less unwieldy failed yesterday when faculty representatives of the 21 members meeting at the Sherman hotel voted down a resolution to separate the five tax supported normal schools from the others and avoided a vote on the proposal to split the conference into four parts.

Instead they voted to recommend that the conference conform to the standards of intercollegiate athletics of the North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools which place the control of athletics in the hands of the faculty.

Conference basketball coaches approved the ten second rule and agreed to adopt the Big Ten regulations in connection with use of the pivot. Five conference basketball courts under 80 feet in length will be divided into offensive zones by drawing lines 42 feet from each end. Coaches agreed courts at Augustana and Eureka, which are 78 feet long, will be divided in the center, as are all regulation length floors.

Freshmen May Play.

Prof. J. A. Campbell, newly elected president of the conference, declared adoption of the North Central code will not affect freshman competition or the playing of summer baseball, both of which are allowed in the Little Nineteen. Most of the schools are able to meet the requirements now, he said. The proposal had been before the conference since 1928.

William Harmon, former president and once football coach at Illinois college, Jacksonville, was elected athletic commissioner of the conference. He will take the place of C. W. Whitten which was vacated Sept. 1.

McAndrews Is Reelected.

Other new officers elected were: Vice president, William McAndrews, Southern Illinois Normal university, Carbondale, and member of the eligibility committee; Fred Muhl, Illinois Wesleyan university, Bloomington.

Officers reelected were: Secretary, V. F. Swain, Bradley Polytechnic institute, Peoria; treasurer, L. M. Cole, James Millikin university, Decatur; eligibility committee, A. V. Swedberg, Augustana college, Rock Island, chairman, and C. E. Horton, Illinois State Normal university, Normal.

Dates were set for the annual indoor track meet at North Central college, Naperville, on March 12; outdoor track at Knox college, Galesburg, on May 19 and 20, and the swimming meet at Monmouth college March 17.

HOLD TRIALS IN PREP SWIMMING MEET TODAY

Preliminaries in the annual Chicago Public High School league junior and senior swimming championship meet will be held this morning at the Austin High school pool. The fancy diving preliminaries will be held Wednesday. The finals are scheduled at the University of Chicago next Saturday.

Senn won the senior championship last year, while Austin won the junior title. Austin has entered 19 swimmers in the senior events, while ten will compete in the junior races. Senn will be represented by eight in the seniors and six in the junior division.

ALABAMA POLY SEEKS SOUTHERN GRID TITLE TODAY

Atlanta, Ga., Dec. 2.—[Special.]—Alabama Poly's Plainsmen, who have scored nine consecutive victories, will seek the Southern conference football championship when they meet South Carolina tomorrow in the final game of the season at Birmingham. Six of Alabama Poly's nine triumphs were over conference teams.

The Plainsmen have defeated South Carolina for the last two years, winning in 1930, 25 to 7, and 13 to 6 last year.

Marting, Yale Substitute, Wins Norman Hall Award

New Haven, Conn., Dec. 2.—[Special.]—Walter A. Marting, Marion, O., a junior and substitute on the Yale football team, has been awarded the Norman Stewart Hall memorial scholarship. Established in 1929, the scholarship is given to the student who "most nearly approaches the standards of manly character and good sportsmanship." Hall, a former Yale star, drowned four years ago while rescuing a skating companion.

The Army is free to use on the West Point football team any cadet above the first or plebe year regardless of that cadet's previous experience in varsity football in other schools. So is the Navy, but the Navy won't. The Navy adheres to the rule of the civilian schools that no man is eligible for the varsity team who has played three seasons of football, all told, and it was the Navy's insistence that the Army adopt this rule which caused the row.

Middies Better Showmen.

The Midshipmen probably will put on a better show than the West Pointers. The Midshipmen wear white caps, contrasting with their long blue overcoats, which make an effective appearance when waved in unison this way and that to heighten their cheering maneuvers, and moreover they have gone very west coast in the last few years. They adopted and elaborated a lot of pranks of the west coasters, who do their cheering on a grand and spectacular scale and have transformed football cheering into something decidedly De Mille. In California, some of the schools employ co-eds in spangles and talcum power to parade with the football bands and some of the little ladies have learned to discourse a very mean kootch for their alma maters, all good training for the intellectual life after college.

There are no co-eds at the Navy, but the midshipmen astonished New York and made the West Pointers seem a little humdrum by contrast when they came up to the first of the charity games at the Yankee stadium, the big Grover Whalen game which raised a half million for the poor, and spelled out a gallery of beautiful mottoes and pictures and some funny pictures, too, by raising colored cards over their heads at the commands of their cheer leaders. All the West Pointers knew how to do was sing and yell, and they were distinctly outspectacled by their rivals from Maryland that afternoon who could sing and yell with equal vehemence and do card tricks as well.

Old Cry of Counterfeit.

Quite naturally, there was a warning out this evening that counterfeit tickets were being sold by unscrupulous persons, but this is an old alarm, originated by Tex Rickard in the days when the box office was the last place to ask for tickets to a big show. Mr. Rickard discovered one time that certain unauthorized scalpers were underselling his official scalper and raised the cry of counterfeit to warn business back.

There is always a counterfeit story in connection with a big show for which the demand exceeds the supply, and it may even be that there are some home made tickets on sale around Philadelphia this evening. Anyway, the scalpers' price is supposed to be $30 per ticket for pretty good seats and $10 for absolutely terrible spots up under the eaves in the far corners.

Navy Less Grim.

The Army squad withdrew into silent suburban aloofness again as last week, being quartered at the Valley Forge Military academy, with reporters and photographers barred from the premises. The Navy was less grim about it all and practiced openly at the Manufacturers' Country club. Knute Rockne took the Notre Dames to this retreat once or twice on his travels with the great South Bend road company, so the turf of the valley fairways was not unaccustomed to the bite of cleats in goosestep formations.

Something has happened to gloomify the once gay nature of Ralph Sasse, the cavalry major who coaches the Army squad, and he is doing his talking for publication through Capt. Walter Wells. Once the Army was hospitable to visitors, but all that is changed now, and Rip Miller, on the Navy side, has taken the play away from West Point with his informality and optimism.

The Army was badly outnewspapered last week when the moans from Notre Dame created an impression that the cadets were about to assault a hospital squad of cripples and invalids. Now, too late, it is given out that several West Pointers in that game were just as feverish and generally unwell as any one on the Notre Dame side, but, for the purposes of propaganda, the South Benders got sick first and outailed the cadets from the first yowl to the expiring sniffle.

King May Appear.

Dick King, the Army's great end and about the best individual player on the team, has not been in action since the Harvard game in which he cracked an ankle bone, but there is a suspicion that he may return for the Navy game if only for a brief time. Felix Vidal, the other star, who was badly mauled by Notre Dame, probably will play too, and, although he is not likely to start, he seldom does start.

Pete Kopcsak, Roy Evans, the center; Abe Lincoln, the left tackle; and Milton Summerfeldt, the captain and left guard, were pretty thoroughly ground up also, but are almost certain to be called on. Thus it will be seen that the Army is chanting the same lugubrious note that Coach Hunk Anderson of Notre Dame squawked last Saturday, putting it up to Miller, for the Navy, to admit that everything is just fine with the boys.

The Navy hasn't won a game from Army since 1921 and has lost six and tied two in that time. If psychology were football the game would be played by teams of alienists, but psychology isn't and therefore the Navy is at a definite disadvantage in the advance reckoning. The Midshipmen have won only two games, both from opponents of secondary status, Washington and Lee and Maryland.

Cadets Appear Superior.

Cadets and sailors both always fight harder and more evenly in their big game than any comparisons of their records would suggest, but even so the Army, with its cripples and sniffles, would seem to have a comfortable margin of superiority. The Army has lost only two games, to Pitt and Notre Dame, two of the best teams in the land this year, and their victims in the games between those two beatings were teams of inferior class.

This game will be Ralph Sasse's farewell as coach at the Military academy after three years as head coach, and the cadets might be able to summon something special in the way of vigor and abandon in order to leave him laughing when he says goodby. He has been a successful coach, all for his team and the corps and the Army and a remarkably unselfish man in turning down opportunities to capitalize his job in the movies, journalism and on the air. This year's team appeared to be not only his best, but also one of the greatest the Army ever had until Notre Dame came along.

Ritchie, Pinchot to Attend.

Earnest football and great, sporting savagery is anticipated, and the guests will include Gov. Ritchie of Maryland and Gov. Pinchot of Pennsylvania. Neither President Hoover nor President Elect Franklin D. Roosevelt will be present, however, and Mrs. Roosevelt has changed her mind and decided not to attend after first believing she would.

DISTANCE STARS RACE TODAY FOR A. A. U. TITLE

Cincinnati, O., Dec. 2.—(AP)—Distance stars of the nation will compete here tomorrow for the senior cross country running championship of the National A. A. U. They will run over course of the Kenwood Country club.

Leading the troupe is Joe McCluskey, Fordham college athlete who set a record of 9:14.07 in the Olympic 3,000 meter run on the Pacific coast last July. His competition will include Eddie Zepp, Michigan State Normal's freshman distance runner; Donald Neese and J. C. Watsex of Indiana university, who placed second and third in the Big Ten championship runs, and B. Werbin of the Detroit Y. M. C. A.

Five teams will contest for the team championship. They are Michigan Normal, Millrose A. A. of New York, Illinois Normal, the Ogden Park team of Chicago, and six harriers from the Michigan A. A. U.

W. R. CUMMINGS RESIGNS AS HEAD OF STATE SOCCER

Wilfred R. Cummings, for seventeen years secretary-treasurer of the Illinois State Football association, the governing soccer body of the state, resigned at a meeting in the Palmer house last night.

Cummings is president of the Peel cup commission and has intimated that he will give up that post. Previous to being head of the Peel board he held the position of secretary-treasurer of that body from 1925 to 1932. He is a past treasurer of the United States Football association and managed the national team that toured South America last year.

EDDIE GILL WHIPS K. O. WHITE IN FRONTON SHOW

Eddie Gill, St. Charles, Ill., middleweight, defeated K. O. White, Chicago, in the six round windup of the professional boxing show at the Rainbo Fronton last night. Gill floored White in the sixth round for a two count.

In two other six round bouts Joe Barlow won from Jack Ripp and Eddie Meyers was awarded a decision over Roy Peters. In the preliminaries Guy Schriver whipped Jimmy Caur; Joe Scalice won from Jimmy Richards, and Bob Groshek beat Jack Delaney.

Michigan Alumni Celebrate Title March at Banquet

Fielding H. Yost, director of athletics, in the rôle of principal speaker, traced the football history of his 32 years at Ann Arbor. He told of the first game on the coast on Jan. 1, 1902, when his first Maize and Blue team swamped Stanford, 49-0. The game was called with nine minutes left to play.

Yost then pointed to Michigan's calim to a share in seven of the last 11 Big Ten football titles and a total of 15 in the 22 years the Wolverines have been in the Western conference.

Irving K. Pond, who made the touchdown that beat Racine in Michigan's first football game back in 1879, was a special guest.

Harry Newman, selected as the team's most valuable player and candidate for THE TRIBUNE'S award, was characterized by Yost as "the most dangerous threat on an American football field this fall."

Tobin Moves to Full Back for U.S.C. Tilt

Notre Dame, Ind., Dec. 2. — [Special.]—Reinforcements were moved up in the Notre Dame lineup today, John (Red) Tobin of Janesville, Wis., was made over from a right half back and worked at full back in scrimmage with the varsity. He will be groomed to replace Steve Banas and George Melinkovich, two injured backs, who may not be able to play against Southern California a week from tomorrow.

Joe Kurth, star right tackle, joined the hospital squad tonight, going into the infirmary for the night with what was described as a mild attack of influenza. He participated in dummy scrimmage today and will work out again tomorrow.

Robinson May Not Go.

Jack Robinson, varsity center, spent his third day in confinement today and attending physicians said his recovery has been so retarded he may not be able to leave with the squad Monday. Robinson also has the flu.

Today's scrimmage, which was open to the student body, was more encouraging than yesterday's debacle, although the freshmen scored once on a pass and made several other long gains with the complicated Trojan offense.

Anderson Names Squad.

The squad for the coast trip was named tentatively by Anderson today. The final list will be announced Sunday night, Anderson said, and will depend on showings in tomorrow's drill and the recovery of invalids. The list follows:

Uhlard Hangartner, assistant coach, left for Los Angeles tonight to scout the coast champions in their game with Notre Dame. Andy Gustafson, another assistant coach, who was to drill the squad, was called to Aurora, Ill., to attend the funeral of his mother.

His departure caused another change in temporary coaching arrangements, since Sutherland, who is in charge of the All-North eleven which plays the All-South team at Baltimore Dec. 10, will be absent until after that contest.

DETROIT TRADES PRESLESNICK AND RILEY TO INDIANS

Cleveland, O., Dec. 2.—(AP)—Deacon Waite, center for the Cleveland Hockey club in the International league, was traded today to Detroit for Tony Preslesnick, wing, and Jack Riley, center, Manager Harry Holmes announced.

Carnera Injures Foe's Leg and Then Knocks Him Out

St. Louis, Mo., Dec. 2.—(AP)—Primo Carnera, the "man mountain" of Italy, knocked out John Schwake of St. Louis in the seventh round of a ten round boxing match here tonight with a punch to the face. Two low blows in the first round injured Schwake's left leg and time out was called. Schwake refused to claim a foul and after thirty minutes in the dressing room returned to the ring.

Cain Hurt as St. Marys and Alabama Meet

San Francisco, Cal., Dec. 2.—(AP)—Alabama, one of Dixie's favorite football teams, and St. Mary's will meet here tomorrow in the season's first outstanding intersectional game on the coast.

There is no championship in the balance but a victory on either side will make up for earlier defeats and disappointment.

Alabama is charged with maintaining the record established by other invading Alabama teams. It is a record of two victories and one tie. Alabama having defeated Washington, 20 to 19, in 1925; tied Stanford, 7 to 7, in 1926, and won from Washington State, 24 to 0, in 1930. All were Rose Bowl games at Pasadena.

30,000 to See Game.

St. Mary's needs the victory to balance its intersectional competition for the year. A few weeks ago it lost, 14 to 0, to Fordham in New York.

Some 30,000 fans, half the capacity of the Kezar stadium, are expected to see the first appearance of a southern team in this section. St. Mary's is the favorite.

Alabama will be without the punting services of John [Hurry] Cain, its star full back. An old knee injury will prevent Cain from kicking, but it does not seem to handicap him in other departments of play.

Both Use Notre Dame System.

Each team uses the system made famous by the late Knute Rockne. Coach Frank Thomas of Alabama, was quarter back at Notre Dame from 1920 to 1922. Coach Ed Madigan of St. Mary's preceded him there as a center. St. Mary's second team will start the game. Lineups:

THURNBLAD WINS TWO BLOCKS TO LEAD KIECKHEFER

Thurnblad won the afternoon block, 54 to 47, in 39 innings, with the aid of a high run of six. Kieckhefer had a run of eleven. In the evening block, Thurnblad turned in a high run of ten while beating Kieckhefer, 50 to 25, in 25 innings. Thurnblad now leads, 300 to 272.

BEARS CONCLUDE PRACTICE TODAY FOR GIANT GAME

Coach Jones Aims Against Confidence.

Victory will enable the Bears to stay in the running with Green Bay and Portsmouth for the league title. In New York on Nov. 6 they routed the Giants, 23 to 7. The fact that the Bears staged a comeback in the second half to win that game is one reason Coach Ralph Jones is guarding against overconfidence.

"That score," said Jones, "is no indication of the strength or lack of strength of the Giants. They came back and defeated Green Bay, something we haven't done this season."

Packers Play Spartans.

Just the same the Bears are confident. "Beat the team that beat the Packers and then beat the Packers," is the slogan. However, there are several possibilities, but to figure in them as a championship contender the Bears must turn back the Giants tomorrow.

The Packers play Portsmouth tomorrow and if they beat the Spartans and the Bears beat the Giants the game at Wrigley field on Dec. 11 between the Bears and Packers will decide the title. Should the Spartans trim the Packers and the Bears win from the Giants and Packers, Portsmouth and the Bears would tie for the pennant and would play it off Dec. 13.

Roster of Giants.

Those on the Giants' roster are: Chris Cagle, Jack McBride, Red Flaherty, Morris Badgro, Dade Burnett, Glenn Campbell, Tiny Feather, Butch Gibson, Len Grant, Mol Hein, Stuart Clancy, Cecil Irvin, Tom Jones, Hap Moran, Joe Mulleneaux, Sunny Munday, Mickey Murtag, Bill Owen, and Lefty Vokaty. They are coached by Steve Owen, a former star linesman in the league.

Nappanee Preps Defeat Mishawaka Five, 41 to 34

Riley [South Bend], 24; Plymouth, 19.

Northwestern Will Abandon Grid Captaincy

The luxury of a football captain will be dispensed with by Northwestern university's football team in 1933. The varsity squad met yesterday and voted to do away with the captaincy. Instead, Coach Dick Hanley will appoint a different player to lead the team each game.

Both the varsity and freshman squads will be the guests of the Northwestern university club of Chicago at the annual football banquet at the Stevens hotel tonight. Letters and numerals will be awarded to the players at this time.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Dec. 2.—The bond market today failed to extend yesterday's broad recovery. The domestic section was steady at best, with a scattering of recessions. Strength was most apparent in the foreign list under the leadership of Argentines, although in that group, too, there were individual sagging tendencies.

Trading volume in all divisions sank to meager proportions, owing to a conglomeration of political and economic uncertainties. The war debt situation was a chief topic of interest and at the same time a retarding one marketwise.

Sharp gains in Argentine bonds, extending up to 3 points in some issues, were a feature of trading in foreign bonds. Bankers reported that there was no new development of basic importance affecting the country's position.

Reasons for Rally.

The rally, it was believed, resulted from the recent improvement in sterling and wheat prices, and from some relaxation of fears over the possibility of defaults on the country's external dollar bonds.

Long term bonds of New York City sagged a point or more in light trading, owing to the announcement today that the city will need about $145,000,000 this month over and above tax receipts and other income.

Similarly, United States government issues were in a lethargic condition as regards trading activity. Market factors now stifling trading are the treasury's December financing, which will be announced early next week, uncertainty over what congress will do about the budget and other matters affecting the government's credit.

Utilities Are Strong.

High grade public utility bonds continued a bulwark of strength in the domestic market. Gains in these issues included Consolidated Gas of New York 5s, Kansas City Power and Light 4½s, Kansas Gas and Electric 4½s, New Jersey Power and Light 4½s, Detroit Edison 4½s and others.

Among speculative rail bonds trading activity centered in issues of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, with prices rising slightly.

Results Achieved.

TO THE EDITOR: We are in desperate need of immediate advice. So I beg of you to answer in a day's time if possible. We have a home on which there is a first mortgage due Dec. 22, 1932. We wish to have this renewed through the Federal Home Loan bank. We deposited our rent each month in a savings account at the Trustee System. We were informed we could withdraw at any time to meet our obligations on the building. This savings account amounted to $153.

I needed this money to pay interest, but when I went to the Trustee System they told me I'd have to give ninety days notice to get my money. I called at the main office and was informed I could only get $3 on a ninety day notice and they insisted I accept three gold notes in the amounts of $50 each for the balance. This would mean three notes which were unredeemable until five years from date of issue. I told them I could not accept these as I have interest on my home to pay. They refused to give me cash and suggested I offer these notes as part payment on the interest. I consulted the mortgage holder and he refused to accept these notes and insisted upon cash. Now, this is the question:

1. Can I force them to accept a $50 note as part payment of interest?

2. Can they foreclose?

3. Can the Trustee System force me to accept these gold notes?

4. Don't you think in a case such as mine that this company should give me the cash?

5. Under the law, am I allowed a month's "grace period" after my interest and mortgage is due?

Please advise me about the Trustee System as I am worried—A. H.

ANSWER: 1. No.
2. Yes.
3. No.
4. Yes.
5. No.

We suggest you call on Mr. —— at the main office of the Trustee System, explaining your present position regarding the payments on your home. Remember, you are not forced to accept gold notes and have the right to refuse.

Also, explain to the present mortgage holder that you are making every effort to refinance the property as well as liquidate your savings account in the Trustee System and would appreciate a ninety day extension on the present loan.

RESULT: I sincerely wish to thank you for your good advice which I followed regarding the Trustee System service. We are happy to tell you that we received our money, which amounted to $153. Fortunately, we received this money a short time before the company went into receivership. We have filed an application with the Home Loan bank and hope for favorable results. We certainly appreciate your service and want to thank THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.—A. H.

GRAIN FUTURES BOARD URGES MORE PIT RULES

Charges Short Sales Drove Prices Down.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 2.—Further federal regulation was recommended today in the annual report of the grain futures administration to Secretary of Agriculture Hyde on the ground that short selling operations by large speculators have defeated the "legitimate economic functions" of the grain futures market.

ARTHUR M. HYDE. [Harris-Ewing Photo.]

In support of its recommendation the administration pointed out that the weight of the large speculative interests was on the short side of the market during a year that saw the volume of grain futures trading on the nation's exchanges fall 20 per cent below 1931 to strike the lowest level since 1924. Total futures sales in all markets, it was said, amounted to 13,566,157,000 during the fiscal year 1932 as compared with 17,034,201,000 in the preceding year and a 1921-'31 average of 12,127,851,000 bushels a year.

Want Trading Limitations.

"It is fundamental," said the report, "that grain futures price quotations, upon which cash grain prices are based, should at all times truly reflect supply and demand conditions with respect to actual grain if the futures market is to perform efficiently its legitimate economic functions. Obviously this result cannot be achieved if large professional operators are permitted to trade for purely speculative purposes in inordinate amounts which it is impossible for the market readily to absorb.

"The administration again stresses the need of supplementary legislation providing for the imposition of reasonable limitations upon the daily volume of trading and open commitments of large professional speculators. Substantial benefit to producers and consumers and to all using the futures market for proper purposes should result from the elimination of the economic evils incident to market domination by a few powerful operators trading for speculative account."

Charge Big Operators Short.

Large speculative grain traders—those having an open interest of at least 500,000 bushels in a single future on any one day—operated during the year principally on the short side of the market, the report stated. A study of operations of large speculators in the Chicago exchange, it was said, disclosed that during a 223 trading day period the average net position of the large speculators as a group was 3,432,000 bushels short.

The effect of this short position upon grain prices, according to the report, "is well illustrated by the short selling operations which accompanied the price decline in May wheat during March when the price of the May future fell from a high of 62¼ cents a bushel on March 7 to a low of 52 cents on March 28, a decline of 10¼ cents. The records disclose that near the close of February the net position of the large speculative accounts was practically even; that is, the large speculative short accounts were virtually offset by the large speculative long accounts. In March, however, the short sellers became more active and the large speculative accounts reached a maximum for the month of 8,950,000 bushels net short."

Futures Trading Drops.

Futures trading on the Chicago Board of Trade, according to the report, declined 20 per cent during the year to a total volume of 11,619,942,000 bushels—the lowest level since 1924 and the second lowest in any year since records have been kept by the futures administration.

The largest day's volume of trading during the year was recorded on Nov. 5, 1931, the report stated, when sales of grain futures on the Chicago exchange totaled 109,872,000 bushels. This high for the year compared with a record of 180,127,000 bushels traded on Aug. 6, 1930, and with the all time record volume of 193,479,000 bushels July 15, 1929.

Despite the decline with respect to all grains the volume of trading in wheat futures increased slightly during the year, the report showed, aggregating 10,147,490,000 bushels as compared with 10,063,139,000 in the previous year.

Transactions in corn futures, however, dropped 52 per cent to strike the lowest level on record with a total for the year of 2,638,849,000 bushels. Futures sales of oats dropped by 55 per cent from the previous year to their lowest recorded total, 332,149,000 bushels, while futures transactions in rye dropped sharply to total 342,369,000 bushels—the lowest level since 1921.

GEN. ELECTRIC DIRECTORS VOTE USUAL DIVIDENDS

General Electric company yesterday declared a regular quarterly dividend of ten cents a share on the common stock and the usual payment of fifteen cents on the special shares, both payable Jan. 25 to stock of record Dec. 16.

The company said it had no other announcement to make with regard to the directors' meeting. This was interpreted to mean that the board had not yet acted on a plan for disposing of the company's holdings of Radio Corporation of America shares, as provided by the recent consent decree.

Debt and Taxes Bear Heavily on the Farmer

BY SCRUTATOR.

Debts and taxes are almost as prime causes for the farmer's present troubles as are low agricultural prices. In fact, they are a contributory cause to low prices. Therefore, it is likely that any new program of agricultural relief taken up by congress will couple means to alleviate farm indebtedness with proposals to raise prices, while tax reduction, of course, will apply to all classes of population.

Recent data given out by the department of agriculture show that about 2,500,000 of the 6,000,000 odd American farms are mortgaged for more than 9 billion dollars. The average mortgage is around $3,600. About 800,000 of the mortgaged farms are carrying loans exceeding half of their value, another 300,000 farms are mortgaged for more than three-quarters of their value, while 125,000 are mortgaged for more than their current value.

Most Debt in Middle West.

Almost half of the farm mortgages now in force were contracted around 1918-1922, a period of peak values, and more than 60 per cent of this debt lies in the twelve north central states, extending from Ohio and Michigan to Kansas, Nebraska and the Dakotas. The states of Illinois, Iowa, and Nebraska bear about a third of the entire farm mortgage debt. So it is from the middle west that the principal demands for farm relief measures arise.

What are the results of these debts and mounting taxes? In 1929 the farm income was nearly 12 billion dollars, which meant that the average farmer got about $1,900. But the farmer with a mortgage had to pay out about $400 in interest and taxes, which left him $1,500. This year, however, farm income is estimated around 5¾ billion dollars, or about $832 per farmer. But the farmer with a mortgage still will have $400 to pay in interest, taxes and so will have only about $432 left.

Farm Values Shrink.

Since the 1918-1922 period, farm commodity prices have fallen more than 70 per cent, and land values have dropped about 40 per cent, according to Ernst & Ernst, accountants. But Illinois, Iowa and Nebraska land values have declined between 50 and 66 per cent. The fall in commodity prices makes it three times as difficult theoretically for farmers to meet mortgage payments and taxes, while the drop in land values has wiped out equities of thousands of farmers in their lands and has weakened the security behind almost 3 billion dollars invested in farm mortgages.

"If the farmer's payments on obligations bore a direct relation to farm prices," the analysis sets forth, "payment would be easier. Under present conditions, however, the farmer debtor has no alternative but to increase production of commodities with which to pay his debts during periods of low farm prices. Thus, he helps to produce surpluses, drives down prices and tends to decrease both his own income and that of the debt-free farmer. So it becomes clear that prices, surpluses and mortgage debt are all inextricably tied together."

Stops Farm Buying.

Moreover, this burden of debt and taxes also prevent the farmer from buying manufactured products with the result that industrial unemployment is increased. Therefore, all workers and many investors are affected, directly or indirectly, by the farm mortgage problem. Individual investors hold almost 3 billion dollars of farm mortgages, insurance companies more than 2 billions, banks and mortgage companies, 2 billions; federal and joint stock land banks, less than 2 billions, and other agencies, less than one billion dollars.

SUIT AGAINST CONT'L SHARES IS DISMISSED

Baltimore, Md., Dec. 2.—(AP)—The effort of George L. Gugle of Columbus, O., to have Continental Shares, Inc., declared bankrupt failed in Circuit court here today when Judge H. Arthur Stump dismissed the complaint.

At the conclusion of arguments by attorneys, Judge Stump briefly thanked counsel for the thoroughness of the presentation and then announced he was dismissing the receivership proceedings.

"The court does not think the evidence shows that it would be to the advantage of stockholders to appoint a receiver," he said.

His action came as a surprise, as it was generally believed he would take the matter under consideration. The hearing was resumed on Nov. 21 after having been continued from the month previous. Gugle's action was brought, he contended, for the protection of the stockholders. He was a stockholder.

Inland Power Is Placed in Receivership

Leonard S. Florsheim was named receiver for the Inland Light and Power corporation, a subsidiary of Middle West Utilities company, by Federal Judge Walter C. Lindley. The action followed the filing of an equity bill by the Commonwealth Light and Power company which listed claims of $1,840,087.

The firm is a subholding company of the Middle West system. Its investments in the securities of its subsidiaries totaled $8,947,278. The company consented to the receivership.

Company Called Solvent.

The petition sets forth that although the company is solvent in that its nominal assets exceed its liabilities, it is unable to obtain sufficient cash to meet interest on its debentures and other obligations. The bill was filed by the law firm of McKinney, Lynde, and Grear.

Charles A. McCulloch and Edward N. Hurley, receivers for Middle West Utilities, said last night the parent company has a large stake in Inland Power and that a plan of reorganization is being prepared for presentation to the security holders as soon as possible.

What it Controls.

Inland Power holds control of the Missouri Public Service company, the Michigan Public Service company, Arkansas-Missouri Power company and the Kansas Power company.

In a formal statement Hurley and McCulloch said:

"Receivership of Inland Power and Light corporation is due to the inability of its subsidiary companies to earn and declare dividends on their common stock, all of which is owned by Inland, sufficient to meet the charges for interest on Inland bonds and dividends on its preferred stock."

"While some of the subsidiaries have been making a comparatively good showing, earnings of the others have been seriously affected by conditions prevailing in the territory served by them."

"The Middle West Utilities company has a very large financial interest in this situation. It is proposed that a plan of reorganization will be developed for presentation to security holders as rapidly as possible."

Dennis E. Sullivan Jr. was appointed attorney for the receiver. Judge Lindley set the receiver's bond at $10,000.

REPORTED BANKS MAY GRANT CASH TO AID CHICAGO

Negotiations between Chicago and New York banks for the financial rescue of the Chicago city government may result in advances of funds for operating expenses, as well as to meet the city and school board bonded debt maturities of about $24,000,000 after the first of the year, it was reported yesterday.

City Controller Szymczak and his assistant, Victor S. Petterson, held a three hour conference yesterday with representatives of the Chicago banks. None of the conferees would make any statement at the close of the meeting, except to say that several more conferences are to be held.

The New York banks, which were given a picture of Chicago's financial situation earlier in the week by Mayor Cermak and Chicago bankers, are still considering participation in the purchase of tax warrants or refunding bonds to take care of the bond and interest requirements on Jan. 1, it is understood.

EXTRA DIVIDEND OF $200 TO BE PAID BY OIL CONCERN

New York, Dec. 2.—(AP)—Accustomed to very slender dividend payments—if any—for the last year or more, Wall street jumped to attention today at the announcement of an extra dividend of $200 and a regular dividend of $100 on the capital stock of the Group No. 1 Oil corporation of Texas.

It was discovered, however, that the payment did not involve huge distribution of money, since the company's entire issue of stock is only a little more than 2,000 shares, of which 1,467 shares are held by the Texon Oil and Land company. The company operates on oil and gas properties in Texas owned by the University of Texas.

The parent company, Texon Oil and Gas, declared an extra dividend of 25 cents and a regular quarterly payment of 25 cents. Dividends of both companies are payable Dec. 31 to stock of record Dec. 15.

MR. WHITE SHOULD TRY HIS LOVE PERFUME ON THE COMMISSION

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 2.—The federal trade commission does not agree with Mr. Theodore White of Los Angeles that his perfumes are "so irresistible that they will attract and win the love of any one desired" and has ordered Mr. White to desist from advertising them as such. Announcement of the verdict was made by the commission today in a terse statement which read:

"Theodore White, trading as Theo. White company and Palace de Flores, Los Angeles, vendor of a perfume alleged to be irresistible, agrees to discontinue the erroneous representations that such is irresistible and can captivate the soul or that it will enable the user to be exclusively attractive to and to win the love of any person desired."

The announcement made no mention of the manner in which the commission tested Mr. White's perfume, if at all.

Similarly, the commission failed to describe the method by which it learned that an advertised "cure for the liquor habit" was not a cure at all. However, the commission did announce that it has made a certain "vendor" stop advertising that "an alleged treatment for the liquor habit is competent to permanently terminate the habit, when such is not the fact."

THIRD COPPER LEADER QUITS WORLD PARLEY

New York, Dec. 2.—(AP)—Further indications of a deadlock in the international copper conference appeared today in word that Felicien Cattier, president of the Union Miniere du Haut Katanga, would sail for Europe tomorrow.

Cattier's departure will mark the third defection from the ranks of the conferees, but those remaining said the negotiations would be resumed next week with the arrival of Arthur D. Storke, managing director of the Roan Antelope Copper Mines, Ltd., another producer concerned in the conference.

Sir Auckland Geddes, chairman of the Rhokana corporation, sailed before the conference got under way, leaving S. S. Taylor, managing director, to act for the company. James V. Murdock, president of Noranda Mines, left for Canada on Wednesday.

The plan of the Roan Antelope company to increase its 1933 production schedule above that of this year was said to have been the greatest barrier to an agreement, but the conferees expressed hope that this difference would be ironed out when Mr. Storke arrived here.

French Permit Only 1 Pct. of Foreign Wheat in Bread

PARIS, Dec. 2.—(AP)—The maximum amount of foreign wheat permitted in milling of bread flour was fixed today at 1 per cent by the ministry of agriculture. This means that millers must use 99 per cent native wheat in flour.

Auburn Auto Co. Directors Vote Regular Dividends

Auburn Automobile company announced here yesterday that its directors have declared regular quarterly dividends of $1 in cash and 2 per cent in stock, both payable Jan. 2 to stock of record Dec. 23.

Trade Moves on Firm Line, Reviews Aver

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Dec. 2.—Though the forward movement in business and trade this fall has lost some of its momentum, reports for last week issued today by leading trade reviews indicate a maintenance of previous levels and a decrease in the hesitancy which had been handicapping the recent uptrend.

Freight carloadings and rail earnings continue the brightest spot in the picture, according to Bradstreet's Weekly, which, at the same time, points out that "confidence has been undermined by the failure of the business indices to maintain their extra seasons gains, by the unsettled war debt problem and by the coming session of congress."

Prices Are Lower.

"Wholesale trade volume is slightly below last year, with prices substantially lower," says that publication. "Orders are small, buying extremely cautious. Cigaret factories constitute the only line reporting satisfactory operations. Collections are slow. Outstanding accounts of leading department stores are equal to from three and four months' volume or sales. Chicago and Los Angeles report encouraging items. Wholesale dry goods in Chicago are moving at a volume of 15 to 20 per cent in excess of last year. Los Angeles reports activity in tires, oil and motion pictures near normal."

"The final month of the year has opened under circumstances far more auspicious than were discernible at this period in 1931. As the reports, which contain no evidences of fresh gains, show a maintenance of previous levels or a decrease in the hesitancy which has been handicapping the forward movement," says R. G. Dun & Co.

Fewer Adverse Factors.

"While progress generally is being aggravated by lack of support by the major industries and the listless commodity prices, caused by the uncertainties of the international debt settlements and the weakness of sterling, salient features of the week's reports include fewer adverse factors to confuse the outlook.

"There is nothing present in current developments to give indication of any recession in general activity being more than seasonal during the balance of the winter, while the clarification of legislative policies are being counted upon to bring a more sustained upward movement in the spring than that which carried so much encouragement during the fall months."

REICHSBANK WILL PAY $3,000,000 ON FOREIGN LOAN

[Copyright: 1932: By the New York Times.]

BERLIN, Dec. 2.—The reichsbank will pay on Dec. 4 an installment of three million dollars on the foreign rediscount credit which it obtained last summer. The average gold reserves in November were 3 per cent above the average reserves in August and the reichsbank therefore is obliged to pay off 3 per cent of the original amount of the credit, which was 100 million dollars. The credit thereby will be reduced to 87 million dollars.

The credit of the reichsbank was opened on June 26, 1931, in the amount of 100 million dollars, equal parts being supplied by the Bank of England, the Bank of France, the Bank for International Settlements, and the Federal Reserve banks. It has been renewed six times. Ten per cent of the principal was repaid when the credit was renewed on March 4 last.

If 3 per cent of the original principal amount is repaid on Dec. 4 the Federal Reserve's share of the credit will be cut down to $21,750,000.

E. L. Bruce Co. Head Finds Furniture Demand Gains

E. L. Bruce company, hardwood flooring manufacturers, reported yesterday a "surprising" upturn in business from furniture makers. President R. G. Bruce said: "This company's dimension plant in Little Rock, Ark., where shapes are made for furniture, is operating at full capacity, and has six weeks' future business on hand, with additional orders received daily."

The increase, he added, has been between 200 and 300 per cent, furniture dealers having exhausted their lines.

POUND'S TWO DAY RALLY CHECKED; DECLINES 3 CENTS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Dec. 2.—The two day rally in sterling, based on profit taking by shorts after the previous long decline, fizzled out today and British exchange resumed its decline, falling nearly 4 cents beneath its Thursday close and ending the day at $3.21, 3 cents off.

Renewed bearish operations played a part in the decline of the exchange, but the drying up of short covering was more important. The exchange opened at about $3.22½ to $3.22⅞ and was offered lower at once. It reacted to $3.20⅛, the day's low, but ran up to the closing price of $3.21 in the last few minutes of business.

Japanese yen, Canadian dollars and the Scandinavians followed sterling as usual. The yen was off ¼c to 20.37 cents, the Canadian dollar went to a discount of 14⅞ per cent, against 14 per cent discount on Thursday, and the Scandinavians were down 4 to 10 points.

The gold standard exchanges were firmer, although the franc closed unchanged from the previous day at 3.90⅞ cents. Guilders were up 1½ points to 40.19 cents, Belgas rallied a point to 13.85 cents and Swiss francs improved ¼ point to 19.23 cents.

Victor C. Anderson to Head Standard Parts Group

Detroit, Mich., Dec. 2.—[Special]—The National Standard Parts association convention here today elected Victor C. Anderson, president of the Motor and Axle Parts Company, Inc., of Chicago, as jobber director for a two year term in the national association, which comprises the automotive wholesalers of the United States and Canada. The convention ran through to Dec. 10.

CHICAGO, COOK COUNTY REALTY BOARDS TO JOIN

Directors O. K. Plan; Members to Vote.

BY AL CHASE.

Plans for merging the Chicago Real Estate board and the Cook County Real Estate board have been completed, it was announced last night by J. Soule Warterfield, president of the former organization. It now remains for the members to approve what the boards of directors of both bodies have already passed on. This will be done early in January.

Mr. Warterfield said the annual banquet of the Chicago board, usually held in December, has been postponed until some time in January, when the 50th anniversary of the realtors' organization will be celebrated by the merged realty boards.

Zander to Be President.

The recently elected officers of the Chicago Real Estate board, headed by Henry G. Zander Jr., as president, will be executives of the merged bodies. The directors of the Chicago board will be directors of the merged organizations. The only representative of the Cook County Real Estate board on the official roster of officers will be Robert E. L. Brooks, former president of the Cook County group.

A new unit of the Chicago Real Estate board, to be known as the Torrens division, will be created and Mr. Brooks will be chairman of the board of governors of this group. This automatically makes him a vice president of the Chicago Real Estate board. The Cook County Real Estate board has been an active backer of the Torrens system of land registration. The present officers of the Cook county group will retire from active duty when the merger is effected.

The membership of this Torrens division will be made up of nine members. The nine are: George A. Meade, Mark Levy, William G. Booth, George Kappes, Fred W. Brummel, William Zelosky, Roy E. Knauer, William H. Loehde, and Peter Foote.

Warterfield's Statement.

Following is President Warterfield's statement regarding the proposed merger. "Due to the fact that during the first week of January this coming year a vote is to be taken by both the Chicago Real Estate board and the Cook County Real Estate board on the union of the two boards and looking to the happy prospect of consummation of this most to be desired unification of real estate interests, and also due to the fact that the new administration in Springfield will be in office after the first of January, the Chicago Real Estate board has decided to postpone its annual banquet until January.

"At this time most fittingly its fiftieth annual banquet can be held in celebration of its golden anniversary with its sister board all under one roof, and have as its theme the various legislative measures for the relief of real estate, which at that time will be before the public in the legislature. Thus a speaker may be on hand who will be in a position to talk of actual issues of the day rather than possible theories."

Women's Attendance a Question.

The Cook County Real Estate board banquets, long famous for their entertainment features and outstanding speakers, have been attended by the wives of members. The Chicago board affairs have always barred women from attending. This point has not yet been determined, but it is considered probable that the Cook county precedent will be followed and women will attend. The banquet probably will be held at the Palmer house.

The Cook County Real Estate board, it is understood, will give up its quarters at 100 North La Salle street and move over to the rooms of the Chicago Real Estate board at 32 West Randolph street.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 2.—Home financing institutions have purchased $11,795,081 worth of stock in the federal home loan bank system, according to announcement today by Chairman Franklin W. Fort of the home loan bank board.

FRANKLIN FORT.

Of the total private subscriptions, said Mr. Fort, nine millions represented unconditional purchase of stock by institutions eligible under their state laws to membership in the system. Two millions, he said, was subscribed, conditionally, pending enactment of state laws which will permit home finance institutions to join the system.

U. S. to Furnish $122,049,919.

The initial capitalization for the twelve home loan banks has been fixed by the board at 134 million dollars, of which the treasury was to subscribe whatever portion became necessary up to 125 millions. The federal government, therefore, will be called upon to furnish $122,049,919 of the system's initial capital. Mr. Fort said the funds would be furnished by the treasury as needed, through loans by the Reconstruction Finance corporation.

Private stock purchases in the seventh home loan bank district which comprises Illinois and Wisconsin with headquarters at Evanston totaled $826,100, according to Mr. Fort's announcement, the whole sum having been subscribed unconditionally by institutions in the states which are permitted to buy stock under existing law. In the Sixth district, made up of Indiana and Michigan, with headquarters at Indianapolis, unconditional subscriptions amounted to $1,422,600, Mr. Fort stated.

Government gets Interest.

The funds to be obtained from the treasury, said the chairman, will be called for as required by the twelve banks of the system. Under the home loan bank law, he pointed out, the government receives two per cent interest on this money, so that the banks will save the two per cent by calling for the money as the need arises, rather than drawing it all at once.

"Thus far," said Mr. Fort's statement, "the federal home loan bank board has approved lines of credit to the twelve banks of between one and two million dollars, and another million or more probably will be approved today."

INSULL UTILITY CREDITORS WILL QUIZ N.Y. BANKERS

Federal Judge Walter C. Lindley yesterday authorized Attorney Lewis F. Jacobson, counsel for the petitioning creditors in the Insull Utility Investment, Inc., bankruptcy case to conduct an examination before a federal judge or referee in bankruptcy in New York City similar to the one recently concluded here.

The order authorized examination of officials of the following banks which hold collateral for loans to the Insull concern: The Central Hanover Bank and Trust company, the Guaranty Trust company, the Commercial National Bank and Trust company, the Irving Trust company and the Bankers Trust company. In addition an examination of Owen D. Young, chairman of the board of the General Electric company which holds Insull collateral, was authorized.

Mr. Jacobson alleged that the Insull collateral, consisting of practically all the assets of the company, had been wrongfully pledged and that the banks knew of the precarious conditions of the company when they accepted the collateral for a $40,000,000 loan.

Counsel for the creditors contends that the collateral properly belongs to the creditors of the Insull company because it was given the banks as security for loans contrary to the provisions of the debentures of which $60,000,000 were sold to the public.

Brazil Orders Ten Planes from Bellanca Aircraft

Wilmington, Del., Dec. 2.—(AP)—The Bellanca Aircraft corporation today announced that it has received an order for ten airplanes for the Brazilian government. They will cost about $250,000, and it is understood they will be used for photographic work. The planes will be of the pacemaker type.

Brokers' Collateral Loans Up $12,910,359 in Nov.

New York, Dec. 2.—(AP)—The New York Stock Exchange reported today that borrowings of member firms on collateral rose $12,910,359 last month to a total of $337,612,558 on Nov. 30, compared with $730,151,908 on Nov. 30, 1931.

U. S. DEFICIT IS 3-4 OF A BILLION IN FIVE MONTHS

Hoover to Urge Tax Bill Revision.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 2.—Red figures on the treasury ledger today disclosed a deficit of three-quarters of a billion dollars for the first five months of the current fiscal year. On the present basis of expenditures and tax receipts the gross deficit for the current fiscal year will exceed a billion and a half dollars by June 30 next.

The daily statement of the United States treasury disclosed that the gross public debt has jumped to 20 billion 806 million dollars, an increase of three billion since Nov. 30, 1931.

Fear Deficit in 1934 Budget.

Although no mention of the 1934 budget is carried in the daily statement, a glance at the tax collection rate disclosed that another deficit would be run up in 1934 unless drastic steps are taken to curtail expenditures. In this connection it was said in an informed White House quarter today that President Hoover probably will recommend revision of the "billion dollar" tax bill this winter to make it raise a billion dollars. On the present basis of returns the bill will fail by more than 300 million dollars to return up to estimates. A sales tax will be recommended by the President, according to Republican congressmen.

The best information available in administration circles is that the economies to be recommended in the new federal budget will fail by perhaps 750 millions to balance the budget. The gap will have to be bridged, either by more drastic congressional economies, radical reductions in veterans' costs or new taxes if a deficit in 1934 is to be avoided.

Taxes Falling Off.

Miscellaneous taxes which showed increases in September and October fell off again after the election. Income taxes failed to come up to estimates. Customs taxes were off and postal revenues continued disappointing. Miscellaneous taxes were 66 millions, compared with about 72 millions last month from all sources the government collected 681 millions through November and spent one billion 432 millions. Income taxes dropped 155 million dollars over the comparable period for last year.

At its second session today the special senate economy committee heard from Budget Director J. Clawson Roop, Postmaster General Walter F. Brown, and Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, head of the veterans' administration. The hearing was held behind closed doors. At its conclusion Senator Hiram Bingham (Rep., Conn.), chairman, said that the testimony had concerned the inequities of the economy act adopted at the last session of congress. The committee will meet tomorrow to hear the representatives of Government Employes' association testify concerning the same subject.

ELECTRIC FIRM TO INCREASE NEWSPAPER ADS

Cleveland, O., Dec. 2.—[Special.]—A larger percentage of the advertising appropriation of Edison General Electric Appliance Co., Inc., Chicago, for next year will be for newspaper advertising in those sections where conditions are most favorable for electric range sales.

This statement was made today by W. A. Grove, advertising director, at the annual convention of advertising managers of General Electric distributorships here from all parts of the country.

Grove announced an "On to Chicago" nation-wide contest for retail salesmen in which prizes will be trips to the Chicago Century of Progress as a feature of the 1933 electric range sales drive.

Spot Silver Sells at 25 Cts; Reaches New Record Low

New York, Dec. 2.—(AP)—The price of spot silver dropped ¼ cent today to 25 cents an ounce, a new record low level. A similar decline occurred yesterday. Silver dealers reported that the market was affected by the heaviness of the London market for bar silver, which felt the weight selling by Indian bazaars. The continent, however, was a buyer. Selling here was not particularly heavy, being estimated by traders at about 350,000 ounces.

Union Central Insurance Reports 21% Business Gain

Cincinnati, O., Dec. 2.—(AP)—The Union Central Life Insurance company today reported a total of $12,713,244 in paid for new business for November, an increase of 21 per cent over the volume of November 1931. The total, the announcement said, is the largest in any month since April 1931.

STOCKS SELL OFF $1 TO $3 A SHARE IN SLOW MARKET

British Debt Note Brings Wave of Pessimism.

BY FRED HARVEY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Dec. 2.—The speculative community was in the dumps again today. The new British debt note to-cused attention once more on the chaotic condition of the monetary systems throughout the world and caused traders to switch once more to the selling side of the stock market.

Declines of 1 to 3 points were suffered by the more important shares throughout the list and the close found about all of yesterday's gains wiped out and the averages down again to around the lows of the current reaction.

The sales for the most part were on a dribbling scale with no pronounced pressure in any direction. Volume was around 700,000 shares or about on a par with that of the previous session. Observers got the impression that the handful of professionals who have had the floor to themselves were growing weary of the desperate business of trying to chisel pocket change out of one another and one by one were joining the public on the sidelines.

Nothing Alarming in Note.

There was nothing particularly alarming to market followers in the British note itself and those still trying to cling to the constructive side made much of the fact that the London market had refused to become perturbed over the development and that prices there had held firm in the face of it. In Berlin the so-called threat to the Lausanne agreement carried in the document was met by a rally which carried stocks there to the best levels of the year. Wall street recognized that the note was intended chiefly for the American public and the argument of such friends of postponement or cancellation as the new congress may bring to light. The prevailing view was that it had not altered the so-called debt situation one way or the other.

However, pound sterling suffered another sharp break, and this had a depressing effect on sentiment, which is looking to the business future more keenly than ever just now. Then wheat was down, cotton was unsteady and bonds were irregularly lower. All told, the speculative element could find little that would justify further buying at this particular time.

Gold Shares Rise.

Gold mining stocks were about the only group on the entire board that made any semblance of resistance to the backwash movement. Homestake Mining sold to a new high for the year but in the end was forced to give way with the rest of the market. It finished with a net loss of 2 points. Alaska Juneau held a fractional gain and McIntyre ruled higher most of the day.

Traders watched the rails keenly for a sign of the market's future trend on the theory that this group would show the way as it has so many times in the last three years, but price changes here merely followed the trend. New York Central, Union Pacific and other outstanding issues of the section closed 1 to 2 points below their previous finals.

Utilities Sell Off.

Utility shares kicked up a little dust in their retreat, with American Telephone, Consolidated Gas, Public Service and Standard Gas dipping a couple of points or so each. Standard Gas yielded to a new low for the movement although it managed to keep a goodly margin between it and the bear market low of last summer. Gossip raising doubts as to prospects for maintaining the corporation's current $2 dividend rate was responsible in a measure for the selling.

Nearly a dozen preferred issues fell 2 to 8 points in the usual thin market for senior shares.

COTTON TRADE LIGHTER; PRICES RANGE LOWER

Cotton markets had a weak tone in sympathy with stocks and grains, and buying support was limited. Although there was a little show of strength at times the finish was around the bottom, with losses on futures in Chicago of 14@16 points, and in other markets 9@17 points, the latter in New York. Spots in New York were off 15 points to 5.80c, New Orleans declined 10 points spots to 5.75c, Galveston was 5.75c, and Houston 5.60c. Liverpool closed 1@2 points net lower. The disturbed financial situation over the international war debt settlement was reflected in timidity amongst speculators. Spinners' taking of American cotton for the week was 379,000 bales compared with 432,000 bales the previous week, and 364,000 bales last year. Into sight movement for the week was 566,000 bales, against 502,537 bales the previous week and 505,973 bales last year. Exports continue large and the spot demand is sufficient to absorb offerings. Prices follow:

COTTONSEED OIL.

NEW YORK, Dec. 2.—(AP)—Bleachable cotton seed oil was quiet today with sales of only three contracts of 480 barrels all in the July position. The undertone was a little easier on liquidation which was probably influenced by the lower commodity and stock markets with final prices 3 points net lower. Bleachable spot closed 3.50c; December, 3.62c; January, 3.65c; March, 3.77c; May, 3.85c, and July, 3.98c.

HEAVY SUPPLIES HAVE DEPRESSING EFFECT ON HOGS

Prices in Cattle Market Move Lower.

Light and underweight hogs maintained an even keel in yesterday's trading, equaling the previous session's highest marks, but medium and weighty stock showed a disposition to weaken under the slightest pressure. Dispiriting news from the wholesale trade, which has handled the largest supplies of the season during the last few days, had a depressing effect on the market for the rank and file of offerings exceeding 200 lbs in weight.

Outside demand bought 22 per cent of total receipts, which took care of the supply of light light in the run at good, steady prices. Others weakened 5c, with the trade on the bulk drifting a good deal of the time. Selected 145 lb hogs topped the market at $3.45, while the general average showed 5c loss at $3.30. The general market is only 10c above the low point of the year and 55@65c under the high point early last month. Pork markets have been unable to withstand the pressure of receipts.

Packing at Chicago this week has been the largest since February. During the week local packers have slaughtered approximately 135,000 hogs. This total is 40 per cent above the average weekly kill during the last two months. However, while the run is increasing, which is seasonal, packing is comparatively small for this time of the year. A year ago Chicago houses slaughtered 223,486.

Cattle Receipts Light.

Cattle receipts were light again, but the position of the trade showed no improvement. With the exception of yearlings and light steers, which held the gains scored earlier in the week, practically all grades of cattle are closing fully 25c and in some places 50c under the high point of the week. Butcher stock is selling at new lows, barring a few top yearling heifers which strengthened in sympathy with the market for light steers. Cows are closing 25@35c lower than a week ago. Calves took a hard jolt, going $1.00@1.50 under the high point early in the week.

Total receipts of cattle this week at 36,200 are smallest since the middle of August, barring one holiday week, but with a record supply of show steers available, buyers considered the supply of beef fully equal to requirements and after the first two days were inclined to hold back much of the time. Only 1,500 were in the pens yesterday, with nothing outstanding available. A few reached $6.00, with the bulk of common to fair steers at $4.50@5.50. A shipment of yearling heifers topped the market at $6.25.

Balk at Strength.

Strength appeared in the lamb market yesterday and tendency ruled slightly higher for a short time at the opening, influenced by light supplies. However, buyers put up a bearish front and managed to head off a general upturn. Bulk of offerings changed hands on later rounds at mostly steady prices. Near the close a little pressure submerged the price list a little below the Thursday average, with last sales unevenly 15@40c under the close of last week.

Prices are still 25@40c above the low point of last week. City butchers handpicked a few native lambs up to $6.15, while shippers bought at $6.10 and local packers at $6.00 and under. This week's average price of lambs stands highest since the middle of July, despite the reaction suffered the last three days.

Receipts at Chicago for today are estimated at 300 cattle, 9,000 hogs, and 6,000 sheep, against 648 cattle, 6,918 hogs, and 2,181 sheep the previous Saturday and 516 cattle, 23,467 hogs, and 2,862 sheep a year ago.

SUGAR.

NEW YORK, Dec. 2.—(AP)—Further losses occurred in the raw sugar market today, with prices declining 5 points from the last previous sale, or down 2.85c. It was reported that several days ago a quantity of Cubas were sold to a local refiner for prompt shipment at 2.87c, although details were not disclosed, while today a sale of 25,000 bags of Cuban for prompt shipment was confirmed at 2.85c. Futures were steady at the outset, but demand failed to broaden on the upturn and reactions followed, with the market closing 12 points lower for the spot month and 2 to 3 points lower for the later deliveries. Prices follow:

The refined market was unchanged, but the further decline in raws checked buying and business was limited to nearby requirements. Refiners continued to list at 4.15c for fine granulated, with some re-sale offerings around at 4.12½c.

TODAY—11:00 SHARP!

If you are here promptly at or a few minutes before 11:00 a. m. TODAY an entirely new outlook will have opened for you. We are not inviting discouraged or forgotten men, but MEN DETERMINED, with GRIT and CHARACTER, who are ready to exchange a full day's work for PERMANENT INDEPENDENCE and growing income paid weekly, or you not here, invest or deposit a penny! We do business in 48 countries, have increased monthly for 35 consecutive months; this is one of our all past records; 1933 will be still greater.

You might do like R. P., a young man 4 months out of work, doing handy jobs, making little. In his first 10 days with us he made $209. No past experience, and YOU need none, but HIM you need character, determination, ability to learn and do what we teach you, and WORK CONSISTENTLY! Lazy men will starve in our land of plenty! YOU might make only $125, $150, or $175 your first month. All men do not get speed similarly. Many men in Electrolux (not refrigeration) earn $4,000, $5,000, $6,000 or more yearly. Some are satisfied with less. That's up to them, but we want men who THINK BIG. Then are here from all trades and professions. A former college professor is now beating his teaching earnings by 30 1-3%—no past experience. A former locomotive engineer makes far beyond his boomtime pay on the railroad. A tool and die maker made $230 first two weeks. A boy not yet 20 made $1,000 month a Chevrolet repair man made $125. Two former salesmen made $50 each one day this week. One man made $27 the first few hours he was at work.

If you're from 25 to 48, with responsibilities, believe that an effort is necessary for success, are tired of looking and want to work 52 weeks every year, and will come here whether it shines, rains, snows—or there's a fog or cold, we will give you such opportunity as we believe you can handle. If you're able to CLICK we will make a place for you and have you successful man train you, but a little before but not after 11:00 a. m. SHARP TODAY. SATURDAY—NO OTHER TIME. Room 329 Madison-Kedzie Bldg., 9 S. Kedzie-av.

MAN — EXCELLENT POSITION; IMMEDIate earnings; fine future with outstanding company; sales experience not necessary; no investment required; must be able to start at once. Address M J 331, Tribune.

EARN MORE—HIGHER COMMISSION— You have tried the rest—now sell the best. Take your pick from complete line of well known Xmas candies. 1438 W. Van Buren.

LEGAL NOTICES.

PROPOSALS FOR SHEET METAL AND roofing work at the Capitol bldg., Springfield, will be received by the State of Illinois, Division of Architecture and Engineering, Capitol bldg., Springfield, on Tuesday, Dec. 13, 1932, at Two-Thirty o'Clock P. M. C. Herrick Hammond, Supervising Architect.

WINNIE WINKLE, THE BREADWINNER: A "Drip" to Europe

SOLUTION TO CLASS DAY

Unless otherwise requested Pullman berths are always made up so that one's head is nearest the engine . . . the feet farthest. Yet the professor in his observation test said he saw two men AHEAD of him and that one boarded the FRONT of the car. In order to have seen this his position must have been reversed. He would have been sleeping with his FEET toward the engine.

What! You missed this one! Better join the class.
